SELF-RATIONING OF GAS URGED BY HENDERSON

Asks 4 Gal. a Week Voluntary Limit.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—Price Administrator Leon Henderson tonight called for voluntary nationwide gasoline rationing, asking the 20 million automobile drivers in unrationed areas to place themselves on the same basic 4 gallons a week ration now in force in 17 eastern states.

Leon Henderson.

"We have got to become a nation of mileage cutters," Henderson asserted. "We've got to cut our mileage deep to keep moving toward victory instead of joyriding to defeat."

This means, Henderson stated, that persons whose essential vocational driving is 150 miles per month or less would be in the "A" category, limited to 240 miles, which includes 90 miles for family motoring.

Drivers whose necessary traveling exceeds 150 miles a month would fall in the "B" category, limiting themselves to a top of 470 miles of vocational driving and agreeing to share their cars with at least three other people.

"Very Few" in "C" Class.

Only a "very few" have "C" stickers, Henderson said.

These stickers indicate they are members of a highly essential profession or occupation, such as doctors, munitions plant workers, and employés in vital public utilities jobs whose normal driving exceeds 470 miles per month.

By complying with the voluntary rationing, he said, every driver will make an important contribution toward final victory over the axis. He added that success of the effort depends upon the character of the individual motorist and a thoro understanding that the nation does not have the rubber for any driving not concerned directly with the war effort.

Huge Waste Told.

"Today and every day that passes until the cut is made we Americans are wasting one billion tire miles in unnecessary driving," Henderson said. "That means we are unnecessarily wasting enough rubber to recap 200,000 tires—waste that can lick us in the kind of fight we are in, unless we stop wasting quickly.

"The time to start is now—today—because it will be several weeks before we can have the coupon books printed and distributed to local rationing boards."

President Roosevelt admitted yesterday that it will take some time to set up the OPA machinery for gasoline rationing which was recommended by the Baruch committee as a vital step in rubber conservation. Other recommendations of the committee, whose report blasted the administration's bungling of the entire rubber program, will begin to go into effect Monday.

With Mr. Roosevelt's approval, Donald M. Nelson, chief of the War Production board, will appoint a rubber administrator to take full charge of the many sided rubber situation. The special investigating committee, headed by Bernard M. Baruch, also called for a national speed limit of 35 mlies an hour, a limit on average annual mileage to 5,000, more rubber for the public thru the recapping of old tires, and voluntary tire conservation.

600,000 IN AEF, MORE ARE GOING, SAYS PATTERSON

Muskegon, Mich., Sept. 12 (AP).—Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, making a flying tour of Michigan war industries, told a gathering of war workers today that more than 600,000 men of armed forces now are overseas.

"That force will be doubled and doubled and doubled to the limit of our manpower until we defeat our enemies," he declared. "We will fight on to the finish and a victorious one." [President Roosevelt on Labor day disclosed that more than 500,000 American troops were overseas.]

Army Deserter Taken in West, with Two Girls

BULLETIN.

Santa Maria, Cal., Sept. 12 (AP).—A soldier giving the name Robert Bailey, 21, was arrested today as a suspect in the attack-slaying of two Kenosha, Wis., social workers. Police said Bailey admitted he was wanted in Wisconsin on a murder charge. They continued to question him about the social workers' deaths. With Bailey were two Anthon, Ia., girls about 17 years old, Alberta Coon and Pauline Conley. They were visiting an aunt of Miss Coon, Mrs. Cyril Simmeon. Simmeon, a former police officer, noticed Bailey was painting out the white side walls on the tires of the car he drove. Policemen Pat Higgenbotham and James Johnson said they found women's clothing in the car and cards bearing the name of Miss Neil John Petrangeli.

Tomah, Wis., Sept. 12 [Special].—Warrants accusing Robert Temple Bailey, 21 year old army deserter, of the first degree murder of two Wisconsin women welfare workers near here last Monday, were issued today by District Attorney Leo J. Goodman.

The warrants were issued after the federal bureau of investigation announced at St. Paul, Minn., that Bailey has been positively identified thru photographs as the man who cashed a check bearing the forged signature of Miss Neil Pietrangeli, 25, one of the slain women, at Le Sueur, Minn., Tuesday.

The fugitive was seen yesterday across a state line.

Federal Warrant Issued.

At the request of FBI men, United States Commissioner James J. McManamy of Madison, Wis., issued a federal warrant charging Bailey with transporting a stolen automobile across a state line.

Clinton Stein, agent in charge of the St. Paul FBI office, said the rape slayings were linked to Bailey thru an army serial number which Bailey exhibited to J. T. Peterson, cashier of the bank at Le Seuer, when he presented a $25 check signed with Miss Pietrangeli's name and his own.

Harry T. O'Connor, special agent in charge of the Milwaukee FBI office, said Bailey deserted from Fort Bragg, N. C., Sept. 1 after stealing an army revolver. Bailey, a plumber, enlisted in the army in July, 1940, at Montgomery, Ala. He is a native of Hattiesburg, Miss.

According to the FBI, Bailey previously deserted from Fort Knox, Ky., to join a circus and was recaptured in June, 1941, after breaking his leg in a circus performance at Fort Wayne, Ind. He served six months in the guardhouse and was restored to army duty last January. Before joining the army Bailey had been arrested for minor law violations at Fayetteville, Ark., and Clarksdale, Miss.

Fix Time of Shootings.

Coroner Walter J. Ninneman of Monroe county said here today that an investigation conducted by him produced information indicating Miss Pietrangeli and her companion, Miss Dorothy Baun, 32, were shot sometime between 9:30 p. m. and 10:45 p. m. last Monday.

Miss Pietrangeli was found early Tuesday in a dying condition on a highway near Tomah, and Miss Baun's body was found in a woods nearby. Both women had been shot several times and raped. They were en route to Sparta, Wis., from their homes in Kenosha.

MEN WITH DEFERMENT WARNED TO SUPPORT WAR EFFORT—OR ELSE

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—A warning that deferred draft registrants who failed to support the war effort would be reclassified immediately came today from selective service headquarters.

An order signed by Director Lewis B. Hershey and appearing in the Federal Register stated:

"Whenever the director of selective service advises a local board that a deferred registrant or a group of deferred registrants is not supporting or is adversely affecting the war effort or the national health, safety or interest, the local board shall immediately terminate the deferment and consider anew the classification of such registrant or registrants."

Draft officials made no explanation of the order's purpose but the edict was considered a part of the effort to spur war production thru tighter man power control.

THE CAUCASUS "AN ISLAND IN THE SEA OF HISTORY"

The Caucasus may suggest preconvention activity, but in reality it happens to be that section of country dividing Europe from Asia. It contains a mountain range running for 700 miles from Baku to Kerch.

Beyond the Caucasus are limitless bleak and barren steppes, and some Nogai Tatars. Very monotonous. Only a few oil fields here and there.

The Caucasus is very mountainous. In one space 10 miles square are 10 peaks over 14,000 feet high, Mt. Elburz is higher than any peak in Europe, and Mt. Kazbek is next.

Mt. Kazbek is where Prometheus is supposed to have been bound. He was one of the Titans. He was always friendly to mankind and interposed to protect them whenever Jupiter, alias Jove, alias Zeus, tried to put something over. He also taught them civilization and the arts. This peeved Jupiter. So Jupiter had Prometheus chained to a rock on the windward side of Mt. Kazbek, where a vulture preyed on his liver. Of course he was immortal, so his liver was renewed as fast as it was devoured, but this was only a doubtful satisfaction.

Now just as in a movie scenario, Prometheus possessed a secret involving Jupiter's throne. Had he revealed it, he would have won Jupiter's undying favor. But he wasn't that kind of an opportunist. He preferred to become the symbol of magnanimous strength, even at the cost of that liver business.

Nowadays, among the deep valleys flanking the great ramparts of the Caucasus, live hundreds of isolated tribes. A different language is spoken every 10 or 15 miles. Some of these people are descendants of Genghis Khan and Tamerlane. Others, it is said, treasure in their remote attics bits of armor and lances handed down by the Crusaders.

The little town of Mtsket, a former capital, dates back to Mtsketos, a great-great-great-grandson of Noah. From any street you can look south and see Mt. Ararat. Noah is supposed to have built the Ark somewhere around here, causing a lot of horse laughter at his expense. But he kept right on building it—so many cubits each day. When he appeared one day with all those animals, two by two, his neighbors must have cracked a lot of jokes at his choice of traveling companions. But Noah had the last laugh. Only he and his immediate family went aboard.

Georgian women are noted for their beauty, but most of the 2,000 native princes seem to marry American heiresses.

But in 1801 somebody in Russia must have caught sight of one of the Caucasian belles, and after 60 years of desperate struggle, the Caucasus became part of the Russian empire.

A Georgian military road leads from Tiflis to Vladikavkaz, past the ruined castle of the famous 12th century queen, Tamara, whose retainers were able to hold the pass against all comers; and past Dariel gorge, with walls 6,000 feet high.

Vladikavkaz was called just that when I was born there in 1906, but now it has become Ordzhonikidze after some doubtless deserving bolshevik. The Russians like to change names. Even Joseph Vissarionovich Dzugashvili, who was born in the little Caucasian town of Gori, changed his name to Stalin. Probably that was wise. No doubt he didn't think he could put Dzugashvili across.

By the time the curfew tolled the knell of parting day last evening winning plowmen in the 65th annual Wheatland plowing match were wending their way homeward with silver cups dangling from their tractors. Among them was Graeme Stewart of Oswego township, who won the championship contest by scoring 92¼ out of a possible 100 points.

And city dwellers among the crowd of 12,000 which attended the match on the farm of Glen Sprague, seven miles south of Naperville in Will county, still had not seen a horse.

There wasn't a horse drawn plow in the contest, altho the horse still is in good standing with the officials.

Operates 400 Acre Farm.

Champion Stewart, who is 36 years old, married, and operates a 400 acre farm, has won several laurels in other plowing contests. He placed third in the international plowing contest at Peterborough, Ont., Canada, in 1941 and the year before that was second in a state contest at Davenport, Ia.

Yesterday's match was little different from the others of the last few years except in one respect: Chicken dinner in the orchard was $1—25 cents higher than in the past. But the spectators said it was worth it.

Six judges picked the winner after measuring furrows with rulers, and squinting across the fields to determine which furrows were the straightest, the evenest, and the neatest.

Excitement in Beginning.

Plowmen who used single bottom plows were required to plow a half acre within three hours. Those who preferred two bottom plows had three hours in which to plow three-quarters of an acre. And those who thought they did their best work with three bottom plows had to plow three-quarters of an acre in two hours and 15 minutes.

The exciting part of a plowing match is the beginning, and not the finish. The first furrow is all important. Twenty-five of the 100 points are decided on that first furrow.

REDS KILL 10,000 NAZIS POUNDING AT STALINGRAD

MOSCOW, Sept. 13 [Sunday]—(AP).—The Russians have fallen back from one point southwest of Stalingrad before the massed blows of German tanks and motorized troops, but elsewhere the soviet legions are holding their own in bitter end fighting which has cost the Germans at least 10,000 men killed before the city in the last few days.

Another 5,000 German soldiers have been killed or wounded in sharp fighting on the Volkhov front southeast of Leningrad, where the Germans were reported hurled back.

The Russians revealed the first dent since Friday in their positions before Stalingrad in the following stark phrases in the midnight communique:

Halt Nazis West of City.

As the greatest and bloodiest battle of this war went into its 19th day, the Russians announced they again had stopped the Germans on the critical area west of the city, where the Germans advanced in frontal assaults last week until Friday.

Waves of German soldiers—the Russians said again the invaders were numerically superior to the defenders—dashed against the Russian defenses in continuous attacks without gaining ground, the communique revealed.

[The Germans said heavy fighting continued "within the fortifications" of Stalingrad but claimed no specific gains. Russian relief attacks were declared repulsed and Red supply lines were reported attacked heavily. The fall of the last fortress south of the Black sea base of Novorossisk was reported along with a break-thru of Russian positions along the Terek river near the Grozny oil fields.]

Southwest of Stalingrad, it was officially reported, 6,000 Germans have been "wiped out" in the last five days. West of Stalingrad about 4,000 Germans have been killed.

The army newspaper Red Star declared German losses at Stalingrad were the largest of the war.

The communique did not mention the northwest sector, where the Germans have increased their pressure in the last day or two.

Hurl Back Nazis in North.

With the city perilously besieged from three sides, it was disclosed that another area of sharp fighting has developed far to the north.

In the area of Sinyavino, a railway town on the west side of the Volkhov river below Leningrad, the Russians said the Germans have thrown in large forces of reserves but that all Nazi attacks were stopped and thrown back.

"The enemy lost in killed and wounded about 5,000 men," the communique said of this new battle area.

The sinking of an enemy submarine in the Barents sea was announced by the Russians. No details were given.

At the southern end of the front, in the Mozdok area where the snows of approaching winter already have fallen on the Caucasian mountains, the Russians said they were fighting the enemy on the southern back of a river [presumably the Terek].

The first snows of the Caucasus hampered operations of German Alpine troops and at one place the Russians said they surrounded and wiped out a group of 150.

"Soviet artillery men destroyed three mortar batteries and wiped out a company of enemy infantry," the communique said.

Reds Seize Towns.

Several more settlements were seized on the western front before Moscow and the Russians said they beat off a determined German attack on the outskirts of a big town. Of 90 German tanks that attacked, 49 were destroyed, the high command said.

Nothing was reported directly from Rzhev, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, where the Russians last were declared holding the northern outskirts.

Hungarian attacks in the Voronezh sector on the upper Don river were reported repulsed in a two day battle west of the river. The Germans apparently still occupy some positions close to the city and the Red army has been able to drive almost directly behind them.

New Solomons Raids Foiled; Bag 20 Planes

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados, Sept. 12 (AP).—An axis submarine entered Carlisle bay today and fired five torpedoes at vessels in the bay in the first attack of the war on this British West Indies island.

Shore batteries replied, but the submarine remained in the bay from 4:45 until 5:10 p. m., firing torpedoes at five minute intervals. A statement issued by the information officer said there were no casualties.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—Paying a high price in planes and pilots, the Japanese are still trying unsuccessfully to dislodge the American forces in the Solomons, the navy reported tonight, and losing better than one out of every five bombers they send over.

The Japanese sent two waves of 26 bombers and one of 27 against Guadalcanal on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. Of these 79 bombers, 15 were destroyed, along with 5 Zero fighters, bringing to 143 the number of aircraft the Japanese have lost in the Solomons fighting.

Text of Communique.

The navy communique said:

"1. The Japanese are continuing their determined efforts to dislodge American forces from the Gaudalcanal-Tulagi area of the Solomon Islands.

"2. Enemy air raids against our positions in this area continue. On Sept. 9 26 enemy bombers escorted by Zero fighters attacked our installations at Guadalcanal. United States aircraft shot down five bombers and four fighters.

"On Sept. 10 27 enemy bombers attacked Guadalcanal and four of the Japanese planes were shot down.

"On Sept. 11 26 enemy bombers with fighter escort again attacked the Guadalcanal installations. Six bombers and one fighter were shot down by United States planes.

"3. Enemy destroyers have shelled our positions at night but no damage has resulted.

Japs Landing Troops.

"On Sept. 11 our Douglas 'Dauntless' dive bombers attacked enemy installations on Gizo Island in the New Georgia group. A small enemy surface craft was sunk and considerable damage was done to buildings and installations.

"5. United States marines, assisted by dive bombers and fighters, continued to seek out and engage enemy troop units in the interior of Guadalcanal. The enemy has reinforced and supplied the units by means of small craft which approach the shore under cover of darkness. Despite opposition to these landings it has not been possible to prevent them entirely."

'Let Roosevelt Mediate India Row'—Briton

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP).—Indian proposals that President Roosevelt be invited to mediate the troublesome Indian problem found echo in Britain today, now that the way to direct negotiation apparently has been closed by Prime Minister Churchill's sharp criticism of the All-India Congress party's disobedience campaign.

"We should swallow our pride and invite the President of the United States to arbitrate on India," the Labor peer, Lord Strabolgi, said in an address at Basingstoke.

He took cognizance of Churchill's suggestion that a Japanese fifth column might be working in India by telling Labor party members: "I fear a repetition of what happened in Burma where important elements turned to the Japanese after being rebuffed in London."

"See for Yourself" Plea.

NEW DELHI, India, Sept. 12 (AP).—A special committee of the Hindu Mahasabha, third largest political party of India, proposed today that Prime Minister Churchill and representatives of the United States, soviet Russia, and China visit India to "see things for themselves" in her campaign for freedom.

Nationalist members of the Indian legislature expressed disappointment that Churchill had offered no immediate plan for ending the dispute between the British government and the All-India Congress party.

Official sources said major damage had been done railways during recent disturbances in Bihar province, including derailments, the killing of train crews, and the burning of stations.

JAPS' DEFEAT IN SOLOMONS TOLD BY EYEWITNESS

96 Planes Lost, Many Ships Damaged.

(The first eye-witness story of the Japanese counter-attack on the Solomon Islands, described as the greatest air victory of the war for the United States, is related in this delayed dispatch from Clark Lee, Associated Press correspondent in the islands. The navy had merely announced briefly on Aug. 25 that the Jap attack had been repulsed and that American planes had damaged six ships. The following day the navy reported that six additional ships had been damaged and that 21 enemy planes were shot down. Lee says it was the biggest air battle of the war and that 96 Jap planes were shot down.)

BY CLARK LEE.

AT SEA WITH THE U. S. FLEET OFF SOLOMON ISLANDS, Aug. 25 [Delayed]—(AP).—American planes partially smashed and turned back a large seaborne Japanese force attempting to recapture the Solomon Islands in a two day battle yesterday and today. It was the greatest air victory of the war for us.

As at the battle of the Coral sea and the battle of Midway, all the fighting was done by airplanes. When first sighted, the opposing carrier groups were miles apart.

The Japanese were turned back as in the Coral sea battle, and their forces were dealt staggering punishment, but not completely knocked out. At this writing a fight is still in prospect.

The Japanese planned to land thousands of troops under warship and air bombardment. I watched the attack on our forces from the bridge of a warship.

American Losses Small.

Many Japanese ships were damaged, including an aircraft carrier, two destroyers and one submarine, and in addition to 96 planes shot down by our planes and antiaircraft, it is believed many more Japanese aircraft were lost in night landings or failed to return to their carriers.

The carrier, which was attacked by American navy dive bombers and torpedo planes, was first identified as the 7,600 ton Ryujo, smallest and one of the oldest of the enemy's regular carriers. This identification, however, was indefinite. Near misses were scored on two of the enemy's largest carriers by navy and army bombers, and both probably were damaged.

Our total losses, infinitesimal compared with the enemy's, were one ship damaged and five navy and three marine corps pilots missing.

Third Round in Battle.

This two day fight was the third round in the battle of the Solomons, the first having been the marines' occupation of Guadalcanal and Tulagi Islands Aug. 7 and 8 under the cover of aerial bombing and warship shelling, and the second a cruiser battle Aug. 9.

The Japanese force in yesterday's and today's battle consisted of two main task forces: one containing carriers with battleships, heavy and light cruisers and destroyers, and the other centering on a small carrier escorted by one heavy cruiser and two destroyers. In addition, there were several other groups of transports under warship protection.

Our aircraft made four separate attacks. The largest was by our carrier planes on a Japanese carrier. The planes also attacked two other Japanese warship forces while navy and marine dive bombers from Guadalcanal battered the separate group of Japanese warships and transports this morning.

Shoot Down 21 Planes.

The battle started with an attack on Guadalcanal airfield yesterday afternoon by Japanese carrier planes

COL. M'CORMICK REVIEWS FIGHTS FOR FREE PRESS

Exists Only in America, Radio Audience Told.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, in an address last night, reviewed efforts to control the press from the time of King Henry VII. of England to that of Huey Long and the popular struggle to uphold freedom of printing. That right, he asserted, today exists only in the United States.

Col. McCormick's address, a feature of the America Loves a Melody hour, was broadcast by W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.

TEXT OF ADDRESS

The text of the address follows:

"You will be hearing a good deal about freedom of the press in the coming months.

"Freedom of the press is simply the right of any one to print or have printed whatever he wants without interference by the government. This freedom exists only in the United States of America. In Great Britain and the dominions, such freedom of speech and of press as had been achieved was destroyed by legislation some years ago, and these countries have no constitutions to protect the citizens against the oppression of the legislature and the courts.

"The first amendment to the Constitution of the United States says:

"'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.'

"Every state in the Union has a similar protection for its citizens.

Right Won by Long Fight.

"Freedom of speech, and later of the press, was not one of the early rights of man. It was only achieved after centuries of oppression and rebellion.

"Only three legal methods of suppressing freedom of the press have been found thruout the centuries, but ingenuity has dressed these methods up in many suits of many colors.

"The first method of suppression was invented by King Henry VII. of England, who put the press under domination of the Court of the Star Chamber, which required the owners of presses to take out licenses and subjected them to forfeiture and prosecution.

Minnesota Law Nullified.

"When this villainous court was abolished and the head of King Charles I. cut off, the right to license was transferred to a political officer. This tyranny continued until 1694, when licensing was abolished, not to reappear until in 1925 the doctrine of censorship was revived in the state of Minnesota, which provided that a court sitting without a jury could enjoin the publication of a newspaper which he found to be scandalous. This vicious doctrine was upheld by the Supreme court of Minnesota, but was outlawed by the great Supreme court presided over by Mr. Chief Justice Hughes.

"In the year 1933, under the NRA act, another effort was made to license the press of America. It was successfully resisted by courageous publishers.

"When licensing expired in England, an ingenious judge invented an offense called 'libel upon government,' whereby any one printing anything that the government did not like could be prosecuted. A charge called 'the information' avoided the necessity of indictment by a grand jury and opened the way to trumped-up prosecution. A judge, not a jury, decided whether or not the article was libelous and imposed terrible punishments, including mayhem and hanging.

Doctrine Revived and Condemned.

"In the year 1792 the English parliament required that the jury—not a judge who was part of the government—should be judge of the libel, and in the year 1868 the doctrine of libel upon government was repealed. It was thrown out of America by the Revolution and was not revived until 1920, when the corporation counsel of the city of Chicago disinterred it in the famous case of the city of Chicago vs. the Tribune company . . . but the Supreme court of Illinois held that libel upon government could not be revived under any pretext.

"In England, after control of the press by censorship and by libel upon government had failed, a successful effort to curb the press was devised—the famous taxes upon knowledge, which were so heavy that newspapers could not exist. Taxes upon knowledge were introduced in this country in 1774 by the ever infamous stamp act, providing taxes both upon the circulation and the advertising of newspapers.

Press Freed by Revolution.

"This act was the proximate cause of our Revolutionary war—so does great good arise from great evil.

"The Revolution freed the press in America, but in 1798 congress recreated libel upon government by enacting the infamous alien and sedition law, after which fixed juries, directed by corrupted judges, sent editors to prison for expressing their political opinions. The law was repealed in 1801 in deference to overwhelming public demand.

"The principle was revived in this country by the notorious Huey Long, who sought to oppress the newspapers which opposed him, but this effort also was outlawed by the Supreme court of the United States.

"In reporting these cases to the American Newspaper Publishers association six years ago, I used the following language:

"'In phrasing the first amendment to the Constitution, the framers of the Bill of Rights had in mind every invasion that had already been made upon the freedom of the press, and, realizing that the ingenuity of men in government is infinite, they did not confine their prohibitions to the evils that had gone before, but used language broad enough to include any effort that could ever be made to limit the freedom of utterance.

"'We will say once more that if the framers of the Constitution had merely wished to protect the press against those forms of abridgment which had taken place in the past and about which they knew, those masters of the English language would have used the appropriate phrases, but, knowing that the mind of man is fertile in expedients and feeling confident that new methods of abridging the freedom of the press would be devised, they created a prohibition absolutely unlimited, and under that prohibition we stand.'"

SAN CARLO TENOR HEARD

Eugene Conley, youthful tenor of the San Carlo Opera company, and Marion Claire, soprano, were the stars of the musical program. They sang Jerome Kern's "The Song Is You" as a duet, and each sang several solos. The W-G-N orchestra played Romberg's "A Windy Day at the Battery" and Ravel's "Bolero," and the orchestra and chorus presented a Kern medley, "Why Do I Love You?"

London 'Paradise' to Midwest Yanks on Leave from Iceland

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 2 [By Air Mail].—America's soldiers, settling down to army life overseas to await the day when they get into the fighting in earnest, have much to say of their interests and impressions, with here and there a few kicks.

Many of the boys here now are on several weeks' furlough from Iceland, and most of them find England, particularly London, a welcome change from Reykjavik. I found some of these boys at the Washington club, favorite hangout of the Yanks in London. Corp. John G. Killer of Detroit, Mich.; Corp. Joseph J. Gray of Ashland, Pa.; and Staff Sergt. Thomas Swartz of Mason Town, Pa., said they felt that after their stay in Iceland they would like to paint this old burg a rather vivid red.

"This place is paradise compared with Iceland," Cray exclaimed. Sergt. Swart chimed in with: "But we would rather have one letter from home than $1,000 in spending money!"

Get German Music.

"All the recreation facilities in Iceland are provided by the army authorities," Cray continued, "with the exception of an occasional dance in town. The amusements include all the latest movies, swimming, and all American sports. We can also get short wave radio programs from America and Britain, but these are mainly news broadcasts and for music the boys tune in to the German short wave stations. We get all the latest tunes that way.

"We also get Lord Haw-Haw [German propaganda broadcaster] and he's funnier than Bob Hope. We also see the latest movies long before they're shown in London. We have two newspapers on the island—the weekly 'White Falcon,' published by the boys themselves, and the four page 'Daily Post,' put out by the British authorities for British service men on the island."

Meets Chicago Yanks.

At the Red Cross services club in London I came across some of the Yanks who took part in the commando raid on Dieppe, France. Among them were: Corporals Franklin Koons, Sioux City, Ia., and W. Brady, Grand Falls, N. D., and Sergeants K. Stemson of Russell, Minn., and A. J. Szima of Dayton, O.

Others I met included: Sergt. William J. Kisshen, Pvt. U. Karl, Pvt. Albert Korsgaard, Sergt. Fox, and Pvt. V. Luftus, all of Chicago; Sergt. Charles Raffery, Mount Carmel, Ill.; Corp. Vernon D. Shalls, Highland Park, Ill.; Pvt. John D. Quirey, Mendon, Ill.; Pvt. John Jaskolowki, Detroit, Mich.; Pvt. John W. Berg, Milwaukee, Wis.; Pvt. W. S. Lardarant, Melvina, Wis.; Sergt. Arthur S. Ditch, Rapid City, S. C., and Sergt. Oscar Harding, Dupree, S. D.

Visitor Finds Bombs Have Hurt Only Surface.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON [by airmail].—One's first impression of wartime Britain are difficult of analysis. But of one thing the visitor is certain. This is England, treasure house of history and literature, the exact reality for every image of this stubborn island created in the mind of the traveler from mid-America.

Up from the seacoast town, past heaps of churning industry, you saw hedge lined meadows carefully pocked with stone piles and other obstacles to prevent enemy plane landings. And from the windows of the speeding London train you saw always at least one plane, and usually several, wheeling in the air.

Calls Them by Name.

Across the aisle the Britisher who had been your fellow trans-Atlantic plane passenger glanced briefly at each and casually ticked off its make: Spitfire, Hurricane, and so on. Blackout curtains hung by the windows and were soon to become as familiar as your own living room furniture.

At the seaport there was evidence of enemy bombing raids in the shattered hulks of homes and shops. But nothing like you had expected, and nothing at all like the claims in Nazi propaganda. In fact, it wasn't the bomb damage that drew your attention, but the coveys of young women pushing baby carriages.

And in London you noticed at once that the street were filled, not with casually loitering people, but with men and women, seemingly intent on definite business. There were many men in civilian clothes, doubtless all occupied in vital industriees.

An International Armory.

But there were also the military uniforms of the Briton and the American, and the insignia of other fighting men from all of the united nations. Sprinkled in among this swarm of khaki, tan, and blue were the countless uniforms of the women of England, the WAAFs, the WRENs, the ATs, and the others who make up the supplimentary defense forces.

And the taxi drivers. An American, accustomed to the often hard boiled Chicago cabby in his brilliant yellow or green hack, is at first amused at London's army of old men and their quaint looking taxis which resemble nothing so much as pushed together town cars.

Then he soon discovers that these oldsters can get the traveler about town easily and speedily, and that their odd little taxis are so constructed that they can turn about in their own length.

War Symbols Abundant.

Everywhere there is ample evidence that Britain is at war. Sandbags are piled high around many public buildings. Others have been knicked, hit, or even gutted by enemy bombs. And altho some of the most badly hit areas are in the East End, in the working class district, the reporter is again surprised at the relatively small damage done by the big blitz raids of 1940.

He finds, too, that the Briton is proud of those raids, in a quiet way, proud of the way that the average man and woman stood the terrific day and night pasting by bombs and fire. They talk of the blitz, but not often, preferring to think of the havoc being wrought on German cities by American Flying Fortresses and British bombers.

They'd rather talk, too, of food, which is rationed. For a fresh egg or a melon you could name your own price and get it. Meat and fish are scarce. A restaurant will let you have one, or possibly two, paper-thin slices of butter, and every dinner is limited to three courses.

True to Their Tea.

Coffee? Britains still drink tea and haven't yet learned the art of making good coffee, altho if one pays extra he can get "filtered" coffee which seems to go down the gullet better.

Everywhere there are pushcarts peddling what little fruit is available, usually the small sour English apple, occasionally some pears, and soon there will be prunes. Oranges and other citrus fruit are, of course, unheard of while the tomato, too, is a rarity.

While from nearby tables in the well filled hotel restaurant rises the murmur of British voices, a low hum of clipped accents, gives the visitor an odd impression that he is sitting on the stage during a British drawing room comedy.

And finally among these first impressions there is Hannen Swaffer, dean of London journalists, 40 years on Fleet street, deferred to by dukes and cabinet ministers. A smoldering cigaret clinging to his lips, ashes flecking his vest, black stock at the neck, gray hair flying in a Lloyd George mane, "Swaff," the most feared and respected of English news writers sits in a corner of the lounge, expounding on the faults of this or that minister, or explaining the strength of native British character.

For a moment you might be back in Shakesperian England, except outside the night is ink dark for the city is blacked out, it is 1942, and this is war.

MAYWOOD SHOWS SONS IT WON'T FORGET HEROISM

30,000 See Ceremonies of Bataan Day.

BY JUNE GESERICK.

The memory of the gallantry with which Proviso township's heroes, 137 of whom were killed or captured while fighting with the 192nd tank battalion on Bataan, was in the hearts and on the tongues, of the more than 30,000 persons who gathered in Maywood yesterday to participate in American Bataan day observances.

For two hours floats and marching units paraded along Fifth avenue from Chicago avenue to Harrison avenue to the cheers of spectators who lined both sides of the line of march. Most of those present knew at least one of the boys, all former national guard members, on the Bataan casualty list.

Families in Places of Honor.

From the reviewing stand ,in the places of honor, the families of the heroes witnessed the "thank you" of their townspeople to the men who gave their all to defend their country. There were some tears, but most of the wives and the mothers of those lost on the Philippine peninsula watched the tribute to their soldiers dry eyed and with pride.

Highlight of Bataan day activities was the unveiling at noon in the Maywood theater of a mural of the 192d battalion. Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois was the chief speaker.

"Service Will Live."

"This mural," he said, "could be defaced by time, but the heroic service performed by those to whom it is a tribute will live on, and generations to come will know a better world because of what they did."

"We have suffered reverses," he continued, "but the heroism of the men who defended Bataan and Corregidor and our other outposts will endure forever, giving new inspiration and new courage to free men everywhere."

Hear Sen. Brooks.

Another feature of Bataan day was an address by Sen. Wayland Brooks last night in the Proviso Township High school stadium.

"Maywood tonight exemplifies the true American spirit that will win the war," he said.

"As long as we have the spirit; as long as we realize that the liberty we enjoy was paid for in blood, was paid for in sacrifice, we'll fight until victory is ours," he continued.

"There's no turning back," Brooks declared. "There is only victory on our road and we're on our way. I congratulate you, Maywood, for taking your place in seeing that liberty does not die."

A breakfast, sponsored by the American Legion and the American Legion auxiliary for 56 draftees who left yesterday for service with the army, started the day's activities.

2,000 in Kiddie Parade.

Shortly before noon, 2,000 children from grade schools thruout Proviso township, took part in a kiddie parade down Fifth avenue, from St. Charles road to Washington boulevard.

High ranking army officers participated in the awarding of a silver star to Irvin Chapman of Wheeler, Ill., nearest relative of Donald V. Chapman, army air force corporal, who was killed at Pearl Harbor, later in the afternoon at Maywood park. Maj. Gen. George Grunert, who came to Maywood from Washington, D. C., where he is stationed, made the posthumous award for gallantry in action and bravery under fire while repairing a grounded airplane during the Japanese attack on Hickam field last Dec. 7.

Jewish residents of Maywood pledged purchase of $16,000 in war bonds.

Recover 4 Bodies from Fortress Crash in Spain

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch from Madrid said today the bodies of four American airmen were recovered from wreckage of their flying fortress which crashed yesterday on Spanish soil between Tarifa and Algeciras, near Gibraltar. Reuters, quoting a Spanish news agency account, said the plane's cargo of bombs exploded when it fell on a farm.

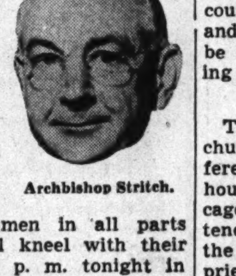
STRITCH INVITES ALL CHICAGO TO PRAY FOR YANKS

Holy Hour Service to Be Held Tonight.

Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, in a radio address yesterday, invited all Chicago to join in prayers for their men in the nation's services at the holy hour tonight in Soldiers' field. Preparations have been made to accommodate 150,000 persons at the gigantic prayer meeting.



Archbishop Stritch.

Chicago service men in all parts of the world will kneel with their chaplains at 9:50 p. m. tonight in spiritual unity with homefolks.

The ceremonies will begin at 7 p. m. and entrance gates at the field will be open at 4:30 p. m. A portion of the program will be broadcast by W-G-N from 9 to 10 p. m.

Archbishop to Bless Flag.

For those who have lost their lives in the war, the archbishop will bless a gold star flag and the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Daniel Byrnes, general chairman of the Holy Name societies' committee on the holy hour, will announce the number of Holy Name men who have been killed or who are missing. The archbishop issued a special invitation to gold star mothers to attend the holy hour with its memorial service.

In Archbishop Stritch's invitation yesterday he stressed the view that our armed forces would be futile things for the right unless assisted mightily by Almighty God.

"It is not strange that these days in our needs, we in some extraordinary way beg of God to give us, our country, victory in a peace of justice and charity. We want our country to be His blessed instrument in bringing to all the world true peace."

Defense Workers to Pray.

Three days of prayer in all 421 churches of the archdiocese were offered in preparation for the holy hour. Defense workers of the Chicago area who will be unable to attend the holy hour, also will kneel at the suffrages. Nuns in convents and priests in communities or religious orders are also to join in saying special prayers with the Chicago service men.

ODT ORDER SETS UP DRASTIC RULE OVER ALL TRUCKS

Certificate Blanks Go to Owners Sept. 23.

The short time that will lapse before the government takes full control of the use of trucks and other commercial vehicles was emphasized yesterday when Harry L. Gormley, regional director for the Office of Defense Transportation, announced that application blanks for certificates of war necessity will be mailed to vehicle owners beginning Sept. 23.

Full texts of the ODT order, which had been summarized in Washington news dispatches, have reached Chicago and brought out in full force the realization that under it the government in effect can confiscate any commercial vehicle or specify any changes it wishes in the use of rolling property, without the consent of the owner.

Required After Nov. 15.

The certificates are in effect an additional license, without which the owners of trucks and operators of taxicabs, hearses, ambulances, or other motor vehicles for hire may not run on the streets and highways after Nov. 15. Gormley said that the certificates would specify the maximum mileage the vehicles may be operated and also will fix minimum loads that may be carried.

The Office of Price Administration added an announcement that possession of a certificate will be a "must" for any truck or commercial vehicle owner who tries to qualify for tires or recapping under the rationing program, altho the certificate itself carries no priority privileges.

Called Essential to War.

The order, one of the most drastic that has come out of the war effort, is based, according to ODT, on the desire to "providently utilize vital transportation equipment" and "is essential to the successful prosecution of the war." No motor vehicles except motorcycles and passenger cars for noncommercial uses are exempt. Newspaper trucks and hearses are on the same footing, unless exceptions are made later.

It has been reported that the board of directors of the American Newspaper publishers' association, at a meeting to be held Sept. 22 in New York, is expected to look into the order to determine whether its enforcement would constitute an infringement on the traditional freedom of the press, guaranteed in the constitution.

Existing Contract No Bar.

The control feature of the order reads in part: "Whenever the ODT shall deem it advisable, any person having possession or control of any commercial vehicle shall, notwithstanding any contract, lease, or other commitment. . . . cause such vehicle to be operated in such manner, for such purpose and between such points as the ODT shall from time to time direct, and to be leased or rented by any such person to such person or persons, except by a person transporting property in a commercial motor vehicle for compensation to a person not engaged in such transportation, as the ODT shall from time to time direct."

It is specified that where no agreement on the compensation is reached when ODT exercises its control powers, ODT will set the fair rate justified by the service.

This provision has been interpreted as giving the Office of Defense transportation authority to take commercial vehicles away from anybody and order them into any service it wishes to forward.

To make sure that there is no evasion of the rules laid down by ODT, the order instructs each operator affected to keep a weekly record of the work performed by each vehicle and such other records as the ODT may require.

Another part of the order directs that vehicles given certificates must undergo periodic inspections by agents of the Office of Price administration, who will determine whether their tires are being properly and efficiently used.

Girls Try New "Standsit" Seats

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Jeanette Pederson (left) of Minneapolis, Minn., and Vera Wheeler of Kansas City, Mo., both federal employes in Washington, D. C., demonstrate the latest device to squeeze a few more persons into the crowded capital. These "standsit" seats are spaced 18 inches apart, 10 to 14 inches closer than is customary, and are said to increase the capacity of buses and streets cars from 25 to 40 per cent.

NEW STYLE BUS PACKS 'EM IN SPOON FASHION

'Stand-Sit' Gadget Boosts Capacity 25 Pct.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—A new wartime wrinkle designed to keep overcrowded bus and street car passengers off each other's feet will be introduced shortly to harassed straphangers in the capital, it was announced today. It is to be known in the history of the war on the home front as the "stand sit" seat.

The gadget will be tried out on one bus and one street car as a space saver and customers will have a chance to express their reaction on cards. The Office of Defense Transportation said the device should increase "seating" capacity 25 to 40 per cent.

For example, officials said, women with picture hats may be forced to remove them as in the movies. Turning the pages of a newspaper will not be easy. In short, it was explained, knee and elbow space will be at a premium.

"It's like sitting on a theater seat when it's up," said one spokesman.

"It's like sitting on a rail fence with your arms on your knees," said another. "The idea is to fit everyone spoon fashion on the crowded vehicles."

The device will consist of a form molded plywood seat with a back support reaching up to the shoulders. There will be two rails in front of the seat, enabling the victim to put his feet on the floor or on one of the rails, according to his height. Seats will face the same as now, the difference being that passengers will be more nearly upright.

BROOKS INDORSED IN RESOLUTION ANSWERING SLUR

League Asks War Records of Kelly and McKeough.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 12 [Special].—Sen. Wayland Brooks [R., Ill.] was given a ringing indorsement for reëlection in a resolution drafted tonight for presentation tomorrow at closing sessions of the annual convention of the Illinois Republican Service Men's league.

Sen. Wayland Brooks.

William R. McCauley of Olney, chairman of the resolutions committee, said the resolution will contain a detailed refutation of attacks on Brooks made here Thursday by the Democratic state convention.

"We will answer Mayor Kelly's statement that Brooks is not the right kind of a fellow to serve when a peace treaty is being written," McCauley declared. "They said Brooks was Munich minded. We will point out that he is Belleau Wood minded, and then we will ask Mayor Kelly and Raymond S. McKeough, who are attacking Sen. Brooks' Americanism, where they were in 1917 and 1918." McKeough is the Democratic nominee for senator.

Record to Be Cited.

McCauley said the committee, recalling that Brooks was the first chairman of the league 15 years ago, devoted itself with purposeful enthusiasm to drafting a resolution stressing the senator's World war record. The blasts loosed at Brooks by Democratic politicians Thursday have left the veterans who remember his wartime service angry.

The resolution will call attention to the general desirability of having peace treaties written by men who have had actual fighting experience and consequently understand the cost of war, McCauley said.

The platform adopted by the Republican convention in August will be indorsed in its entirety in another resolution to be offered tomorrow, it was learned, and other resolutions will commend the record of Gov. Dwight H. Green and all other Republican state officers.

Veterans' Benefits Discussed.

A rap at Democratic administration of veterans' affairs is scheduled to be taken in another resolution approved by the committee. A section of this resolution reads:

"Since the Civil war, all beneficial legislation for veterans and their dependents has been passed by Republican congresses and signed by Republican Presidents.

"The record of the Democratic party is best illustrated by the economy act of 1933, forced thru congress by the President, as a result of which thousands of disabled veterans received cuts in their compensation, disability allowance was taken from them, and thousands of beds were taken from sick veterans."

Novotny Election Likely.

Indications were that Joseph F. Novotny will be unopposed for election tomorrow as the league's new state chairman. Thomas A. Patrick, secretary of the league's Cook county council, is scheduled to be chosen executive secretary and David L. Shillinglaw is slated for treasurer.

The Cook county delegation, which is under instructions to support Novotny, is headed by William Glenn Suthers, the newly elected chairman of the Cook county council; Patrick, and Daniel H. Leeds, treasurer.

The delegation is backing Patrick, William M. Devine, Arthur G. Poorman, Phil W. Collins, and Russell H. Morrison for election to vacancies on the state executive committee.

How They Stand on Willkie.

Asked about sentiment of the league toward Wendell Willkie, McCauley said there will be no "Willkieism" in any of the resolutions and it is unlikely Willkie's name will be mentioned. He quoted a remark by one veteran at one of the afternoon sessions.

"This man," McCauley said, "said he was for Willkie before Philadelphia and that he has been on his knees ever since asking for forgiveness."

Sen. Brooks, Gov. Green, and Speaker Elmer J. Schnackenberg will speak tomorrow.

DEMOCRATS SELECT SCOTT OF GENEVA FOR CIRCUIT COURT RACE

James Herrington Scott of Geneva was nominated for one of the two vacancies on the 16th judicial Circuit court bench by the Democratic nominating convention at Geneva yesterday.

The Republicans had nominated Charles A. O'Connor, Aurora, a former state's attorney, and County Judge Harry W. McEwen, DeKalb, for the two positions, which were vacated by elevation of Judge William J. Fulton, Sycamore, to the Illinois Supreme court and resignation of Judge Frank W. Shepherd, Elgin, because of ill health.

The new judges will be chosen at a special election in connection with the general election Nov. 3. The judicial district consists of Kane, Kendall, De Kalb, and Du Page counties.

ILLINOIS G. O. P. SERVICE GROUP IN CONVENTION

The Cook county delegation to the Illinois Republican Service Men's convention, which opened in Springfield yesterday, was headed by the newly elected chairman of the Cook county council, William Glenn Suthers, Secretary Thomas A. Patrick, and Treasurer Daniel H. Lewis.

The instructions of the local delegates were to support Joseph F. Novotny for state chairmen, State Sen. William G. Knox for alternate national committeeman and William M. Devine for state veterans' director.

The delegation also will back Patrick, Devine, Arthur G. Poorman, Phil W. Collins, and Russell H. Morrison for election to vacancies on the state executive committee.

Income Tax Collector Urges Payments by Mail

Carter H. Harrison, collecter of internal revenue, appealed yesterday to income tax payers in this district to pay their tax instalments by mail. He said that long lines of taxpayers, seeking to pay before the deadline of midnight, Tuesday, are cluttering the federal building.

REGISTER, VOTE, MOTTO OF G. O. P. WOMEN IN STATE

Two paramount duties of citizenship, those of registering and voting, will be emphasized at the convention of the Federation of Illinois Women's Republican clubs in Springfield, Sept. 28 and 29.

"It is with grave responsibilities in mind that the federation approaches this convention," said Mrs. W. G. Suthers, president of the organization. "The keynote will be 'register and vote' for fearless leaders who will bring us to a lasting and effective peace."

Getting the names of all qualified men and women on the pollbooks will be stressed this year because permanent registration now is in effect thruout the state. This is a prerequisite for voting in the general election on Nov. 3.

Sen. Wayland Brooks will address a convention dinner Monday, Sept. 28, and Gov. Dwight H. Green will speak at the official luncheon the following day. Miss Marion Martin, assistant chairman of the Republican national committee, also will have an important place on the program.

BRITISH FORCES NEARING CAPITAL OF MADAGASCAR

French Say They Inflict 'Very Heavy Losses.'

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP).—British forces pushing inland from the Majunga landing on Madagascar were reported only 70 miles from Tananarive, the island capital, today after a 130 mile advance, but French reports said "the enemy" had been engaged with "very heavy losses" and that the going would be tougher over 200 intervening barriers before the capital.

The "considerable progress" reported by the first communique from the British East African command said the drive had carried to the great bridge over the Betsiboka river, but that a concurrent overland advance from the north had been slowed by the French destruction of bridges.

The Vichy troops, mostly concentrated outside the capital, made their stand at the confluence of the Ikopa and Betsiboka rivers, where the British must turn up the Ikopa valley to reach Tananarive by the best route, the French said.

Still Fighting, Say French.

The first battle was joined yesterday near Maevatanana, some 90 miles down the road from Majunga, where the British made one of their three major west coast landings Thursday and advanced swiftly against negligible opposition.

A broadcast from Tananarive, heard at Port Louis on the British Island of Mauritius east of Madagascar, was less sanguine than the reports from Vichy, declaring the French "still were resisting" at 9:30 a. m. today and "at 3:30 p. m. a detachment of our troops still is holding out at Maevatanana."

"The British will have to overcome some 200 barriers stretched across their path between Maevatanana and Tananarive," this communiquee said.

The new operations began only two days ago with naval, aerial, and landing exploits concentrated on three or more points on the west coast of the island facing East Africa across Mozambique channel. Simultaneously, the British at Diego Suarez [which they seized late in May] renewed their overland drive southward.

Destroyed Bridges Delay Troops.

A communique today from Gen. Sir William Platt of the British East African command reported "considerable progress" inland and told of negligible opposition, which included some machine gun fire with no casualties resulting. The communique also said:

"Yesterday the southernmost columns, from Morondava, reached the vicinity of Mahaho, where operations are continuing successfully.

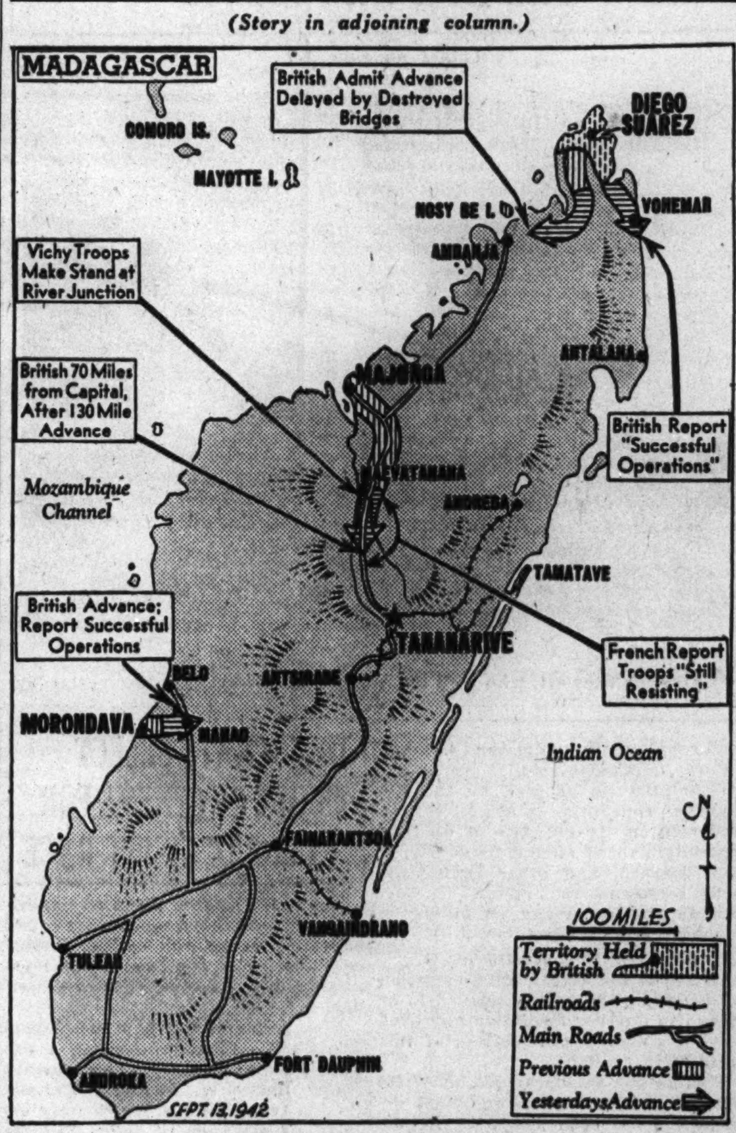
"On the road from Majunga to Tananarive, our troops reached the great bridge over the Betsiboka river, 130 miles from Majunga.

"The southward advance of our columns down the west coast [from Diego Suarez] was delayed thruout the day by destroyed bridges, but by evening we were within 20 miles of Ambanja. [Reports on Friday said Ambanja had been captured, but these apparently were in error.]

"During the day we also occupied Vohémar, on the northeast coast, without opposition."

Advance on Madagascar Capital

(Story in adjoining column.)



Arrows show direction and approximate progress of the British drives into interior of Madagascar.

20 Croats Reported Slain for Death of Nazi Soldier

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 12 (AP).—A Zagreb dispatch to the newspaper Neue Zuercher Zeitung today said 20 Croat hostages, seized after an attack last month on two German soldiers, had been executed following the death of one of the Nazis. The perpetrators of the attack were said to be at large.

THIEVES STEAL SIX INNER TUBES.

Burglars yesterday broke into the garage of Ben Raffanti in the rear of his home at 3831 Addison street, and stole six inner tubes, a lawn mower, and a shotgun.

BELIEVE FRENCH WHO SLEW JUDGE ARE TERRORISTS

NANTES, France, Sept. 12 (AP).—Gunmen who killed a judge and made off with a defendant on trial for terrorism here Thursday in a "wild west" shooting affair probably were members of the famed terrorist "special organization," authorities here said today.

The prefecture of the Lower Loire department said the 26 year old defendant was a member of this organization and had participated in seven terrorist attacks before he was seized at his home along with an arms cache of two automatic rifles, a dozen grenades, and five pistols.

In a roundup on Aug. 30, 144 alleged members of the Nantes branch of the "special organization" were arrested. Among them were two captains and three lieutenants of the French army and 42 Spanish Republican veterans.

URGE REPORTERS NOT TO GUESS ON A SECOND FRONT

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP).—The official view was made known today that speculation by newspaper correspondents on second front operations should be extremely guarded while the united nations are preparing for an eventual assault upon Hitler's Europe.

There was no suggestion that second front talk would be forbidden entirely, but one high source urged that there be no attempt by the press to forecast future military operations.

BRITISH BATTLE AXIS PATROLS ON EGYPTIAN FRONT

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 12 (AP).—Battles between British and enemy patrols and artillery yesterday and last night on the Egyptian front were reported by British headquarters today. In an increase in enemy air activity over the battle areas at least three enemy aircraft were downed and many others were damaged.

Italy Claims Heavy Tank Toll.

ROME, Sept. 12 [from Italian broadcasts]—(AP).—The Italian high command reported stepped-up artillery fire on the El Alamein front in its communique today and said that in the first 10 days of September the allied forces lost 170 tanks and armored cars on the desert front. [There have been no allied reports to support these Italian figures. Axis losses were not given.]

Four allied fighter planes were shot down by Italian planes and two more were brought down by German fighters, the communique said. Three other allied planes were destroyed on a British airfield, it was reported. One Italian plane was reported missing. An Italian destroyer was said to have sunk a British submarine in the Mediterranean.

AXIS REINFORCES TO AVERT RAIDS ON AEGEAN ISLES

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Sept. 11.—[Delayed]—(AP).—Travelers arriving from the Balkans reported today that Germany is heavily reinforcing her air force in the Eastern Mediterranean, apparently because of uneasiness over a possible British move to recapture some of the Aegean islands.

[The Italian high command reported on Aug. 31 that the British made a lightning commando-like raid Aug. 29 upon the small Mediterranean island of Antikythera, between Crete and Greece, which might have contributed to Hitler's and Mussolini's uneasiness.]

BARBER SHOP OWNER DIES.

John R. Conard, 39 years old, owner of a barber shop at 5941 North avenue, died yesterday of burns suffered Aug. 30 when fumes exploded in the grease pit of a filling station at 6201 North avenue, Oak Park. Orville W. Carter of Bensenville, owner of the station, died Aug. 31.

35 FLYING FORT HEROES RECEIVE VALOR MEDALS

3 Wounded Men Decorated by Maj. Gen. Spaatz.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 12.—Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, chief of the United States air forces in Europe, flew to this bomber command base today and conferred decorations upon 35 men who have been bombing occupied Europe from America's huge Flying Fortresses.

First Lieut. R. F. Starks.

Four of the decorations were awarded posthumously to men who had been killed or fatally wounded in action. Of the others, only 23 were present at the ceremony and three of them still wore wound bandages.

The awards to the living included two distinguished service crosses, 14 distinguished flying crosses, and 15 Purple Hearts. It was the first time that Flying Fortress men in this theater of the war received the DFC. Among them were three middle westerners, First Lieut. Frank R. Beadle, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Second Lieut. Robert C. Scheible, Akron, O., and Sergt. William E. McIntosh, Buchanan, Mich. Another Michigan man, Sergt. William E. Schinke of Manistee, won the Purple Heart, while another Purple Heart was awarded posthumously to Sergt. Riley R. Wilsey of Racine, Wis., who was killed in the big raid on the Potez aircraft factory at Meault, France, Sept. 6.

Flyers Mass at Airdrome.

Massed on the well camouflaged airdrome against the silhouettes of the huge bombing planes were the men of four Fortress squadrons. The air group came to attention as the two generals marched onto the field to stand beside a table stacked high with military decorations. A moment later the men to be decorated came marching forward between the ranks of their comrades.

One man did not march. Seated in a wheel chair beside the table, one bandaged leg propped up on pillows, was Sergt. Frederick Rich of Erie, Pa. He was awarded the Purple Heart. Rich was wounded on Aug. 24 when the bomber on which he was a gunner was attacked by an enemy plane after a raid on a ship yard at Le Trait, France. The other heroes who still wore bandages were First Lieut. Eugene M. Lockhart, Hillsboro, N. C., and First Lieut. Richard F. Starks, Midway, Ky., who received the distinguished service cross. Lockhart was awarded the Purple Heart.

Gen. Spaatz Pins on Medals.

An adjutant read the orders describing the particular action for which each award was made. Then Gen. Spaatz passed quickly down the line, pinning on medals and congratulating the birdmen.

Lieut. Beadle received his DFC for meritorious work while piloting the lead plane in the first Fortress raid on Aug. 18—a raid which has been followed by nearly a dozen more—and for particularly efficient work during the first four raids.

Lieut. Scheible, a bombardier, was decorated for destroying one of the dangerous German Focke-Wulf 190 fighters with three bursts from his machine gun in the raid on Meault.

Sergt. McIntosh, a ball turret gunner in a plane on the same raid, also brought down an enemy plane.

SON OF WORLD WAR I. TEST PILOT IS LISTED AS DEAD BY MARINES

Lieut. Walter X. Young of the United States marines and the son of a World War I test pilot, has been reported killed in action, his mother, Mrs. Joseph J. McGeeney, 943 East Marquette road, said yesterday.

Mrs. McGeeney said she believed he may have died in the Solomon islands battle. She said he had been serving with a parachute battalion transformed into a shock troop unit before this action.

Lieut. Young, son of the late Capt. Walter X. Young, an army flyer, was a graduate of the University of Chicago. His wife is the former Esther Griffin Miller.

Mrs. Lora M. Cole, 2118 Minor street, Des Plaines, received word yesterday that her son, Chester George Cole, 22 years old, seaman, first class, has been listed as missing in action. Cole enlisted two years ago when he was graduated from high school at De Forest, Wis.

U. S. MARINES' CHIEF HAILS COURAGE OF DIEPPE RAIDERS

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Col. Franklin A. Hart of the United States marine corps and a member of the staff of Adm. Harold R. Stark, commander of the United States naval forces in Europe, today praised the courage of the men participating in the raid on Dieppe, France.

"My greatest admiration," he said, "went to men who manned the small boats. "Royal navy men may well be proud of them."

Hart also eulogized the land and air forces. "It was something to see how the royal air force and American flyers would pull off German planes closing in on them and almost every time bring them down," he said.

ALASKA HIGHWAY IS BEING BUILT AT 'IMMENSE SPEED'

Rolling Right Thru Virgin Forests, Says British Aid

BY JOHN CONKLIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 12.—Malcolm MacDonald, British high commissioner to Canada, who flew into Winnipeg from the far north, told newspapermen that work on the Alaska highway is going ahead "at immense speed."

Malcolm MacDonald [top] and T. A. Crerar.

"The highway and all wartime developments in the Yukon and Northwest Territories of Canada are enormously impressive," said MacDonald, now on his way back to Ottawa, Ont., after an air trip that covered 4,000 miles.

"We drove along part of the road near Fort St. John and also flew along great stretches of it toward White Horse."

Massive Equipment Used.

The high commissioner told of the great quantities of massive equipment being used to cut a swath thru virgin forest "just as tho it wasn't there at all."

Accompanying MacDonald on his long trip were T. A. Crerar, Canada's minister of mines and natural resources, and Dr. Charles Camsell, deputy minister.

The party flew as far north as Aklavik, but bad weather stopped their plan of flying to Fairbanks, Alaska. At the farthest point, MacDonald was 150 miles north of the Arctic circle.

Indians Aid Bomb Victims.

He gave high praise to the Indians and Eskimos and the keenness with which they follow the war, adding: "I visited one Indian village to thank the people for sending $393 to England to help children who had been the victims of bombing raids."

He stayed two days in one Eskimo village north of the Arctic circle. Of the people he said:

"They have none of our frills. They have a remarkable spirit of simplicity, sincerity, and bounteous generosity. They're wonderful friends."

Chicago and the great centers of Canada and the United States soon will be linked with the northwest and Alaska by a direct telephone line it was learned here. The telephone line will follow the Alaskan highway and will be used only for official business while the road is being built.

BELIEVES JAPS WILL USE KISKA AS BASE TO ATTACK RUSSIA

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 12 (AP).—Rep. Warren G. Magnuson [D., Wash.], recently returned from an inspection of Alaskan defenses, said he believed the Japanese attacked the Aleutians so as to use Kiska as a base for assault on Siberia and as an obstacle to the lend-lease route to Russia by way of Bering sea.

Speaking at a civic meeting yesterday, Magnuson said that "from the American standpoint the situation in the Aleutians is in good shape."

"I do not believe the Japanese had any intentions of using the Aleutians as stepping stones to Alaska. Our greatest loss was the weather stations so necessary to our military plans. Efforts of the Japanese to obtain a foothold in the Aleutians proved so costly their offensive wings are clipped."

'WHAT'S COOKIN'?' QUERY OF ALASKA TROOPS ON LEAVE

Men Get 15 Days in U. S.; Most Want Chicken.

BY WILLIAM L. WORDEN.

AN ADVANCED ARMY POST IN ALASKA, Sept. 12 (AP).—Private note to Anna Russell at New Philadelphia, O.: Get the chicken fried; Frank's coming home, and he's hungry for fried chicken.

To Eva Hied, Hosmer, S. D.: Fix up Ervin's bed. He's coming home, too.

To the folks in Dardenelle, Ark.: Tune up the town band and get the "Twenty-two club" ready for business; George McGohan is on his way, and so is Eugene Hodges.

New Policy Established.

The people in New Hartford, Mo., can also get ready for Lieut. Wilfred Craig; those in Lewisville, Ark., for Lieut. George Rister, and Mrs. Fred Kuhlman in Seattle, Wash., for her lieutenant husband.

These are a few of the home folks who will be interested in the new policy which allows officers and men at this combat base leaves of absence of 15 days each, starting from the time they arrive in continental United States. What has been only the topic of hopeful conversation has now become a reality for the men who have been facing the Japanese threat constantly for months.

It's almost a safe bet for mothers or wives to get a chicken ready for frying. That's the menu preference expressed almost to a man.

He'll Take Spaghetti.

Some of the gastronomic independents, however, vary from the common choice. Pvt. Alfred A. Brooks, San Francisco, Cal., sent word to his wife, Mona, that he is not interested in chicken and expects to have plenty of steak before he hits the Golden Gate. What he wants is spaghetti, cooked in her own inimitable fashion.

Lieut. Thomas A. Andres, Tacoma, Wash., expressed indifference to his stomach. What he wants is lots of sleep, especially after 6 a. m.

Leaves are granted on the basis of length of service in Alaska. The home town circuit of some of the men ranges from Zephyr Hills, Fla., the home of Grady Peeples, thru Iowa, with Donald Heisert headed for La Porte City—into Arkansas, with Lieut. Neil Snyder headed for Camden—to West Virginia, where Pvt. James McCallister goes to Saint Albans in anticipation of one of his mother's chocolate cakes—to Nebraska, where Freeman Klein plans to visit at Fairbury—to New Mexico, where Pvt. Manuel Sisneros expects to take a good siesta at Ledoux.

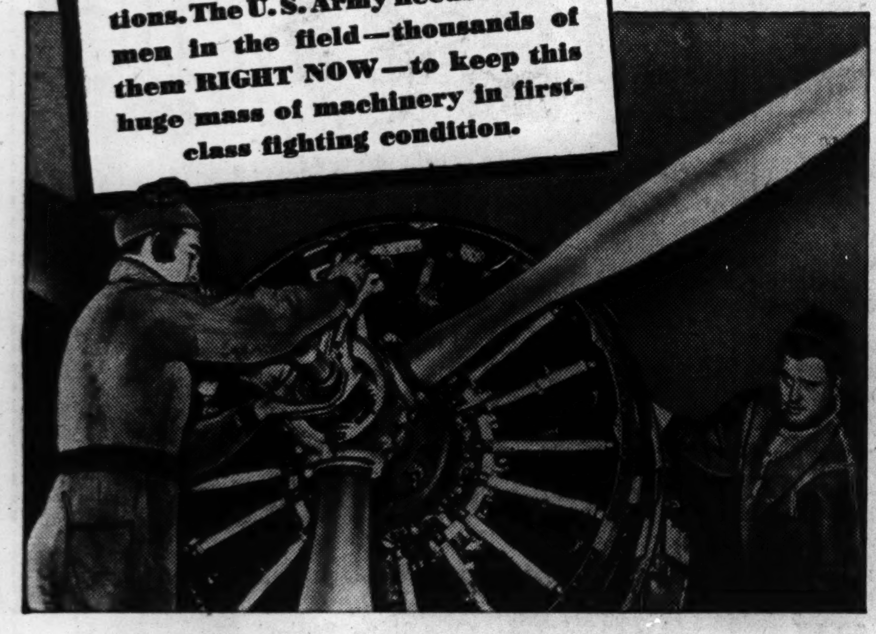
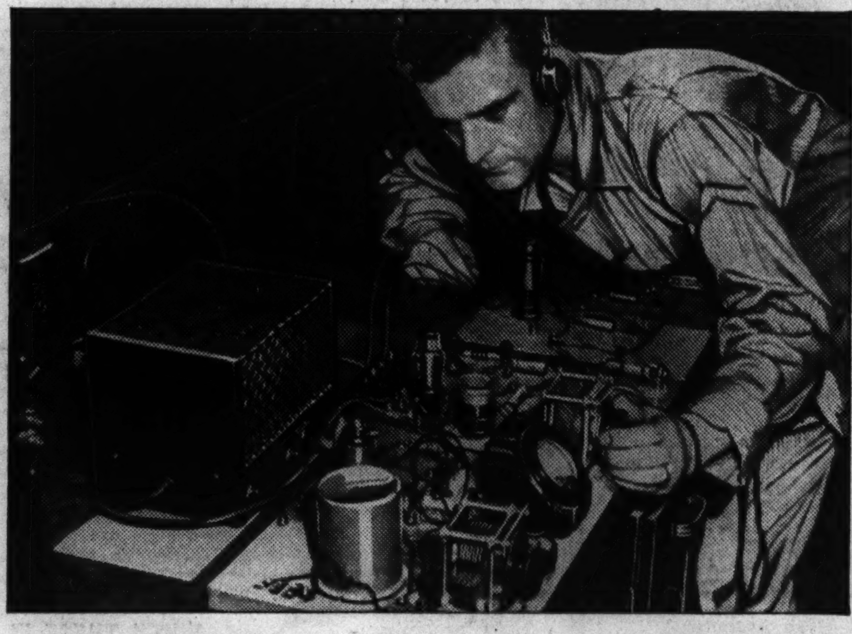
SKILLED MEN

Production of war equipment has reached tremendous proportions. The U. S. Army needs skilled men in the field—thousands of them RIGHT NOW—to keep this huge mass of machinery in first-class fighting condition.

HERE'S YOUR CHANCE TO SERVE YOUR COUNTRY



AIR FORCES—We're building the biggest, mightiest Air Force on earth. Thousands of skilled mechanics are needed to keep those great planes flying and fighting. Men with experience as aircraft mechanics, automobile mechanics, radio mechanics, armorers, sheet metal workers, welders and in other allied fields are needed immediately. Aviation has a splendid future and there's no finer training for it than in the Army Air Forces.



SIGNAL CORPS—Here, in the "nerve center of the Army," handling the high-speed communications equipment of modern war, there's a big opportunity for men with mechanical talents and training. Licensed radio operators, experienced radio repairmen, telephone and telegraph men—and other able mechanics—will find a thrill in working with the amazing new secret devices of the Signal Corps. Pre-service training is furnished free—with pay—to those who require it.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT—Guns and ammunition are decisive weapons in war, and it takes skilled manpower to keep them shooting fast and straight. Men with experience as automobile, truck and tractor mechanics, armorers, machinists and skilled men of other trades are urgently needed by the Ordnance Department. Technical training in ordnance work is not a requirement.

MEN OF 18 AND 19—Even though you have had no mechanical experience, the Army offers you a special opportunity—the right to choose your own combat branch: Air Force, Armored Force, Cavalry, Coast Artillery, Corps of Engineers, Field Artillery, Infantry or Signal Corps. Or you can qualify as Aviation Cadet. Under 20 you can choose. After 20, this is no longer possible, except for certain skilled specialists.

THIS opportunity to get in now and go places in the Air Forces, Signal Corps or Ordnance Department is open to any skilled specialist between the ages of 18 and 44, inclusive, who is physically fit and does not now occupy a key position in a vital war industry. According to ability, promotions to higher grades and increases in pay may be expected. • You've told yourself you'd be ready whenever your country needs you. That time is now! Drop in and talk it over at your nearest Army Recruiting and Induction Station today.

WAR'S GREATEST AIR BATTLE OVER SOLOMONS TOLD

Many Jap Ships Damaged; 96 Planes Downed.

A handful of marine corps pilots in Grumman "Wildcats" and army pilots in Airocobras soared to meet them and in quick, slashing fighting shot down 11 Zeros and 10 twin-engined bombers. Only three of our pilots were missing in this action, of which one was killed. The enemy attack was so quickly broken up that marine ground installations escaped damage.

Meanwhile, the weather, which had been stormy for two days, had cleared, and American airplanes sighted the task forces about noon. Our fighter pilots, between 10 a. m. and 1 p. m., shot down two four-engined patrol planes and two twin-engined, twin-float patrol planes. One four-engined plane hit by our fighters exploded and plunged into the sea within three miles of our ship.

Locate Three Carriers.

Our scouts located three enemy carriers, and our attack group consisting of dive bombers and torpedo planes took off. They found the small Japanese carrier at 4:10 p. m. escorted by two destroyers and one heavy cruiser. The dive bombers peeled off and plunged at the Japanese carrier, which went into a tight righthand turn. Bombs stopped it nearly dead in the water.

Torpedo planes got one hit amidship on the heavy cruiser, and another torpedo which missed the carrier hit one of the escorting destroyers.

One of our dive bombers shot down a Japanese torpedo plane which had just taken off from the carrier deck. Our own attack group escaped with minor damage to one plane. It was hit by a small group of Zeros circling the carrier. Other Zeros failed to press home attacks on our planes and the enemy anti-aircraft fire was relatively light.

Returning to our carriers, our dive bombers encountered enemy dive bombers and shot down three of them without receiving a scratch. They also sighted 30 enemy dive bombers, torpedo planes, and fighters en route to attack our carriers. These enemy groups, however, failed to find us.

Planes Drop All Around.

Meanwhile, our task force was expecting an attack momentarily. It came and developed into the greatest air battle of the war as our fighter planes ripped into enemy dive bombers and escort Zeros. I watched the battle from the bridge.

Japanese planes dropped all around in great flaming streaks of smoke as our fighters and anti-aircraft blasted them. The guns of our ships were blazing so continuously that the ships themselves appeared to be on fire. Out of an estimated 70 planes in the Japanese attack group, only 10 got thru to drop their bombs.

The Japanese had planned a coordinated dive bomber and torpedo plane attack, but the torpedo planes never reached their objectives. Our fighters intercepted 15 of them 40 miles from our ships and quickly shot down eight, one after another. The remaining seven turned and fled.

Just before the enemy dive bombers reached us another small attack group took off from our carrier. They encountered a strong enemy force of one Mutsu class battleship, four heavy cruisers, six light cruisers, and six destroyers.

Battleship Hit by Bomb.

Our planes attacked. One bomb hit the battleship just aft of the smokestack, while one torpedo hit a heavy cruiser. One of our torpedo planes was shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

Shortly after this attack, just before dark, two of our scout bombers located a Japanese carrier and dropped two bombs which fell within 10 to 20 feet of the carrier and certainly caused some damage, altho probably not extensive. Later in the evening long ranging army B-17s attacked the Japanese carrier and scored four near misses.

At dusk, the enemy warships retreated northward, and this morning they couldn't be located by our scouts.

One or two small Japanese ships sneaked into the Guadalcanal coast yesterday evening and attempted to land a handful of troops from small boats. The marines dive bombed one enemy destroyer, while our planes strafed the landing boats repeatedly. The marines reported that as far as they were able to observe, not a single Japanese soldier reached shore.

During the night, one group of Japanese ships kept coming south. Marine and navy dive bombers from Guadalcanal attacked them this morning northward of Florida Island. One transport and one heavy cruiser were hit by bombs and set afire. When seen later by our scouts, both ships were stopped dead in the water. The other vessels fled northward.

Witnesses Fourth Attack.

I witnessed half of the fourth battle—an attack on one of our ships by a large number of Japanese dive bombers with fighter escort. Most of the Japanese planes were blasted from the air by our fighters and anti-aircraft before they even had a chance to drop bombs. Official reports estimate only 10 bombs were dropped, whereas some 30 planes plunged into the sea.

The battle lasted 10 minutes but seemed only a few seconds. It was a series of quick, sharp flashes, solid sheets of flame from anti-aircraft batteries ringing our ships, black shell bursts blossoming in the sky, the flashing sun on aircraft wings, long trails of black smoke from enemy planes in their death plunges, and big white splashes as they hit the sea.

A veteran naval commander standing next to me on the bridge shouted over the noise of the fighter plane taking off from our deck: "It is hard to realize that the fate of nations is decided nowadays with such incredible swiftness."

The Japanese arrived. The crews of cruisers and destroyers went to their battle stations and loaded the guns. Our ships picked up speed and raced thru the water. Our fighters sped into the air and patroled oved the ships.

Shells Pepper the Sky.

Our planes sighted the approaching Japanese 15 miles away. Over the interplane radio we heard the pilots say "There they are," and "Let's go get them." A few seconds later the first anti-aircraft bursts appeared in the sky.

All the ships cut loose with anti-aircraft guns, peppering the sky with black bursts. Planes twisted and sped thru the bursts and began dropping into the sea.

Two planes plunged simultaneously, becoming balls of fire as they dived into the water. Another started down in a 45 degree dive apparently under control, but smoking. It burst into flames as it hit the water.

Enemy dive bombers were now over one of our ships. Wings flashed in the sunlight as the Japs peeled off. They dived vertically for several thousand feet, then pulled up their noses, but kept diving at a 45 degree angle to allow their bombs to clear the propellors. Our fighters followed them down.

Suicide Dive Misses.

One Japanese pilot never pulled out of his dive. He plunged into the sea.

Another plane hit the sea just off the ship's bow. The pilot apparently attempted a suicide dive, but missed. As he hit the water his bomb exploded.

Other bombs hit around the ship. When the burning planes hit the water they seemed to keep on plunging far under the surface. The flame was suddenly extinguished, and a little puff of smoke floated up, as when a candle is snuffed out.

A warning came over the loudspeaker of our ship: "Dive bombers overhead." We saw them apparently preparing to dive, and our guns were trained on them.

But they were our patroling fighters. Other planes sped toward us in what seemed to be a torpedo attack, but they also were our fighters.

U. S. Plane Crashes.

One fighter landed and crashed into a barrier and turned over on its back. The pilot got out of the plane and limped to the dressing station with blood pouring from three bullet wounds in his legs. He said, "I got on a dive bomber, and a Jap Zero got on me."

The anti-aircraft fire from our ships began to lessen, then ceased entirely. The guns must have been red hot. The battle was over. It lasted from 5:13 to 5:23 p. m.

Our planes returned, including the attack group which had hit a Japanese carrier. Many of them landed later by moonlight.

The commander next to me said, "Well, now you've got the dope on how it's done."

The weeks ago he was trying unsuccessfully to convince me that "battleships will be the decisive factor in this war."

Today he said "destiny rides on the wings of the dive bombers."

Report Japs Less Skilful.

American naval aviators who shot down 47 Japanese planes in the battle yesterday reported that the Japanese pilots definitely were less skilful and experienced than those they had met in previous air battles over the Pacific.

Our aviators are convinced that Japan is short of trained carrier pilots and that she lost the cream of her carrier flyers when four carriers were sunk at Midway. It is believed that most of the Japanese naval pilots who participated in the Pearl Harbor attack now have been killed.

Enemy pilots today made mistake after mistake which cost them their lives. Their mistakes, plus our numerical superiority in the air over our own task force, accounted for our sweeping victory. Furthermore, our pilots now are becoming thoroly seasoned and trained in combat.

"These birds just pulled up in front of your sights and fell away flaming when you pulled the trigger," said one pilot. "They were mighty shy of mixing it."

Guns Frighten Them Off.

There were few enemy fighters in the air and these lacked aggressiveness. They never pushed home their attacks. A few bursts from our gunners were enough to frighten them away. The rear gunners on the enemy dive bombers didn't even attempt to shoot at our planes.

Our aviators are not drawing final conclusions from the poor performance of Japan's pilots yesterday, but they are hopeful that most of Japan's best flyers already have been lost and that opposition henceforth will be weaker.

Aerial Heroes of Pacific Victory

Lieut. Harold Larsen (left) of Birmingham, Ala., who dive bombed a Japanese cruiser in last week's American victory over a Japanese sea and air force in the Solomon Islands; Lieut. Hayden Jensen of St. Paul, Minn., who brought his total number of aerial victories to six, and Donal E. Runyon of Crawfordsville, Ind. (right), who shot down four Japanese planes to increase his total victories to eight. Five victories are sufficient for an ace's ranking.

3 NAVY BOMBER-ACES SHARE BAG OF JAP CARRIER

They Also Scored in the Midway Battle.

BY CLARK LEE.

AT SEA WITH THE UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET OFF THE SOLOMON ISLANDS, Aug. 24 [Delayed]—(AP).—"This Jap carrier wasn't as big a target as the Kaga and Akagi were at Midway. But we got bomb hits on it and a score of near misses. Then torpedo planes blasted it and left it dead in the water and smoking to beat the band."

One hit was scored by the American navy dive bomber quoted above. He is Lieut. Gordon Sherwood of Salt Lake City. Sherwood is 27, and one of the United States navy's three ace dive bombers.

The other two are members of Sherwood's squadron—Lieut. Sidney Bottomley, formerly of Merchantville, N. J., and Lieut. [J. G.] Roy Isaman, 25, of Lewiston, Idaho.

Aids Also Score Hits.

Bottomley and Isaman also scored hits this afternoon, making a total of four each for this trio. In the Midway battle each of them hit the carriers Kaga and Akagi and the cruiser Mogami, all of which were sunk. Their bombs alone have caused millions of dollars of damage to the Jap navy and helped sink four ships.

All three of them have an abundance of steady nerves, concentration, and, above all, the experience needed to make a successful divebomber pilot.

"We spotted the enemy ships this afternoon," Sherwood said. "The carrier was in the center, with one destroyer on each side in close, and a heavy cruiser about four miles away. The carrier did a zig-zag when we were sighted and then swung into a righthand circle. The destroyers fell in alongside it.

Starts After Cruiser.

"The weather was perfect and we circled deliberately. The group commander gave us instructions by radio for the attack. He told me to take my division of planes against the cruiser, which had started twisting and turning.

"We took our time getting lined up for our dives, because the anti-aircraft was light and only three or four fighters were in the air, and they did not bother us.

"Two planes took off from the carrier deck, and two others were circling low and apparently preparing to land.

"Our torpedo planes were circling near the edge of a cloud, waiting until we hit first.

"I sat up there and watched the others dive on the carrier. Their bombs peppered the water all around the carrier but were just missing, apparently due to the ship's speed and its skidding on the turn.

"I had just pushed over to attack the cruiser when the group commander radioed, 'hey, Gordon, belay that; come over and hit that carrier.'

Hits Carrier Squarely.

"I pulled out of my dive, losing a couple of thousand feet altitude, and went over the carrier. Bottomley pushed over ahead of me and his bomb hit squarely amidships. It was as if you'd drawn a big cross exactly in the center of the carrier deck, and his bomb had landed right at the crosspiece.

"I watched my altimeter before releasing my bomb. My rear seat man and others saw it hit a little behind Bottomley's. I pulled out and saw Isaman get a hit too.

"By this time the carrier was smoking badly, with flames rushing out from under the flight deck on both sides for the entire length of the ship. She started to lose speed until she was barely moving thru the water.

"I circled, waiting for our planes to join me, and saw Lieut. Bruce Harwood leading our torpedo planes into attack. They got one perfect hit which threw up water in a big column and shook the entire ship. It lost headway and lay dead in the water. I saw other torpedo planes get hits on the cruiser."

Makes Two Practice Dives.

"The dive bombers were still coming down as I made my first approach to the carrier," Harwood continued the narrative. I couldn't see thru the smoke, so I made two tentative approaches before my final run and release.

"I estimated the carrier made two complete turns. When I finally could see it, it was still moving, but slowly at less than 10 knots and apparently fast losing speed. It was broadside to our approach and in an ideal position for a torpedo run. I released my torpedo with other planes behind me and then pulled away fast and headed out. My tail gunner told me the torpedo had dropped okay.

Tiny Flyers Did All Right.

"The dive bombers saw at least one and possibly two other torpedoes hit the carrier, and one hit the cruiser, which was attacked by two of my planes.

"Ensigns Corwin F. [Smiley] Morgan, 23, of Gainsville, Fla., and R. A. [Andy] Divine, 22, of Fresno, Cal., youngest and smallest of the torpedo plane pilots, were two who attacked the cruiser. Our torpedo planes are so big and Morgan and Divine are so small you never would think that they could handle them, but they did all right."

Here Morgan took up the tale:

"After we sighted the carrier Lieut. Harwood radioed me, 'Take your plane and Divine's and attack the cruiser; I'll hit the carrier.' Later he canceled the order, but I never heard him.

Carrier's Guns Silenced.

"Lieut. Harwood's plane broke away and headed for the carrier, which was smoking from our dive bombers. It was throwing out plenty of black smoke from three distinct hits at the bow, amidships and astern. The carrier was still moving slowly and bobbing like a cork every time our bombs made a near miss. All of its anti-aircraft had been silenced.

"Three Zeros were on us, concentrating on diving on one plane whose wheels wouldn't retract. They apparently thought the plane was crippled. But those Zeros were mighty shy of coming close to us.

"The cruiser was four miles from the carrier. It started throwing up anti-aircraft when we were a half mile away. The first burst was in front of us and the next one was behind. Then, the next burst bracketed us. One Zero started to follow us in, but when the anti-aircraft got hot, he left. One burst shook my plane and I thought for a moment I was hit.

"The cruiser was skidding in a turn, and Divine and I got good runs on him. We released our torpedoes and scrammed away. The anti-aircraft followed us for what seemed forever. Honestly, I've run away from dogs faster than I got out of that anti-aircraft.

"One Zero was waiting for us coming out, but he just sat up there and watched us. We joined our dive bombers and came home."

Marines Rescue Him in the Solomons.

[Here are two excerpts from the battle diary of Associated Press War Correspondent Clark Lee, written at the height of the American triumph in the Solomons, Aug. 23 and 24.]

BY CLARK LEE.

WITH THE UNITED STATES MARINES AT HENDERSON FIELD, Guadalcanal Island, Solomons, Aug. 23 [Delayed]—(AP).—It begins to look like we may get some news on this trip after all. Things are starting to happen.

After many uneventful days at sea an air group from our carrier prepared to take off and bomb and torpedo a large Japanese force which is en route to attempt to recapture this area from our marines, who seized it Aug. 7 and 8.

We reached Guadalcanal between two heavy rainstorms which enabled us to sight the islands and land after dark at the Guadalcanal field.

They'd Seen It Before.

This airfield looked very familiar to us, as we had spent several hours bombing it Aug. 7 and 8, during the marine landings. The marines have named it Henderson field in honor of Maj. Lofton R. Henderson, leader of a marine dive bomber squadron, who was killed at Midway.

I met one British officer of the insular constabulary who had been hiding in the woods since the Japs seized the islands last May.

"The greatest day of my life was Aug. 7 when you chappies dropped from the air and started popping those Jappies," the officer said. "I had about bandoned hope. I was ill and had an injured leg and was hungry. Then you came. It was really a glorious show," he said.

Marines Not All Tough.

The marines here aren't all as rough and tough individuals as we had been led to believe. Many of them live up to advance notices, but some are just youngsters. All of them are extremely efficient, friendly and helpful.

Just as we landed a submarine surfaced offshore two miles from the airport and shot a greenish white parachute flare. By its light, the submarine fired a torpedo at one of our transports, but missed.

Most of the other Japs in this vicinity are either dead of are prisoners, except for the snipers whom the marines are rounding up.

The Battle Begins.

AT SEA WITH THE U. S. FLEET OFF THE SOLOMONS, Aug. 24 [Delayed—(AP).—We had our long awaited battle today. We won, hands down, and brought the war a step nearer to the phase of a definite American counteroffensive by attacking one of Tojo's carriers.

I spent several hours in the air and saw the Japs attack our ships with a little luck I would also have seen our planes hit a Jap carrier.

I also had a chance to see the bodies of Japs killed a week ago today when a landing group of 800 men was annihilated. I saw prisoners and tried to talk to them in halting Japanese, but a big marine guard told me it wasn't allowed.

We flew back to the ship and the crew members were envious of the mud on our shoes and gathered around remarking: 'Look, that's dirt." "Remember what that is?" "Wonder what it's like to feel land under you."

Shower Spoils His Trip.

I decided it was time to wash off some Guadalcanal mud. While showering general quarters sounded and the loudspeaker relayed two important announcements: we'd found the Jap task force, and the Japs were on the way to attack us.

Before I could dress and reach the flight deck our attack planes took off. These included the torpedo plane in which I had arranged to ride. However, Lieut. Harold [Swede] Larsen promised to take me with him later in the day.

Over the radio we followed our attack group and heard them report: "There they are!" and the group commander gave instructions for the attack.

The radio reported "some one got a good hit." We cheered and said "the Japs are catching hell."

But the Japs were speeding toward us and it was our turn to do a little catching.

"Don't Trust Planes."

Then the Jap planes hit us and the battle was on—and a few minutes later it was over.

Three of our fighter pilots failed to come back. One of them was a veteran of the Coral sea and Midway battles, while others were getting their first taste of air combat. One youngster only two nights before told me: "I don't trust airplanes too much. I wouldn't fly with anybody but myself piloting."

Swede returned minus two planes, but both crews were picked up later. The rest of our air group which hit the Jap carrier returned intact. Everybody was elated except me.

If I hadn't stopped to take a shower, or if Swede had called me when he went to taxi his plane, I'd have seen the Jap ships hit.

Nation's Biggest Camp

Oceanside, Cal., Sept. 12 (AP).—In a 114 year old ranch house, which nearly a century ago housed California's military governor, a new military régime is preparing a lot of trouble for the Japs. It's the headquarters of Maj. Gen. Joseph Fegan, commandant of the vast new marine base on historic Rancho Santa Margarita. Renamed Camp Joseph H. Pendleton, the 141,000 acre ranch is the nation's largest military establishment.

It extends 22 miles along the Pacific from Oceanside to San Clemente. Its varied terrain, ranging in altitude from sea level to 3,187 feet, will make possible training under conditions paralleling almost any to be encountered in this war. Within its borders are rivers, lakes, valleys, and even barren areas much like the deserts of Egypt.

SITUATION WELL IN HAND: JAPS ALL WIPED OUT!

Tale of a Marine Patrol in the Solomons.

[The navy department at Washington released yesterday the following account of a marine patrol action in the Solomons written by a marine corps combat correspondent.]

BY SERGT. J. W. HURLBUT.

GUADALCANAL, Aug. 19 [delayed]. —One of the most determined and effective patrol actions yet attempted against the Japanese forces remaining on Guadalcanal has just been completed.

Col. W. J. Whaling. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

Col. W. J. Whaling of Washington, D. C., directed the action, in which several companies of marines drove down on Japanese concentration points and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

The plan of attack was as follows:

Company "X," commanded by Capt. William L. Hawkins of Bridgeport, Conn., moved along the beach road that leads from Kukum.

Company "Y," commanded by Capt. B. W. Hardy Jr. of Toledo, O., was transported in boats to the Jap camp. Col. Whaling accompanied this group.

Company "Z," under Capt. Lyman Spurlock of Lincoln, Neb., penetrated deep into the jungle and assaulted the fortified enemy positions.

Company "Z" made the main contact and wiped out the Jap forces. Other companies helped make the action a success by keeping the Jap troops occupied until Capt. Spurlock's men had maneuvered into attacking position.

It Was Plenty Hot.

The attack was scheduled for this morning, but Company Z had its first action late yesterday when it came upon a Jap patrol in the jungle. Six Japanese were killed. There were no marine casualties.

According to plan, an intensive artillery barrage was laid down on the Japanese camp. Shortly the barrage lifted and Company Z moved from its overnight bivouac to the Jap right flank. This force was pinned down immediately by heavy machine gun fire and sniping from the enemy line.

[Note to Gen. R. L. Dening: I was with this bunch, boss, and it was plenty hot. I took cover behind a log that seemed no bigger than a tooth pick, with bullets smacking into the other side and kicking up dust a foot to my right.]

Greatest difficulty was in picking out the enemy firing points, so expert was their camouflage.

Meanwhile Company Z had begun closing in from its bivouac several hundred yards up in the hills. They soon encountered resistance, and from then on were almost constantly in action. They fought their way thru Japanese outposts, and Capt. Spurlock calmly organized his company front and established a firing line against the main Japanese position.

Enemy forces were well dug in. They had trenches and machine gun nests and many snipers in the trees.

Snipers Get Two Yanks.

One of our lieutenants and his runner, a private, were active in reconnaissance work, going well out ahead to scout enemy possessions. While they were moving in the open our observers saw the private shot and killed by a sniper. The lieutenant bent over the private to give aid and was also hit.

Marine Gunner Edward S. Rust of Detroit said he saw the lieutenant, altho mortally wounded, fire on the sniper with his pistol. The Jap was found dead a few feet away with two slugs in his body.

The Japanese automatic weapons were described as being of three sizes. One was a light gun, presumably .25 caliber; the second size was approximately that of our .30 caliber, while the third was a heavy gun, reportedly about .60 caliber.

Three machine gun nests held up the advance for a short time. Gunner Rust performed what seemed an almost impossible feat by using a rifle grenade to knock out one nest from a distance of far beyond the usual grenade range.

Private Holds Japs Back.

The other two nests were knocked out by marines charging under the protective fire of rifles. One of the riflemen, Pvt. Nicholas Sileo of Brooklyn, N. Y., stayed at his post and kept blazing away until eight Japs were chased out of the nest he was covering.

Shortly after the main resistance was broken, the enemy tried to effect a counterattack. Capt. Spurlock anticipated the action by establishing a firing line, brandishing bayonets and yelling at the top of their lungs. They were mowed down by fire of rifles and automatic weapons.

A volunteer accompanying one of our companies was Sergt. C. C. Arndt of Okolona, Miss., one of three survivors of the patrol which was sent on a night mission to the Matanikao camp several days ago. Arndt killed two Japanese that night. Tuesday night he killed two more, and on Wednesday he accounted for six by sniping.

William P. Liddle, pharmacist's mate, third class, of Winding Gulf, W. Va., carried the navy insignia to glory in the encounter. Liddle went everywhere unmindful of enemy fire, caring for the wounded.

Capt. Spurlock reports that 4 of his men were killed and 11 wounded. At least 60 of the enemy were killed and some prisoners taken.

Of the other companies taking part, Co. "Y," in boats, started the trek up the shore line before dawn, the boats reached their rendezvous without incident, and the company disembarked and went into patrol formation.

The boats were under machine gun fire from the beach. Col. Whaling in the lead boat saw a Jap run down the shore in front of the enemy camp, wildly raising a rising sun flag. Col. Whaling, no mean rifle shot, picked up his sniping piece, peered down the sights and pulled the trigger. The rising sun went down for the count, and so did the flag waver.

Co. "Y" cleared out the few Japanese posts they encountered. They reported they killed four or five and suffered no losses of their own.

Shortly after 4 o'clock in the afternoon, observers saw the flares rise high into the sky that meant "operation successful."

The enemy camps were cleaned out, and the remnants of Japanese resistance in this area were scattered.

HAILS YANKEES' WORK ON PLANE BASE IN ERITREA

CAIRO, Egypt., Sept. 12 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, commander of United States forces in the middle east, expressed satisfaction today over the progress made in setting up American installations in Eritrea for the repair and manufacture of aircraft equipment.

The Eritrean plants will handle royal air force equipment, as well as that of United States fighting planes.

American nurses have arrived in Eritrea and are staffing new hospitals there, it was reported.

DIES OF INJURIES IN FALL.

M'ARTHUR PILOTS BLAST JAPS WITH 26 TONS OF BOMBS

Destroy 17 Planes at New Guinea Base.

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Sept. 13 [Sunday]—(AP).—Allied heavy and medium bombers, escorted by fighters, struck one of the heaviest blows yet delivered in the Pacific yesterday when they blasted the Japanese invasion base, Buna, in eastern New Guinea, with 26 tons of bombs and more than 28,000 rounds of cannon and machine gun fire, a communique said today.

In four bombing attacks, followed by seven strafing runs, the allied airmen destroyed at least 17 Japanese planes on the ground, in dispersal bays and on the runway of an airdrome from which the enemy had been operating in the drive against Port Moresby.

Silence All Anti-Aircraft.

All anti-aircraft positions in the area were silenced, the communique said.

Meanwhile, there was little action in the Owen Stanley mountains where the Japanese have advanced to little more than 40 miles from Port Moresby, the big allied base.

"Owen Stanley action was limited to patrol activity," the communique said.

However, one jungle fighting allied unit ambushed an enemy patrol in that rough terrain and inflicted 20 casualties with only minor losses to the allies.

The attack on Buna was a continuation of a series aimed at smashing the supporting base for troops operating in the Owen Stanley range. It was from here that the Japanese pushed westward to Kokoda, the jumping off place for last week's drive.

Yesterday's attacks started at dawn with a Flying Fortress raid and was followed by flights of medium bombers and attack planes in a combined action.

The attack planes after dropping their bombs strafed the airdrome at low level in conjunction with fighters.

Inflict Heavy Casualties.

Heavy casualties were inflicted on Japanese ground forces, the communique said, and fires which could be seen 30 miles away were started in fuel dumps and installations.

No Japanese fighters attempted to intercept the allied attackers. Only one allied plane was missing after the action.

Off the Island of New Ireland, an allied offensive reconnaissance unit strafed a Japanese minelaying vessel south of Kavieng, but the results could not be observed.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—J. J. Singh, president of the India League of America, expressed belief today that if tension over British-Indian problems was allowed to continue "the morale of the Indian army is bound to be affected."

Under normal circumstances, Singh said, the Indian question would be of concern only to Indians and the British, but with a global war raging "it is the concern of the united nations and more particularly of the United States of America, because the American soldiers are already in India."

Singh said he felt certain that a Japanese attack on India would occur "within three or four weeks," and asked if the battle of India could be won with Japanese attacking on one hand and "the British troops engaged in shooting and beating down and flogging the masses of India behind the front lines?"

UNITED NATIONS FREIGHTER SUNK IN U. S. WATERS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—The navy announced today that a medium size united nations freighter had been torpedoed and sunk last month by a submarine in the North Atlantic.

The announcement said 61 crew members were rescued and two are missing. Survivors were taken to an Atlantic port.

The sinking brought to 464 the number of vessels lost in the western Atlantic area since Pearl Harbor, according to an unofficial tabulation by the Associated Press. The attacks have cost the lives of 3,133 persons, 1,780 are missing, and 14,338 have been rescued.

Balk Attempt to Blow Up Clipper Airport at Havana

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 12.—An attempt to destroy the gasoline tanks and shops of the Pan-American Airways airport outside Havana was frustrated early this morning, according to authorities. Alberto Pichardo, a member of the navy detachment guarding the airport, was wounded in a fight with two men who fled, leaving two packages containing bombs.

FOUND DEAD IN BASEMENT.

Fred Fuller, 72 years old, 8548 Jeffery avenue, was found dead in the basement of his home yesterday with a hose attached to a gas jet held to his mouth.

HERE ARE GIFTS TO SEND YANKS FOR CHRISTMAS

Tribune Lists Presents Boys Like Best.

What to send your boy or boy friend in the armed forces, and how to send it are questions that have been asked THE TRIBUNE hundreds of times. The army, navy, and the marine corps, provided information for the following instructions and lists.

First of all, Christmas mail to the armed forces abroad should be on its way by Oct. 1. You pay postage only to one of the two ports of shipment, New York or San Francisco, whichever is nearer your boy's station.

Packages Will be Inspected.

Friends of the Yanks are urged to mail not more than one Christmas package a week between now and Oct. 1. The packages may not weigh more than six pounds and must be about the size of a shoebox. They should be packed in strong cardboard or corrugated board. Each will be opened for inspection, so do not seal the package. Sealed packages of standard products, such as cigars, cigarets, already sealed in their merchandisable form, may be enclosed.

Perishables are barred from the mail. Foods which do not spoil or break may be mailed. The best way to send such foods is either in tins or in sealed jars. No intoxicants, inflammables, explosives, or poisons will be allowed to pass.

One thing should be remembered. Do not load down your boy with a lot of bulky gifts that he will try to carry around with him. The government has spent a lot of time and effort reducing the weight of the service men's "issue" load. Don't undo the good work.

Money Is Good Gift.

One of the best of gifts, that is neither perishable, bulky, nor breakable, is a money order. Do not send cash thru the mail. Many countries forbid the importation of foreign money, but a money order or bank draft can be cashed by your Yank for money in the country where he is stationed. Then he can buy whatever he wants.

Here is a list of the things acceptable for your Yank here and abroad and things he may be most likely to need and want:

Money belt [waterproof]. Remember, sailors and coast guardsmen don't have pants pockets.

Sewing kit with useful fittings, such as black, white, and tan thread, No. 24; needles in airtight and waterproof container; scissors, small, and of good cutting quality; buttons, white; large snaps.

Toilet kit, zipper type, about 5x10 inches. Include some of the following, or send refills from time to time: razor blades, shaving mirror [maximum 4x6 inches], comb and brush, tooth brush, tooth powder, shaving cream, soap in box, nail clippers; nail file. Whisk broom.

Blitz cloth: this is trade name for a processed cloth for polishing buttons and buckles.

Shoe cleaning kit, which should include brown polish for soldiers and marines; black polish for sailors and coast guardsmen.

Reading material, such as comic books, pocket size books, small magazines.

Pen and pencil sets. The pencil is the important item. Get the kind that doesn't stick out of the pocket.

Small pictures or snapshots.

Zipper bags for soldiers, marines, or air forces. There are good only for furloughs and liberties. A dark color is suggested for sailors and marines; khaki for soldiers.

Sun glasses, in a carrying case that will slip onto the belt.

Pencil type flashlight with a pocket clip.

Cigarets. The men say they would rather have two or three packs at a time than a carton, then they don't have to give the surplus all away to their buddies. Pipes, tobacco.

A cigaret lighter with plenty of flints and wicks. No fluid can be sent thru the mails overseas.

More Expensive Presents.

The following items are in the luxury class. Use your own judgment:

Navigator's watch. A luxury item of especial value to sailors, coast guardsmen, or air force personnel.

Ring. A plain signet ring, with insignia for various branches of the service.

Portable radio. It should be a combination power and battery operated set. You can send extra batteries later.

Camera. It should be small and inexpensive with protected lens. Most popular is the size taking 16 pictures on a roll. Remember that cameras must be turned in while the men are in camp and used only on furlough and liberty.

Glass or chain cords for identification tags. Identification bracelets.

Traveler's type folding iron [if he's where there is electricity].

"Curling iron" type presser for trousers.

Hosiery. This is restricted to the United States, except when specifically requested by men in foreign service. It should be plain brown for the army; plain black for navy and coast guard; white or gray-white wool for the marines. Solid colors only; no clocks. Undershirts and shorts, white only, are acceptable. So are handkerchiefs, white; no rolled edges.

Gifts for Officers.

The following items are restricted for commissioned or petty officers:

Electrical items, such as toasters or electric plates, but should be sent only on request.

Shirts. Must meet service regulations.

Food for "snacking," but only within continental limits unless specifically requested by overseas forces.

Candies can be sent to all. These should be the kind that can "take it" in extremes of temperature, and for indefinite periods. Also tinned nuts, tinned cheese, peanut butter, pickles, sandwich spreads, all in small units. Olives in jars, if well packed, or tins; cold canned meats; cakes, of fruit or pound variety, and tinned cookies.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

A. T. writes: "My wife writes and tells me the internal revenue department is trying to hold her for my income tax. As a private, I am unable to pay these back instalments, or to pay those that fall due. Doesn't the soldier's and sailor's relief act suspend these payments?"

ANSWER: The wife of a man in service cannot be held for the payment of her husband's income tax after he has entered service. However, if the husband and wife filed a "joint return," the situation is different in that the act does not necessarily relieve the wife of her husband's share if she can pay it. The act merely says that "Payment of past or future income taxes [state or federal] by any one in military service may be deferred, without interest, until six months after his service ends if his ability to pay is materially impaired by his service." A man in service may actually be receiving a larger "net" income than he received in civilian life and if so, one could not say that his ability to pay "is materially impaired" by his service and therefore he must pay his taxes. The internal revenue department, on the other hand, has promised to be "reasonable" and to make every possible concession to the wives of men in service.

D. A. T. writes: "Last June I applied thru my draft board for volunteer officer's training. This morning I received a card notifying me that I had been placed in 1-A. Can I appeal from this classification?"

ANSWER: You probably do not realize that you must be classified 1-A before you can be sent into the army to receive this training. If you do not qualify during your training, you will be returned to civilian life to take your turn in the draft.

K. H. Writes: "I enlisted in the army reserve corps, private unassigned, deferred from active duty until June, 1944, to finish my college education. Is it possible for me to receive any type of basic military training while going to school?"

ANSWER: College students who are members of the army enlisted reserve will be called to active military duty as soon as they reach the minimum age of 20 and/or the end of the present college term or semester beginning in September, which ever occurs first.

PLAN MORE RADIO BROADCASTS FOR YANKS IN BRITAIN

Soldiers Want Latest in News and Sports.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 1 [By air mail].—Development of radio facilities for United States army camps thruout the British Isles is now under way with the aim of giving the troops several hours of American news, sports, and comedy broadcasts every day. The army and the London branch of the United States Office of War Information are coöperating in planning this entertainment.

James P. Warburg, acting director of the OWI here, said a large radio receiving set, equipped with a public address system, will be placed in each camp. Transmitting will be thru the British Broadcasting corporation.

Yanks Want Sports News.

"We've had a navy yeoman giving a few minutes of baseball results each day," Warburg said, "but the boys don't care for this particularly. They'd rather have Bob Elson or Red Barber. We can't give them those men, but we'll do the best we can. There are big demands for up to date news of such baseball clubs as the Cubs, the Dodgers, and the Yankees.

"It may be possible to get some radio comedians over here, but our best plan right now seems to be to record their broadcasts in America, fly the records to London, and have the B. B. C. put them on the air.

"We also hope to make recordings of broadcasts of big sports events in America this fall and winter and have the records played here."

OWI Aids Radio.

The OWI has placed itself at the disposal of Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of United States forces in the European theater. In addition to functioning with the army on the radio plan, the OWI is also assisting the army in public relations and in the political warfare campaign. The latter involves transmission of united nations propaganda to the axis countries and occupied France.

Other OWI executives aiding Warburg in these fields are William Hales, administrative officer of the London branch, James Reston, head of the public information division, and Richard Hollander, head of the political warfare division. The three are former Washington, D. C., newspapermen.

U. S. MISTREATS, TORTURES JAPS, SAYS TOKIO RADIO

Claims Its Internees Enjoy an 'Almost Normal Life.'

[The obvious falsity of Japanese propaganda, as evidenced in the following dispatch, has been shown by the statements of returned American diplomatic officials that they were abused and mistreated in Japanese concentration camps. On the other hand, Japs interned in the United States are housed in special camps, where they have family homes and many conveniences of American cities. Jap diplomatic officials were quartered in luxurious hotels before being exchanged.]

BY JACK TURCOTT.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA, Sept. 12.—For the third successive day, Radio Tokio tonight assailed America's "bankruptcy of human decency" because of the alleged mistreatment and torture of Japanese internees and evacuees. The charges against the United States, played up as a contrast to the "almost normal life" enjoyed by thousands of American and British prisoners in Japanese concentration camps in Shanghai, were aired in an English language broadcast beamed to Australia.

The broadcast accused American authorities of treating Japanese diplomats and merchants like criminals, throwing dozens of respected persons into tiny cells not fit for more than two persons; of beating elderly Japanese unconscious because they refused to spy on suspected Americans, and of inflicting metal torture, as a result of which prominent Japanese residents of California have gone insane.

Charge Diplomats Were Stripped.

Another charge was that Japanese diplomats and newspapermen were stripped and searched, without regard to their age, sex, or station, before being allowed to leave the United States.

The Tokio radio said American officials withheld personal property, including watches and clothing, of Japanese being evacuated from defense areas. The broadcast defied the American government to justify its violation of international agreements before "the world court of humanity."

Japs Accuse "Propagandists."

Contrasting this alleged treatment of Japanese by America, the radio said that United States citizens in occupied areas of the orient are treated with the courtesy demanded by international pacts. Americans and British living in Shanghai "still dance and sing with almost complete freedom," the broadcast said.

The radio said that reports of statements by Americans arriving home in the United States from the orient, assailing Japanese cruelty to prisoners, emanate from propagandists "peddling lies that contrast strangely with the thanks expressed by the same individuals for their excellent treatment before leaving Japanese-controled areas."

The broadcast warned that Japan is in a position to retaliate, because of the large number of Americans held in occupied countries.

MARRY A JAP IN MANILA, $1; WED A FILIPINO, $250

Miami, Fla., Sept. 12 (AP).—A former Cuban consular agent who spent six months in Manila after Japanese occupation says the Japanese charge a Filipino 500 pesos [$250] for a license to marry another Filipino, but only two pesos [$1.00] for a license to marry a Japanese.

This, Dr. Angel Bu Sotteolengo said here, is one way the Japanese are pressing their "Asia for the Asiatics" program in the Philippines. Dr. Sotteolengo formerly was consular agent at Hongkong.

"The Japanese shot eight Chinese consular officials of the Chungking government in Manila, including the consul general," the Cuban agent said. "They also killed 25 Chinese of the China relief society." Dr. Bu Sotteolengo came to the United States aboard the exchange ship Gripsholm.

'Bloodthirsty Little Devil' He Calls Hero Son

DURBAN, Union of South Africa, Sept. 12 (AP).—"A bloodthirsty little devil, isn't he," commented the father of Sergt. Quentin Smythe today when informed that his son had won the first Victoria cross awarded to a South African in this war. Smythe was said in his citation yesterday to have taken command of his platoon when its officer was shot and then stalked and destroyed a machine gun nest.

PAUSE TO HONOR AN OLD SOLDIER: PERSHING AT 82

Marshall, MacArthur Send Messages.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—The nation's military leaders turned from war duties tonight to honor Gen. John J. Pershing on the eve of his birthday. The commander of the American expeditionary force in the last war will be 82 tomorrow.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson told the ageing, but alert, general that his name and career "mean even more" with the country again at war.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, wrote Pershing that "the example of your greatness shines like a light to guide us thru troubled days ahead." Gen. Douglas MacArthur cabled "devoted greetings" from his Southwest Pacific headquarters.

Many from Subordinates.

Other messages came from subordinate commanders of the AEF, many of them long since retired.

Pershing, who lives quietly in Walter Reed hospital, said in a statement issued thru the war department:

"The greetings I have received from the men who are readying our present day army for combat are cheering to an American soldier. They are gratifying not only because of their messages of personal friendship, but because of their undercurrent of sober determination at a time when our country is faced with the grimmest challenge in the long history of its fight to achieve freedom, and to keep it.

Cheerful Over Outlook.

"My birthday is made a happy one by the knowledge that the building of American victory is entrusted to strong hands, clear minds, and resolute hearts."

Pershing, who is in fragile health, probably will confine his birthday observance to receiving a few visitors.

Maj. Gen. Harold B. Fiske, retired, who was in charge of AEF training, expressed the hope that "another great commander with some part of the technical genius, courage, and determination of Pershing may be found leading our troops into battle when the crisis comes."

NEW SHIPMENT OF PORT, SHERRY REACHES BRITAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Port and sherry lovers of Britain were encouraged today by news that a shipment of 115,000 gallons of port and 108,000 gallons of sherry soon will be on sale. By an agreement between the government and the Wine and Spirit Trades association, the port is to be sold at the controled retail price of 12 shillings [about $2.40] a bottle, and the sherry at 13 shillings [about $2.60]. Half of the original quota of sherry was lost, it is now revealed, when the ship bringing it from Spain was sunk in the Bay of Biscay.

Melody at Dusk

Man's life is an alternating day and night—the sheer joy of living and then the shadow of doubt. One moment he scales the peaks of exultation; the next, perhaps, he is enveloped in dark despair.

Part of the glory of Music is its power to alter such disquieting moods. . . . The symphony, the concerto, the dance as interpreted by Capehart can create fresh hope, bring new courage to a war-weary world.

The Capehart laboratories and factories that have formerly fashioned these marvelous radio-phonographs are now devoted to the building of materiel for the winning of the war. Lyon & Healy's Capehart Salon still offers a wide selection of different models. Capehart-Panamuse phonograph-radios are priced from $179.50; De luxe Capeharts, from $595.

RAF'S NEW 'TRAIN BUSTERS' CRIPPLE NAZI RAIL LINES

Shoot Up Engines and Cars in Night Raids.

LONDON, Sept. 13 [Sunday]—(AP).—The RAF disclosed something new and destructive today in its offensive against Hitler—squadrons of night prowling trainwreckers whose "engine shooting" sorties have put a big crimp in German internal transportation.

The first night these cannon packing Hurricanes were out on their specific mission 23 trains were attacked, the air ministry reported. Some of the locomotives were blown sky high and long strings of cars laden with inflammable war materials were destroyed.

The aerial trainwrecking expeditions are in addition to the regular bombardment of German and German controled transportation systems and the two combined were declared to have caused tremendous disorganization of Germany's overburdened rail facilities.

Nazis Threaten Reprisals.

The Nazi radio yesterday threatened heavy reprisals for the royal air force's devastating assault on Duesseldorf Thursday night, promising counter-raids exceeding the massed attacks on Britain in the winter of 1940-'41.

"We shall not fail to give the answer to our enemy," declared Col. Gertz, a Nazi air force spokesman. "Extensive raids on an unprecedented scale will be launched against the British by heavy new bombers."

Gertz said Germany has strengthened its air force in the west heavily in the last two weeks.

Despite the German threats, there was no sign of increased Nazi aerial activity over Britain Friday night. The government said a few enemy planes flew over the coast of East Anglia but that no bombings had been reported.

Goebbels Changes His Tune.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Paul Joseph Goebbels used to call RAF attacks "nuisance raids," but the British radio reported today that the rising crescendo of British bombings on Germany has forced the Nazi propaganda minister to change his line.

As proof, the BBC, heard here, quoted this sentence from a piece Goebbels wrote in the periodical Das Reich:

"The war is entering a more urgent phase. All citizens in Cologne, Hamburg, Duesseldorf, and other cities must help in such jobs as removing incendiary bombs from the rooftops. Normal organization is upset by the scale of the royal air force raids."

ONCE OUTCAST, DIES AS HERO AND EARNS V. C.

Town Honors Family as Mother Relents.

NEWCASTLE, England, Sept. 12 (AP).—Adam Wakenshaw was a dead-end kid in a dingy industrial district of Newcastle and the most troublesome of a widowed mother's 13 sons.

Even when he grew up and went off to war she told him bluntly that she would not miss him.

But today his drab dwelling is one of the proudest homes in England for the lord mayor of Newcastle and his entourage called there to pay respects to Adam's widow and their 3 year old daughter.

Awarded Coveted V. C.

The lord mayor told the widow she would find solace in her loss in the knowledge that Adam died in gallantry so outstanding that he won the Victoria cross, Britain's most coveted war decoration.

Adam was with the Durham light infantry at Matruh in the Libyan desert. In one of his letters home he wrote his mother, "I am sorry for all the trouble I caused you . . . you said you would not miss me but you will."

Fights on Alone.

The enemy attacked his anti-tank gun. All of Adam's crewmates were killed or wounded. Adam's own left arm was almost blown off but, one-handed, he loaded and fired his gun five times. Wounded again, he had dragged himself back to fire still another time when a direct hit smashed the gun and killed him.

What probably would have given Adam satisfaction equal to his decoration was his mother's forgiveness.

"He was a wild lad," she said, "but there never was any real harm in him.

LULL SETTLES OVER CHINA FRONT; JAPS STILL HOLD KINHWA

CHUNGKING, China, Sept. 12 (AP).—A lull settled on the whole China front today with the Chinese high command reporting the only action, and that of a minor nature, on the far northwestern front of Suiyuan.

The stalemate in the eastern seaboard province of Chekiang persisted, with Japanese still holding Kinhwa and Lanchi firmly.

In Suiyuan, the Chinese said, Japanese troops stationed at Anpei made repeated attacks on Kaotailiang and other points but were repulsed. Observers said they did not believe any special significance was to be attached to these attacks.

ARMY 'POPS UP' TO GUARD VITAL POINTS IN VICHY

Merely 'Practice,' French Authorities Say.

VICHY, France, Sept. 12 (AP).—Springing up at dawn and without any warning, soldiers and police manned machine guns at strategic points in Vichy today and heavily guarded all government buildings and diplomatic hotels in mysterious maneuvers which authorities dismissed as mere practice.

Whatever the reason for the bristling of a rms all over the city, it was noted that the guns were pointed at roads leading into Marshall Petain's capital city.

Mass at Airfield.

Up to 10:30 a. m. soldiers with full machine gun equipment guarded the postoffice which also houses the telephone exchange, the railway stations, and bridges and roads into the city.

Outside the city, from which Chief of State Petain was absent on a tour of the unoccupied area, soldiers were massed at strategic spots—heavily at the airfield.

There was popular speculation as to whether a serious internal difficulty was expected but authorities explained that it was practice to test a plan to cope with any possible disorders which might be directed against Petain's government or the town.

Sees U. S. Representative.

Chief of Government Pierre Laval saw S. Pinkney Tuck, United States chargé d'affaires, today, presumably to hand him his promised protest to Washington, D. C., against the attack on Madagascar.

Laval also consulted Krug von Nidda, German consul general; Vice Adm. Auphan, naval secretary and commander of the French naval forces; former Colonial Minister Platon, and former Gov. Giaccobi of French Guinea.

Petain spoke to workers in the railroad city of Amberieu, in the Ain department, telling them that RAF strafings of trains in the occupied zone were "massacres." The old marshal said his "heart rises up" at the thought of such actions.

CAROLINA CAMP TO TRAIN NEGRO MARINE UNITS

New River, N. C., Sept. 12 [Special].—The first Negroes to be enlisted in the United States marine corps will be trained here as infantry and antiaircraft troops, Col. Samuel A. Woods Jr., commanding officer, announced today.

Thus far 109 recruits have arrived at the nation's only Negro marine camp and 130 are expected next week. Col. Woods said the authorized 1,200 will have been enrolled by fall. They will form the 51st composite defense battalion.

128 Reach Virginia School.

Hampton, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—A group of 128 young Negro seamen, fresh from basic training at the Great Lakes Naval Training station and selected as candidates for specialists' ratings in the navy, reached Hampton institute today for 16 weeks of training in the naval school at the Negro college. The school is scheduled to turn out more than 1,000 electricians, metal smiths, carpenters, and Diesel engine machinists each year.

PALS OF SLAIN PILOT SEND HIS BABY $1,100 BONDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Sept. 12.—Three months old Carol Ann Oelberg, living with her widowed mother in Sumner, Ia., is to receive $1,100 in war bonds, the gift of officers and men of a navy patrol squadron in Puerto Rico to which her father, the late Thomas Oelberg, aviation pilot, belonged.

Oelberg never saw Carol Ann, but a cable telling her birth came on the day last May when the plane he piloted sank an enemy submarine in the Caribbean. The pilot called it his lucky day. A few weeks later he was killed in the line of duty.

Lieut. Comm. Allan Smith Jr., commanding the squadron, wrote Mrs. Oelberg that the idea to do something for the pilot was the men's and that the contributions were made voluntarily. "It is the men's wish that when the bonds mature, the money be used for Carol Ann's benefit and education. I am sure you feel the same pride in receiving it as I do in sending it," he said.

SHATTER RECORD FOR ENLISTMENT OF NAVAL CADETS

76 Recruited in Day; Total Up to 1,402.

All national daily enlistment records were shattered by the Chicago naval aviation cadet selection board yesterday when 76 youths who will be trained as fighting pilots were sworn in. The enlistments raised the total for the intensive "Fly for Navy" drive to 1,402.

The Chicago board, leading the nation's 15 boards for accepted cadets, had set a daily enlistment record of 69 on Sept. 3. Yesterday, the new cadets and 300 other youths who appeared for examinations taxed the facilities of the board offices in the Board of Trade building.

Goal Set at 2,000.

Lieut. Comm. Carl G. Olson, senior board member, reported enlistments for the drive, which started Aug. 1, are running well ahead of expectations. The goal is 2,000 accepted cadets by the end of this month.

One of the record breaking group of flight candidates was James L. Fallon, 24 years old, 5741 Kenmore avenue, who had studied six years for the Roman Catholic priesthood before he decided he wanted "to fight against an unjust aggression."

Fallon, who came to Chicago from Denver in 1941 to become national director for colleges of the America First committee, studied at St. Thomas seminary in Denver. A graduate of Regis college, Denver, Fallon had been an all-state parochial basketball center at a Colorado Springs high school.

Surmount Age Barriers.

Maximum and minimum age limits of cadets barely allowed two to win acceptance. John W. Axelson, 7416 Phillips avenue, a metallurgist who will become 27 years old Nov. 2, just got in under the maximum age barrier.

Alfred Balasi, 55 West Erie street, a De Paul academy graduate and son of a Hungarian army veteran, will not reach the minimum age limit of 18 until next Friday, but the board made arrangements for him to start his cadet days on his birthday.

The army aviation cadet selection board in Chicago reported 43 more men qualified for enlistment yesterday, bringing the board's 20,000 man drive figures to 10,160 enrolled since Sept. 1, 1941. The army cadet drive is scheduled to close Jan. 1.

Second Twin in Service.

Willard Livingston, 21 years old, 1970 Evergreen avenue, whose twin, Wilbur, is serving with the air forces ordnance department at San Diego, followed his brother into service as an aviation cadet. Wilbur, who is married, volunteered the day after Pearl Harbor. Willard waited for the birth of his son, James Willard, which occurred July 29.

One thousand men attending the naval operators school on the Northwestern university campus were reviewed yesterday by Lieut. Comm. Smith D. A. Cobb, director of the school, and President Franklyn B. Snyder of Northwestern. Dressed in white summer uniforms, the men paraded in the first review of the complete group on the meadow in front of the Deering library.

HULL DENOUNCES NAZI OPPRESSION IN LUXEMBOURG

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 [Special].—Secretary of State Cordell Hull denounced the attempt of Adolf Hitler to incorporate Luxembourg in the reich and to impose conscription into the German army of the people of the grand duchy in a note tonight to Hugues Le Gallais, the Luxembourg minister here.

Hull declared that German force and cruelty may crush the strike, but it can never crush the "indomitable spirit" of the people of Luxembourg. The American people, he said, were confident that the spirit of the youth of that country "will always remain that of free men."

WAACS WARNED: BE SOLDIERS, NOT GLAMOR GIRLS!

242 Commissioned; Told of Serious Task Ahead.

Fort Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 12 (AP).—There is no glamor to being a woman soldier, and the thrills and adventures must remain "strictly private" property of the one who experienced them, the WAACs were told today by a British woman military officer.

Squadron Officer K. C. Hunt [top] and Third Officer C. T. Tupper.

Squadron Officer Kathleen C. Hunt of the British women's auxiliary air force told 242 graduating officer candidates of the women's army auxiliary corps that the safety of their country would depend in a large part on the manner in which the women soldiers do their jobs and, among other things, keep their military secrets.

GOV. GREEN TALKS AT DEDICATION OF GIANT POLICE CAR

Crime Laboratory Dubbed 'Hell on Wheels.'

The state's new mobile crime laboratory—"Hell on Wheels" to criminals, police called it—was christened yesterday at the Congress street plaza on Michigan avenue.

Mrs. Dwight H. Green, wife of the governor, smashed a bottle of water on the nose of the 16 ton monster and dubbed it "Illinois State police." Her husband told a crowd of several hundred why the vehicle was built:

"This rolling unit—the first crime detection laboratory on wheels in police history—is equipped with every chemical, research, radio and photographic device and facility known to crime detection.

Speeds Pursuit of Criminals.

"Made available without cost to city and county law enforcement officials, we expect this mobile foe of crime to be so successful that the use of units like it will spread over the nation. Sometimes crime has a long start on the law, but this laboratory should place the law so close upon the heels of criminals that their detection and capture should be speedy.'"

The laboratory, which looks like a cross country bus, is 11 feet high and seven feet wide. It has a top speed of 60 miles an hour; its body is armor plated and its windows are of bullet proof glass.

Tells How It Will Be Used.

T. P. Sullivan, state director of public safety and one of the designers of the vehicle, which he said cost $25,000, explained why it will be "Hell on wheels" to criminals.

"Suppose that thugs are seen dumping a body into a river. We're notified and at 60 miles an hour we head for the scene.

"One of our men, in the lab's diving equipment, recovers the body. Others take plaster casts of footprints before the rain washes them away. Witnesses make their statements into a recording device.

"Any suspects who have been collared," he continued, "can be grilled, their clothing and persons examined for clews, and they can be given the lie detector test.

"In the meantime the laboratory is in constant two way contact by radio with state police headquarters. And a statewide alarm for a fugitive could be given in seconds."

FBI UNEARTHS SECOND $50,000 ARIANI CACHE

Ex-Chicago Banker's Treasure Seized.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 12 [Special].—Another $50,000 cache was recovered today by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation seeking concealed assets in bankruptcy of the Ariani family's collapsed First Italian State bank of Chicago.

Opening a safe deposit box in a downtown bank with a key found in possession of Saverio Ariani, ex-president of the bank who was arrested here Sept. 4 with his wife and two sons after an 11 year hunt, the agents recovered:

Two thousand dollars in currency; $10,000 worth of United States government bonds; $2,000 in railway equipment and realty bonds; 606 shares of miscellaneous stock certificates, four diamond rings, two gold bracelets, three gold watches, and two diamond lavallieres.

Equals Earlier Find.

The new treasure trove, agents estimated, would equal or exceed in value the $48,300 in cash and securities found in a wall safe in the Ariani home at the time of their arrest on charges of conspiracy to conceal bank assets and embezzlement of $155,000.

The safe deposit box had been rented in the name of "Lena or Thomas O. Perry."

Of the 606 miscellaneous stock certificates, 223 had been issued prior to Oct. 3, 1931, the date of the bankruptcy petition.

Most certificates were in Saverio Ariani's name. Others were in the name of his sons, Romolo and Carlo Ariani, and in the name of "Mary Ovviani," one of the known aliases of Ariani's wife, Mrs. Minnie Ariani.

Study Bank Accounts.

Coincident with the raid on the safe deposit box, a squad of FBI accountants, J. L. Pieper, local FBI chief, announced, was checking records of about 25 brokerage and bank accounts held under the correct names of the Arianis and some 35 aliases.

Mrs. Ariani and her sons are at liberty on $5,000 bond each. The 65 year old head of the family is held in lieu of $25,000 bail pending a hearing Sept. 24 on an order for removal of the four to Chicago for trial.

Meantime Fred E. Hemmul of Chicago, trustee of Ariani's estate, obtained from Federal Judge St. Sure an order for bankruptcy proceedings against Ariani, and a hearing was set for Wednesday by Burton E. Wymun, referee in bankruptcy.

He reached the nest, touched a wire, and was knocked to the street, 15 feet below. He died of his injuries.

JUDGE'S SON ROBBED.

STATE PRAISED FOR VOLUNTARY BOND PURCHASES

Voluntary war bond buying was "highly satisfactory" in Illinois during May, June, July, and August, Norman Collins, state war savings chief, said yesterday. He released figures showing that the state's purchases were $229,950,000 or 90 per cent of the $256,800,000 quota.

"That we have come so close to the goal demonstrates the voluntary system is sound," Collins said. "A tribute is due the thousands of men and women in the state who are devoting themselves to the sale of war bonds."

HUNT FOR CLEWS IN DROWNING OF CHICAGO WOMAN

Wisconsin authorities yesterday pressed their investigation into the mysterious drowning Thursday of Mrs. Imogene Schroeder of Chicago, 42 year old wife of Henry Schroeder, 800 Eastwood avenue, 84, a retired druggist.

Mrs. Schroder's body, clad in a bathing suit, was found in the shallow waters of a Lake Michigan beach, near Manitowoc.

The unlighted beach is at the foot of a driveway off the Manitowoc-Two Rivers highway.

Mrs. Schroeder's automobile was found parked just off the driveway, near the spot where the body was recovered.

When notified that the body had been found, members of Mrs. Schroeder's family in Chicago expressed surprise that she had driven the 200 miles to Manitowoc.

Coroner Theodore Tietjen of Manitowoc county asserted that several residents of Manitowoc have reported to him that they had seen Mrs. Schroeder in the Wisconsin city on previous occasions.

MILITARY TRAINING AT EIGHTEEN.

Sen. Chan Gurney's bill to lower the draft age to include the years of 18 and 19 has many merits which may overcome what may be the spontaneous objections to it. Parents may think that an 18 year old son, or even a 19 year old, is too immature, too recently a child, to be taken into the army, altho the boys of that age are received into the navy and no one thinks they are too young.

Sen. Gurney suggests that such objectors consider the fact that it is the purpose of the bill to give long term training to these young men. Unless it is a long war they are unlikely to be on the battlefield, and if they are there they will have the advantage of knowing what is expected of them. They will be better protected and they may be spared the casualties to which inexperienced and half trained troops are exposed, as so many of the fresh American levies were in the other war. Then it was regarded as a national misfortune that American troops were thrown into the decisive actions of 1918 with less than three months' preparation for the severest of all the battles of the allied offensive.

For a majority of young men the ages of 18 and 19 find military service most acceptable. They are young enough to have a desire for new experiences. They are at the ages when such training makes the least interference with their future. They have not yet made arrangements which are seriously disrupted by new claims on their time and energy. With the proper training they make the best of soldiers.

There is some hope that after this war the United States will not again return to its traditional carelessness regarding its national defense. It is natural to believe that some checks can be found which will prevent the recurrence of such mad and catastrophic conflicts. It would seem that the world must want a long breathing spell and, of course, there will be people convinced that mechanisms can be set up to enforce a perpetual peace. There will be another quest for universal disarmament. That was sought after the other war, but conflicting national interests prevented any accomplishment. What will happen this time we don't know, but it would be reasonable for the United States to give its young men, at the proper age, training for what may be necessary.

It has been urged that such training has its extremely valuable peacetime benefits. It requires a physical survey of the nation's youth. It gives, or ought to give if properly administered, a sense of responsibility. It need not take time essential to the future life of the citizen, to his education, to his preparation for his place in the community. Without being a menace to peace, military training of the young men would be a corrective of some of the defects of pacifism.

The country will have all the equipment for military training when it comes out of this war, and it would seem folly to scrap the entire institution so expensively created and return to the indifference which so soon prevailed after the other war.

If the young men of 18 and 19 were taken for training now, the country would become accustomed to such education and might find that it fitted very well into most of the purposes of American life.

THE MEN WHO BENEFIT FROM VIOLENCE.

The Illinois Appellate court has held that officers of the Chicago union of milk wagon drivers must be punished for violence committed during a strike even tho no witnesses connected them personally with the acts of violence. The reasoning by which Judges Matchett, McSurely, and O'Connor reached this opinion will have a wide public appeal.

The circumstances were these: The union was conducting a strike against a suburban milk dealer. Acts of violence were committed and in consequence an injunction was issued restraining the officers and members of the union from further violence. When the violence continued the officers were cited for contempt of court, for violation of the injunction. Judge John C. Lewe held that since no witness testified that any of the three officials had taken part in the violent acts, they could not be punished.

It is this ruling that has been reversed, with instructions to Judge Lewe to impose proper punishment. In the words of the Appellate court: "All this violence came about as a part of a movement the defendants designed and of which they were a part. The arrangements were made with military precision. . . . The trial judge seemed to be of the opinion it was necessary for the plaintiffs to show that the respondents had themselves personally and openly participated in acts of violence. This is not the law. They who plan, aid, and abet are also responsible."

Obviously, when responsibility is apportioned among members of a union for lawbreaking of any sort, a major share of it must go to the officers. They are the leaders. They should be a restraining influence on hotheads. To say that they may plot violent acts, but thereafter escape punishment because they found men of more courage and less wit to do the dirty work, is repugnant to any one's sense of justice.

Very often strikes and violence may be to the benefit of the union official, but not to the union member. The milk wagon drivers' situation is in point. Employment in this field is constantly decreasing, because of marketing changes over which the union has no control and which it cannot reverse. At present this probably is not a matter of serious concern to the union members. If they were wise they would utilize existing conditions to place themselves in other jobs. It is, however, a matter of real concern to the union officers, for a decline in membership means a decline in dues collections and political power within the trade union structure.

These conditions are not peculiar to the milk drivers. They apply to a wide variety of unions, including many whose officers are faithful to their trust in fiscal matters, but quite willing to abuse their members' interests and engage the union in unlawful acts to bolster or increase personal power. Interpretations of the law that place the responsibility for these unlawful acts on the men who profit by them will benefit both trade unions and the public.

A LAW REWARDING INEFFICIENCY.

The Illinois Manufacturers' association is the latest group in industry to urge repeal of public law 528, which authorizes the government to renegotiate war contracts. The attention of congress was called to the effects of this law some time ago by James B. Hawley Jr., president of the Northern Pump company of Minneapolis, the largest private producer of naval ordnance machinery in the country. Mr. Hawley has made out a sound case against the law and there is little doubt that the war effort could be improved by striking it from the books.

The great evil of contract renegotiation is that, by putting a premium on inefficient production methods, it slows down the output of war material. The law inevitably forces the manufacturer on the justly condemned basis of cost plus a fixed fee, which brought scandalous abuses in the first World war. The renegotiation law thus tends to become self-defeating. It is intended to save the government money, but, by forcing the manufacturer on cost plus, it encourages him to adopt slow and inefficient methods which raise costs. Because his profit will be based on a percentage of total cost, the higher his costs become, the greater will be his profit return.

Mr. Hawley points out that the law would be unnecessary if the tax law limited war profit to a small percentage after payment of federal taxes. The manufacturer, he says, would then have every incentive to finish his contracts in the shortest possible time and at the lowest possible cost. But, as the renegotiation law operates, a manufacturer knows that if he performs a job for the government efficiently, a price adjustment board will step in and penalize him for his efficiency by taking away most of the profits he would have had under his contract.

This forces him to diminish shipments so as to maintain high costs, as the alternative to having his contract price cut as soon as he reaches peak efficiency. "War machinery production has declined since the renegotiation law was passed," Mr. Hawley has told congress. "Renegotiation has made all of the efficient, fixed price contractors who are the backbone of production operate on a cost plus basis, thereby wrecking normal, established procedure. If you desire to bankrupt the nation and lose the war, keep public law 528, thereby placing all war contracts on a cost plus a percentage of costs basis. This war will require a hundred times as much machinery as did the last war, and if this machinery must be produced on the old cost plus basis under 528, inflation is inevitable."

The obstructive features of the law do not end there. The war contractor is continually harassed by never ending audits intended to determine whether he stands the chance of making a profit under his contract. All contracts with the government become worthless. A price adjustment can be made at any time until three years after the war ends on any contract. No firm therefore can ever be certain where it stands. It cannot vote dividends with any feeling of certainty that the profits on which they are based will not be wiped out by subsequent renegotiation.

Congress should seize the first opportunity to ditch this law and put war production and the taxes and profits of industry on a rational basis.

THE GALAPAGOS BASE.

Ecuador's defense minister, Col. Roberto Romero, has announced that United States troops have been permitted to occupy bases in Ecuador itself and on the Galapagos Islands. If either or both these positions had fallen into enemy hands the Pacific approaches to the Panama canal would have been imperiled. In our possession the bases should prove of great value in preventing raids by sea or air upon the canal and the shipping which passes thru it.

It was for these reasons that many years before the present war was started THE TRIBUNE urged repeatedly that the state department negotiate with Ecuador for the purchase of the Galapagos Islands. They were of negligible economic value to Ecuador; the population of the whole group is said to be no more than 500. Zoölogists and botanists occasionally organized expeditions to bring back specimens of the queer animals and plants native to the islands and from time to time stories were told of eccentric characters who had settled on these lonely shores, but otherwise the islands were of interest only to naval strategists. Seaplanes can be based there and perhaps an airport can be constructed, tho the islands are rugged. The water in the principal harbor is very deep, but anchorages can be found.

With seaplanes and perhaps some small warships based on the mainland and in the islands, the United States can now pretty effectively patrol the Pacific off Panama. It will now be a good deal more difficult for a raiding aircraft carrier to approach the canal undetected. Ecuador had nothing to lose in granting us permission to make use of the Galapagos Islands, and both Ecuador and the United States had much to gain, for an enemy which can threaten the canal can also threaten Ecuador.

The arrangement is, therefore, mutually advantageous and will remain so after the war. It is to be hoped that the acquisition will be made permanent thru the purchase of the Galapagos bases. Our stake in the canal is so great that we cannot feel comfortable if islands commanding it are left open to enemy attack and occupation.

TWO HANDS FOR EXPERTS.

The United States lawn tennis championship almost went to a South American this year for the first time in history. Francisco [Pancho] Segura of Ecuador appeared at Forest Hills with an almost unbeatable record on the clay courts and a new trick up his sleeve—or, more accurately, up both sleeves. He employed a two handed forehand drive with so much power that even the most skilled of his adversaries were intimidated.

Señor Segura packed such a wallop when he swung with both hands that hardly anybody could handle his stuff on clay. He won four successive clay court championships. On grass courts he wasn't quite as good. He had been beaten at Southampton before he came to Forest Hills, but he was beginning to get the hang of the new milieu by the time he came to the national tournament.

As he knocked off one opponent after another, the galleries began to recall other pioneers. There was Maurice McLaughlin, who came out of California with the cannon ball serve. Old timers say the ball screeched as it came off the court after a McLaughlin smash. Señor Segura had something of the same steam in his shots. This two handed business, admittedly, wasn't exactly new. The Australians, Jack Bromwich and Vivian McGrath, had tried it out a couple of years ago. But, definitely, in the Segura version, something new had been added.

Not until the señor coasted into the semi-finals was it discovered that he had an Achilles elbow. It had been noted that he favored his two handed drive so much that he even ran around the ball to take it on his strong side. The indicated strategy was to force him on to his backhand, and that's just what Frankie Parker did. The señor was shortly at Parker's mercy, as the sports writers put it.

Perhaps the moral is that the indomitable Pancho should take up golf. They can't get on the wrong side of you in that game.

The optimist says the first frost will kill off the mosquitoes. The pessimist says it will only drive 'em into the house to stay all winter.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

EUROPE TIGHTENS ITS BELT

BY FRANK BRUTTO.

BERNE, Switzerland [Wide World].—The peoples of Europe, most of them under the domination of Adolf Hitler, approach the winter with an anxious eye on the larder and a further tightening of the belt.

Dispatches from axis lands to the Swiss press, stories of travelers, official restrictions and broadcasts produce a picture of a continent on which, while relatively few face death by starvation, the cumulative effects of malnutrition are even more widely felt.

This does not add up to any forecast of an early hunger induced collapse. But rations are being cut, governments are tightening their grip on food supplies; farmers are exhorted, cajoled, promised rewards, or threatened in the struggle to get more food.

Following are some of the highlights of the continental picture:

The Berne newspaper Tagwacht quoted a traveler from Germany as saying many living in western Germany are suffering from lack of vegetables and that undernourishment is a common ailment.

"It is a great error to believe Germany will experience an internal revolution," this traveler said. "There no longer is the power of resistance [to the Nazi régime]."

Fascist officials have announced that Italy's wheat crop exceeded last year's—but at the same time they reduced the spaghetti allotment from 70 to 50 grams [from 2.46 to 1.76 ounces] daily while the bread ration remains 150 grams [5.29 ounces], one of the lowest in all Europe. The Italian radio is beginning its news programs with an appeal to farmers' patriotism to deliver all grain to state authorities.

Rumania, once a grain exporter, has served notice that she will need all of her crop for home needs. Hungary has made a similar declaration.

Germany's foreign workers—now estimated to number 5,000,000—are increasing her food problem. A Berlin dispatch said Nazi officials were considering erecting public kitchens for mass feeding.

The last two unusually cold winters wrought havoc with Germany's fruit trees which, since 1933, had been increased 50 per cent. The Wiener Tageblatt reported that 80 per cent of plums, peaches, and cherries had been destroyed and several years would be required to build up the orchards.

France, whose population is estimated to have lost an average of 11 pounds a person since the German occupation, is experiencing increased woes. A Vichy report said conditions in the country had created a "hunger psychosis."

Twelve to 15 million persons in France, the minister of agriculture has announced, are depending solely on food cards which were described as protecting adults but were insufficient for children. Further restrictions, he said, would be catastrophic.

Public feeding kitchens were reported being built in urban centers.

In Hungary the people have been warned that sharp measures will be taken against black marketers. The weekly meat ration was cut to 150 grams of beef and 120 grams for Jews, who get no meat, and the fat allotment also was reduced.

In the Netherlands the last winter damaged forage crops and cattle herds must be reduced.

MEXICO'S AIR PLANS

BY WILLIAM D. PATTERSON.

MEXICO CITY [Wide World].—Whatever the war may bring to the western hemisphere, Mexico is dedicated to the principle of taking her own part, hammering the enemy wherever he may appear.

And in the van of an expanding military establishment is the Mexican air force under the direction of Gen. Robert Fierro.

"Mexican pilots are as good as any in the world," Fierro says. "When we have enough planes, we don't dip our wings to any one. We are beginning to get planes."

The force has drawn first blood in the war with the axis in a bombing attack on a U-boat off Tampico, an attack that damaged, perhaps sank, the undersea prowler. Mexican flyers are playing an increasingly important part in the anti-submarine campaign.

Fierro is thinking in terms of a force of 3,000 modern planes. In reaching that objective, he has the aid of President Avila Camacho who, Fierro says, "is enthusiastic and understands that the principal arm of a modern army is aviation."

Fierro has 3,000 flying hours to his credit, and he is not averse to putting on overalls in the repair shops and overhauling his own plane. Slight of stature, Fierro wears his uniform with a flair, and is brisk in movement, alert in manner.

He was born in Guerrero City, Chihuahua, on June 7, 1897. Before entering the army in 1917 at the age of 20, he worked as a mechanic, an interest that led him at the end of three years to the army air school. He was graduated with honors in 1922 to begin the brilliant career which has seen him steadily reappointed commander in chief of the air force.

During the 1929 revolution, Fierro was in command of the air detachments assigned to government troops attacking the rebel stronghold in Jimenez, Chihuahua. The general led a combination reconnaissance-bombing-strafing flight over Jimenez. As he swept low across the city, rifle bullets riddled his plane and smashed the motor. He managed to keep his wobbling craft in the air long enough to fly a few miles toward his own lines before crashing.

He flew and fought in all of Mexico's important revolutionary campaigns, and was decorated a number of times. Between campaigns he managed to make a nonstop flight from New York City to Mexico City in July, 1930.

He spends all the time that official business will permit in his workshop office. There, surrounded by plane models, plans, maps of Mexican air bases, and his staff, he prepares for the day when Mexico will be an important air power.

RELAX—DON'T WAIT FOR COLLAPSE.

THE ideal time to rest is when one is tired. If we could follow this rule, regardless of the cause of fatigue, we would increase our physical and mental efficiency. On the contrary, all too many stick to the oars until an illness or a breakdown forces a vacation.

We look upon the summer season as suitable because it permits us to get out of doors. Except for sunshine, however, it makes very little difference when the holiday is taken. But it is more helpful when the individual is either fed up with routine or exhausted to the point where an infection, such as tuberculosis, may move in.

Most of us pay the price of overwork because we forget that the physique can stand so much punishment and no more. I have a friend, a slave to his business. He puts in more hours than any two of his employés. In addition he carries a heavy load of responsibility. To my knowledge, he has allowed himself no relaxation for the last decade. What happened? Three bouts with pneumonia, one of which was so severe that he was confined to the hospital for nearly six weeks.

Despite these warnings he failed to change his program. A heart attack [coronary occlusion] has now transformed him into a semi-invalid. It will be a year at least before he will regain fair efficiency.

It is difficult to persuade a person who is in full possession of his physical powers that he cannot keep on forever. He will state truthfully that he finds fun and joy in his labors. Only when nature calls a halt with some ailment will he realize that his body is not made of everlasting material.

From the standpoint of the recovery of tired muscles and worn-out nerves—several intervals of two or three days each during the year, if used aright, will do far more than the total, combined into one vacation. Relaxation comes when it is needed. As we all know, the tissues will spring back to normal rather quickly if given a chance. The scriptural Sabbath gives us 52 days in each year. If we will add Saturday—and the tendency to do so is increasing—we will have a total of 104 days out of 365, which is a reasonable proportion.

The entire nation in this emergency must keep fit. Health is an asset which we cannot afford to dissipate. This means the observance of an accurate balance, age being considered, between work and play. The trouble is that all too few of us will recreate. With many, time off amounts to changing jobs. We employ the period to complete scores of tasks, each one of which may prove enervating.

We can find antidotes for worry and anxiety in a hobby, whether it be a walk in the woods, nature study, books, photography, stamps, or some form of handicraft. Ofttimes an inexpensive pursuit may be turned to real profit—lessening tension and providing stimulation for the imagination.

OLD FAITHFUL.

E. H. writes: My elderly aunt, who lives with us, has always suffered with a "weak" stomach. Every hour, day and night, she would emit raucous belches. Recently we took her to a specialist for an examination and he reported that there was nothing wrong with her digestive system but, like a windsucking horse, she had acquired the habit of using her stomach like a bellows to pump wind in and out at will. We were ready to murder him for insulting aunty but since that day—three months ago—she has been quiescent. And she eats like a horse now—but not the windsucking type. Is this unusual?

Not at all. As your wise physician told you, air swallowing is a habit.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Space for letters is obviously limited. Incoming mail far exceeds it. If a letter is not printed, attribute it to lack of room. Address letters to Voice of the People, THE TRIBUNE.

LIFE OF A GUNNER.

Tyndal Field, Panama City, Fla., Sept. 1.—I read so much about certain boys in the armed forces being fêted and treated so royally, and I have seen such a lot of pictures in magazines of soldiers and sailors dancing and dining with movie queens, that I imagine the public thinks that every one who wears a uniform lives the life of Riley—lots of night life and parties galore, with bevies of pretty girls handy all the time to hold your hand. I want the world to know it hasn't been that way for me and a lot of others. I have been in the army air corps three months, part of which was spent at Kessler field, Mississippi, with 80,000 other men, drilling in rain and mud, working in the lumber yard, digging ditches, going to bed at 9 p. m.; no passes in a month; no radio; only a piano near, with no one to play it.

Then I came here to be an aerial gunner, the toughest grind in the army, 15 miles from a tank town; again no passes, and sometimes I wonder what goes on in the outside world. On top of all this, I haven't been paid since I worked in Chicago. I have yet to get paid in the army. The following is a typical day at this gunnery school: Up at 5 a. m.; drill one hour; chow; classes in airplane recognition; learn to take apart and put back together again a 50 caliber machine gun; stud the turrets; fire the machine guns on the range; more classes; then, exercises, running, boxing, wrestling, jumping; more drill, then evening chow; then study, study, study, till 10 p. m.

When we graduate it will be with no fanfare. We will go to make up crews in bombers. I haven't heard from my mother and brother in two weeks. I'm lonesome and broke—so what? The world may never miss me, but I want it to know the army isn't all glamor. M. A.

NAVAL AVIATION CADET RECRUITING.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—I want to thank you in behalf of our naval aviation cadet selection board for all the assistance the members of your staff are giving us in our current "Fly for Navy" drive. The daily graph and stories in THE TRIBUNE, the two color pages, the induction ceremony at your splendid Chicago Music Festival, the All-Star game ceremonies the "Navy of the Sky" program, and the numerous announcements on W-G-N, all have been of immeasurable help in working toward the goal we wish to achieve.

We have just passed the half way mark in our drive to enlist 2,000 naval aviation cadets during August and September. Inasmuch as we are a bit behind schedule, we feel we must redouble our efforts this month. We are confident, however, that we will reach our goal with your continued support.

THE CHURCH IN WAR.

Elmhurst, Ill., Sept. 6.—May I pay my respects to your paper for your regard and acknowledgment of the church in printing the large picture called "Sanctuary" and the poem "Where Thousands Pass"? My regards to Mr. Orr.

DECLINE OF THE FREE LUNCH.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—Forty years ago this month, as a young man, I arrived in this glorious land. My very first day on State street proved to me that this was the "promised land." My uncle took me downtown to see the sights. Lunch hour came and he led me into a famous bar, ordering two beers, for which he paid 5 cents each. Then he led me across the room, where there were all kinds of good things to eat. We had lunch there, finished our beers, and stepped out. I could not help but point out to uncle that he had overlooked to pay for the food. "That," he said, "was all free."

"What a country!" I said to myself.

Yesterday I stepped into the same bar. At least, its name is the same. I ordered a sandwich from the food counter man. I was charged 18 cents for it. And the modest glass of beer I had with it cost me 10 cents.

In spite of this new order, I still am saying, "What a country!"

IN GRANDFATHER'S DAY.

Moline, Ill., Sept. 5.—"Another observer," in commenting on the shortage of farm labor, states, "Most farmers are working from 4 o'clock in the morning until 8 at night. How long will they be able to do that?" I don't know, but I do know that their fathers and grandfathers worked that many or more hours a day, and they did it from the time they were big enough to reach up to the handles of a walking plow until they retired around about 75 years of age or older. And they worked those hours without the aid of modern farm equipment as used by present day farmers.

SHOPPING HOURS.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—In times of stress like these, when so many women have gone out to work in an endeavor to help win the war, it seems to me that the women who stay at home all day could make some effort to get their marketing done before 5 o'clock at night. Don't they realize that most stores are shorthanded and that it is their patriotic duty to help relieve congestion by shopping early in order to leave the clerks free to wait on working women hurrying home to get dinner for their working families?

HELD UP BY ELECTION.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—About 14 months ago my husband took a civil service examination for labor foreman in the Chicago park district. What became of the examination results? Upon inquiring of the park district, my husband was told that the election in November is holding it up. What has the election to do with civil service lists being posted? VOTER.

WHY THE PRIORITY ON YOUTH?

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Despite a shortage of man power in wartime production, there is little competition among employers for the services of the worker who is beginning to shed his youth. Altho the older worker is not likely to steal the show in the matter of speed and agility, he is seldom missing at the roll call when judgment, experience, and reliability are in demand.

Many of those on the deferred employment list possess a commendable record of past achievements and are admirably fitted to fill jobs where there is little drain on physical strength and energy. In view of the fact that our country has signed up for an all-out war, it would seem well within the range of a rational policy to suspend or at least relax employment age restrictions for the duration. RICHARD B. HOAG.

SMALLER ALLOTMENTS FOR MOTHERS.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—I have learned that wives of service men with no children are receiving subsistence checks of $50 each month, while the aged mothers of service men are receiving a lesser sum. Isn't this unjust discrimination against the mothers who have reared sons to fight for Uncle Sam?

Few of the mothers are able to earn their own living, while the majority of the childless service men's wives are earning good salaries and in no sense can be classed as dependents. The situation seems utterly senseless to me, and in my opinion can only be accounted for by the fact that there are more votes among young wives. AGED MOTHER.

AIR CONDITIONITIS.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Judging from the complaining voices around me, I'm not the only one with air conditionitis. Movies especially are becoming less and less inviting during the summer. The cold currents of air, the difficulty of remembering to carry a coat to wear in the theater, and the shock of the heat of the street afterward are all common symptoms. Some victims emerge with a chill, or a sneeze, or are thoroly uncomfortable long after. Think, too, of the children sitting in a cold show house [sometimes 25 degrees cooler than the outside air] for three or four hours. I believe this should be corrected. MRS MELVIN BARG.

ARMY RADIO INSTRUCTORS.

Glen Ellyn, Ill., Sept. 7.—The army urgently needs 1,200 radio instructors. It hasn't been getting them. There are plenty of competent radio engineers and technicians in civilian positions, but they are not interested in a civilian job as an instructor with the army. However, offer them commissions comparable to their civilian status and they will accept pronto. WESLEY E. KIDD.

A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

TO MAKE A WILL.

Chicago, Sept. 2 [Legal Friend of the People].—I have been called for military service and want to make a will. 1. A friend tells me that I must leave each of my immediate relatives [two brothers, one sister, one parent] at least $1.00 each.

2. He says if I fail to do so, they would have the will set aside in court.

3. Is this true? I am a resident of Illinois and my property consists of life insurance, some personal property, and insurance.

4. I wish to leave all of this to an educational institution.

5. Is it necessary to give a reason for cutting off immediate relatives? J. K.

1. There is no such rule in Illinois.
2. Same.
3. No.
4. Since there are exceptional motives for contesting such a will, we would say that there are exceptional reasons for employing an attorney in the drafting and execution of the will.
5. No, but if you show that you have not forgotten them, this might have some bearing on a claim that you lacked testamentary capacity. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MORTGAGE RENEWAL.

Chicago, Sept. 2 [Legal Friend of the People].—We have a home with a valuation of $6,000. There is a mortgage of $1,500 and we are paying $200 on the principal every year. As this mortgage is to be renewed next March, I would like to know if a judgment of $230 against one of the owners would hinder in any way the renewing of the mortgage. The home is owned by a brother and two sisters. The judgment is against the brother.

G. S.

In our opinion, the mortgage holder ought to be satisfied with an extension agreement and in such case a judgment recovered after the date of the original mortgage would be subject to the extended lien. It seems probable that no difficulty will be encountered.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MONEY OWED.

Chicago, Sept. 2 [Legal Friend of the People].—1. A former roomer of mine owes me several hundred dollars for room and board. This debt is about 11 years old.

2. This party admits he owes this money but has paid me nothing even tho he has worked for the last five or six years.

3. What action can I take to force him to start paying this debt?

4. Can I garnishee his wages?

5. How do I go about doing this?

6. I have no note or other evidence except that we both agree that the money is due me. F. L.

1. The Illinois limitation period on written agreements is 10 years and on oral agreements five years, but a part payment or new promise would extend the period.
2. If he has made such an admission recently enough, this might prevent the statute of limitations from defeating you.
3. The ordinary course is to place such a claim in the hands of an attorney for collection.
4. Not until you have obtained judgment against your debtor.
5. See 3.
6. This is not fatal. Your oral testimony should be enough as far as that point goes.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

9 BILLION IN NEW LEVIES ADDED BY SENATE TAX BODY

16 Million More Citizens Affected by Bill.

BY JOHN FISHER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—The senate finance committee today virtually completed work on the biggest tax bill in the nation's history, estimated conservatively to add 9 billion dollars annually to the national tax burden—of which approximately 2 billions would be subject to refund after the war—and bringing 16 million new taxpayers into the fold.

The committee recessed for the week-end after taking action on additional excise levies and leaving a few additional changes to be considered next week.

The committee also will consider an over-all limit on war profits, possibly 5 per cent, in connection with suggested amendment of the law authorizing renegotiation of government war contracts. But Sen. Walter F. George [D., Ga.], committee chairman, said such action may not be included in the bill as presented to the senate about Sept. 28 but may be offered as a committee amendment on the floor.

Estimates Called Conservative.

As the bill now stands, it would produce additional annual revenues of 9 billion dollars, according to treasury estimates, which George said he considered "very conservative." Some congressional experts would add another billion dollars to this estimate.

Treasury experts estimate that 1.9 billions of the 9 billion would be subject to refund to individuals and corporations under provisions voted by the senate and not contained in the house bill.

This would make the net increase in taxes under the senate bill total 7.1 billion dollars, or 830 million dollars more than the 6.3 billion dollars in new taxes voted by the house. The annual federal tax burden now runs about 17 billions, so the senate bill would push this to the unprecedented figure to more than 26 billion, excluding the refund.

Grand Total Tops 33 Billion.

Adding approximately 9 billions in annual state and local taxes, this would bring the American tax burden to a new high of more than 33 billion dollars, or approximately one-third of the present national income.

At present there are approximately 27 million federal income taxpayers, and, according to Sen. George, the present bill would add about 16 million more—2 million thru a lowering of personal income tax exemptions and 14 million who would be taxed by the new "Victory tax" of 5 per cent on all gross income over $12 a week or $624 a year, who would not be reached by regular income taxes. All regular income taxpayers also would be hit by the Victory tax because of its low exemption.

Individual income taxpayers would be hardest hit under the senate bill, which would increase taxes on individuals by approximately 114 per cent, more than doubling existing levies. Present individual income taxes total approximately 5 billion dollars a year. The house voted to increase these by 2.9 billions. The senate bill would add about another 2.8 billions to the house approved levies.

Security Tax to Rise.

Thus, the total prospective burden under the senate bill would be about 10.7 billions, more than doubling existing income taxes. In addition, the social security pay roll tax is due to be doubled on Jan. 1, 1943, increasing from 1 per cent to 2 per cent.

Of the senate increases, 2.5 billions would be accounted for by the "victory tax" after allowances of approximately 1 billion 150 million for postwar credits. The senate committee also voted increases of 33 millions in surtaxes on individuals making more than $2,000 a year and garnered 220 million more by reducing exemptions for dependents from $400 to $300.

Corporation tax increases of approximately 2.6 billion dollars over existing levels of 7.6 billion annually were approved by the house, but the senate committee has shaved approximately 1 billion from these levies.

All the proposals in the senate committee's bill are subject to approval by the senate when it gets to consider the bill and to concurrence by the house on senate approved changes in the bill as passed by the house July 20.

Big as the pending bill is, the treasury wants it bigger. It requested new taxes totaling 8.7 billion dollars last spring and recently offered an unprecedented proposal for a 10 per cent tax on spending. This plan would have added an additional 6½ billion dollars in revenues, of which 4½ billion would have been refundable after the war. The committee, however, threw out the treasury plan, to the chagrin of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau.

Revisions in the tax bill voted by the committee today would result in revenue losses of approximately 34 million dollars. One revision of particular interest to Illinois residents provides that taxpayers would be permitted to deduct retail taxes, including sales and gasoline taxes, in computing federal income tax. This would make uniform the application of the deduction.

Permitted in 10 States.

At present, because of different forms of state laws, individual deductions can be taken in about 10 states which have sales taxes, and in eight, including Illinois, taxpayers cannot make such deductions. The other seven states which would be benefited are Alabama, Arizona, California, Michigan, Mississippi, New Mexico, and North Carolina.

Other revisions voted by the committee were as follows: Elimination of the house proposal for a 5 per cent tax on pari-mutuel wagering, retention of the present tax of 18 cents a pound on smoking and chewing tobacco [the house had raised it to 24 cents], approval of the house rates on cigarets to increase the levy on small cigarets [regular size] from $3.25 to $3.50 a thousand that on large cigarets from $7.80 to $8.40 a thousand, and an increase in the tax on gaming machines from $50 to $100 a year.

The proposed change in the law regarding re-negotiation of war contracts, which has war department approval, according to committee members, would specify that a contract once re-negotiated would stand and could not be reopened for further downward revision of profits. The limitation on profits would be coupled with this.

The senate committee previously approved the house normal and surtax rates of 45 per cent on corporation income and the excess profits tax of 90 per cent voted by the house. But the senate committee provided for a post-war refund of 10 per cent of excess profits and surtaxes but not of normal profits and ruled that total taxes on corporations shall not exceed 80 per cent.

BEGIN 6 MILLION NATIONAL DRIVE IN AID OF GREEKS

A national drive to raise $6,000,000 in six months for Greek war relief was opened yesterday by the Greek War Relief association. Howell W. Murray, chairman of the Chicago citizens' committee, announced that the Illinois quota is $470,000 to be raised at rallies and thru solicitation by committees.

The money will be used to charter eight Swedish ships to transport food to Greece, Murray said. The Canadian government has agreed to donate wheat, and the American Red Cross will contribute medical supplies. Food and supplies will be distributed thru the Swiss and Swedish Red Cross organizations. Murray said that safe passage for the ships has been assured by the British and German governments.

Harold S. Vanderbilt is national honorary chairman of the drive, and Dr. Homer W. Davis, former president of Athens college in Greece, is executive vice president.

WHY MARRIAGES LAST AS TOLD BY FOLKS WHO KNOW

Golden Wedding Band Has Proven Recipe.

BY MARTHA MURPHY.

Happy marriages aren't made in heaven. They're born of coöperation, good cooking, and children, say the 25 white haired couples who attended the third annual meeting of the National Golden Wedding band in the Morrison hotel yesterday. Each couple has been married at least 50 years.

"I can eat anything and she can cook anything."

"He's a wonderful provider."

"I hope we'll be together 50 years longer."

Compliments flew thick and fast as the couples chatted of children, home, and anniversary parties. They bobbed their heads sagely as Circuit Judge Roland J. Steinle of Milwaukee, formerly judge of Milwaukee family court, spoke on "Why Some Marriages Fail." They already knew the answers.

Boasts 115 Descendants.

Discussion of children brought to mind Mrs. N. W. Webb of Laona, Wis., who has 115 descendants—nine children, 48 grandchildren, and 58 great-grandchildren. The Webbs, who had attended previous meetings, celebrated their 61st wedding anniversary this year just a few weeks before Mr. Webb died.

Thoughts also turned to Mr. and Mrs. George M. Gobens of Lucus, Ia., when Judge Steinle mentioned that love grows with the years. Mr. and Mrs. Gobens, each 96 years old, have been married 81 years. They, too, were not present yesterday, but the folks voted them and Mrs. Webb honorary life memberships in the Golden Wedding band.

"Some women are not good cooks; they would rather eat their cake than bake it," said Judge Steinle and Mrs. Arba Andrus nodded knowingly.

Realizes Value of Pie.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrus, who live at 518 Clayton street, Waukegan, have been married 54 years. "I know the value of a custard pie," Mrs. Andrus said. "My husband is very fond of custard pie and when I want him to be very good I bake one."

"We're happier than when we were married," added Mr. Andrus. "We get to know each other better every day." Mr. and Mrs. Andrus have been married 54 years. She is 80 years old and he is 82.

"Good cooking is very important," said Mrs. C. M. Bard of 286th avenue, La Grange. "I was born and raised in Vermont and I inherited good cooking. When a man comes home tired he should have good food."

Smile on Money Problems.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Cochran, 6140 Kimbark avenue, who celebrated their 53d anniversary at the meeting, smiled when Judge Steinle discussed money problems. The Cochrans worked together in the department of the interior of the federal government for 30 years and always had a joint bank account. Mrs. Cochran, a dainty white haired old lady, pointed out that married women can work and still be happily married.

Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Cranmer, 2340 W. 113th place, the longest married couple at the meeting, celebrated their 67th anniversary on Sept. 9. They agree that an even disposition and careful consideration of the other's problems make for happiness.

Founded Two Years Ago.

Mrs. Ida R. Voliva, wife of Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva of the Christian Catholic church of Zion, founded the National Golden Wedding band two years ago because "there were so many happy golden wedding couples in our own town that I thought folks all over the world would like to know them." The Volivas have been married 26 years."

BANDIT CAREERS OF BLONDE, 14, PAL END WITH CRASH

High School Couple Lands in Iowa Jail.

The series of robberies and thefts that marked the progress of a blonde Chicago girl, 14 years old, and a high school pupil of 17 across three states, came to a smashing end early yesterday near Vinton, Ia.

Last night the couple was behind the bars of the Cedar Rapids, Ia., jail charged with stealing an automobile. Police there said authorities at Carthage, Hancock county, wanted them for armed robbery and Indiana also might bid for their extradition.

Lives with Mother.

The girl is slim Shirley Wright, who said her home is at 11945 Wallace street with Mrs. Ollie Wright, her mother. Hercompanion, a stocky, black haired young man, is Milton Schuelke Jr., 7215 Dobson avenue, whose father is a supervisor for the Chicago Surface Lines.

Shirley, who suffered a sprained wrist when Schuelke wrecked a stolen car while driving at an estimated speed of 96 miles an hour, told of their crimes quite casually.

"Milton had his father's car when we went out riding Wednesday night," she said. "We took the license numbers off it and Milt stole a car that was parked pretty close to us in Evanston. Then we drove to Antioch and broke into a tavern, where we got some money and a shotgun.

"Easy and Fun."

"The next day we drove down into Indiana. Somewhere in Warren county we held up a gasoline station and got a tankful of gas and a little more money. We did the same thing in Benton county.

"It was so easy and a lot of fun. Over in Illinois we drove into Champaign and held up a couple of fellows who said they were college students and took $20. The last man we held up was a farmer we met on the road near Cartha. He gave up $53."

POLITICAL RIVAL CALLS MRS. LUCE 'UNION NOW' FAN

Hits 'Evil Internationalism' on Convention Eve.

Westport, Conn., Sept. 12 [Special].—Miss Vivien Kellems, manufacturer who is seeking the Republican nomination for congress in Connecticut's 4th district, today blasted her leading opponent, Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, journalist and playwright, as a devotee of "Union Now" with Britain.

Vivien Kellems.

"Mrs. Luce's nomination," Mis Kellems declared, "would be a victory for those who wish to nullify our constitution and substitute an evil internationalism for our true democracy."

Mrs. Luce is the wife of Henry R. Luce, publisher of the Life-Time-Fortune magazine axis.

Miss Kellem's statement was issued as the explosive battle of the political ladies was going into its last round. On Monday 92 delegates will meet in convention in Bridgeport to pick the party's candidate.

Criticizes Speech.

Miss Kellems hit out at Mrs. Luce's keynote speech before the Republican state convention Thursday, asserting that it failed "to reveal a new or original thought." As far back as Aug. 17, when she announced her own candidacy, Miss Kellems said, she laid down the issue of "a proper conduct of the war."

"The question is how to win the war and, having won it, how to achieve a proper peace," Miss Kellems continued.

"Mrs. Luce did refer to a 'better world' which is to follow the war. Could she by any chance have referred to Union Now, which she has so ardently espoused?

"For example, on Jan. 22, 1941, in a speech at the Waldorf-Astoria Mrs. Luce made this glowing promise: 'We promise that union now will bring a greater measure of peace and security and prosperity and freedom to the world than any other political program yet tried by men. For this is the only true counter-revolution to Hitlerism and, short of our very skins, the only thing worth fighting for.'

"Positve Goal" Seen.

"At the same time she stated that 'the spirit of liberty admits of no Monroe Doctrine,' and she also said that union now 'will arm all the democracies with a positive goal to fight for in addition to the negative goal of destroying Hitler.'

"Does Mrs. Luce still believe destroying Hitler 'a negative goal'? Does Mrs. Luce still believe that democracy is seriously ailing, and that some other way of life is on the make, on the offensive?"

For herself, Miss Kellems asserted she was "not now nor have I ever been an advocate of union now."

"We must clean our house of all foreign isms and return to our real American way of life."

POLITICAL JOBS GO BEGGING AS RESULT OF WAR

Patronage Pressure Fades Away.

Life is becoming easier for politicians, ordinarily pursued by job seekers. The job seekers, according to party leaders, are now going to defense plants where they can make "real money," instead of the $150 and $200 a month ordinarily paid by city or county positions.

One alderman, who did not want his name to be made known, said last week: "My patronage has gone out of the window. A couple of weeks ago I had several hundred people who were thankful to me because I had gotten them city jobs. Now those men are working in defense factories for $75 or $85 a week and they pass me by.

One "Still True."

"One of them, tho," he aded, "has the right idea. He came to me a couple of days ago and said, 'I'm working in a defense plant now, but when election comes I'll still be true to you. You got me a job in the depression when I needed one and I'll never forget it.' That's what I call the right spirit."

Mayor Kelly said the political pressure for jobs has decreased greatly. He said many jobs are going vacant because of a lack of qualified men to fill them.

A leader of the Democratic county central committee estimated pressure for political jobs has decreased 90 per cent in the last year. He said the patronage committee of the party has little demand for work and few ward committeemen are worried about placing men.

15 to Army, 18 to Jobs.

Al Horan, chief Municipal court bailiff, said yesterday that of the 312 bailiffs in his court, 15 have joined the army and 18 have gone into private industry.

"They were machinists or carpenters before they started to work in my office," Horan explained. "Now they find they can get good wages with overtime pay in the factories and they are going to those jobs. I don't blame them."

In the United States over one hundred thousand persons die every year of cancer. Yet cancer is curable if it is diagnosed early and properly treated. Thousands of former cancer patients are alive today because of the timely use of X-rays, radium and surgery. The early detection of cancer largely depends upon the patient himself. The first signs of ailments or conditions that may prove to be cancer are visible only to him. For instance: a wart, mole or wen, becomes tender or increases in size; a sore that refuses to heal; a painless lump or swelling, may be the first sign of Skin Cancer. Irregular or abnormal discharges with undue loss of blood, may mean beginning Cancer of the Cervix. Loss of appetite, nausea, with or without pain, rapid loss of weight, may indicate a Stomach Cancer. A lump, swelling or undue tenderness may be a beginning, Breast Cancer. A sore which refuses to heal, or a lump on the mouth may be a sign of Lip Cancer. Abdominal distress, diarrhea, constipation, loss of weight are symptoms of Intestinal Cancer. Piles, hemorrhoids, fistula especially when bleeding occurs may mean beginning Cancer of the Rectum. These are intimate and personal symptoms which anyone would be conscious of as soon as they appear. Often their presence is due to causes other than cancer, but this cannot be determined without a careful and complete examination. SMITH STRENGTH CREATES PUZZLE IN MICHIGAN RACE

Regulars in G. O. P. Fear Effect of Light Vote.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 12.—Politicians and prophets find a Chinese puzzle in the three-man race for the Republican nomination for United States senator in Tuesday's primaries.

The three rival candidates are Judge Homer Ferguson, Detroit's racket-busting jurist; Elton R. Eaton, Plymouth publisher, and Gerald L. K. Smith, old associate of the late Sen. Huey Long, the Louisiana "Kingfish," in the days of the "Share the Wealth" movement.

What perturbs the regular Republicans is whether apathy will keep enough regulars away from the polls to cause the nomination of Smith.

Two Are Main Contestants.

The principal fight is between Ferguson, who got a late start after being drafted for the race, and Smith, who seeks to crystalize the Townsendites, the Coughlinites, and other groups. Eaton is expected to run third.

The apprehension of Republican managers was revealed by State Chairman John R. Dethmers when he told a meeting of county chairmen here a few days ago: "We could lose the November campaign by overlooking the primary. I am not afraid to campaign the state with a ticket chosen by a representative primary vote."

Leaders were worried lest the primary draw so light a vote it will not be "representative," and planned last-minute efforts to rouse the voters. The theory is that party regulars prefer Ferguson or Eaton to Smith.

Anti-Smith Drive Indicated.

In some sections there were indications that word over the grapevine to party workers is to get out as large a vote as possible in a "Beat Smith" movement.

Regular Republicans say all indications are that Michigan will go Republican this year. If Smith is nominated, they hold, it might injure the chances of the party state ticket and the election of the next governor. What worries them is the large attendance at Smith's meetings.

Many oracles assert that Sen. Prentiss M. Brown, a Democrat who is up for reëlection with no primary opponent, probably would defeat Smith if nominated, while if Ferguson were the nominee it might be a different picture.

The prophets are all in a dither. When Ferguson was drafted by the organization to make the race, general belief among politicians was that he would win without much effort. It was expected the judge's record in breaking up rackets in Detroit, and as a one man grand jury in voting indictments that resulted in 156 convictions—including 10 public officials and many higher up police officials—and in crashing the alliance between rackets and politics would bring him the votes.

Judge Is Reticent.

In Wayne county and nearby territory Ferguson is expected to roll up a poll on his record. Women in particular are campaigning for him.

In Detroit, most prophets three weeks ago were confident Ferguson would win. So were the old-time oracles. At present the regulars believe that Ferguson will win if the vote is not too light.

Republicans cast 550,000 votes in the 1940 primary. Ferguson's supporters believe he will win if the vote Tuesday approaches 500,000. They are apprehensive of the result, however, should the vote drop to 400,000 or less.

Smith's campaign has been colorful. He has been on the stump, speaking mostly to outdoor crowds in small towns, three to six times a day. His campaign slogan is "Tires for Everybody," and he has been criticising the New Deal administration. He displays a large synthetic tire at his meetings and has attacked what he terms "bungling on the rubber shortage." He opens his meetings with a prayer and takes up a collection to defray expenses. He sways his audiences much in the manner of an old fashioned evangelist.

Eaton in recent days has been attacking Smith, especially his "tires for everybody" slogan as demagogic.

No Contest for Governor.

Neither party has a contest for the governorship. Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner [D.] and Harry F. Kelly [R.], present secretary of state, are without primary opponents for nomination for governor.

Six Republican congressmen up for renomination Tuesday are on the purge list of eastern smear groups which are seeking to defeat congressmen who were noninterventionist before Pearl Harbor.

Three of them face contests—Clare E. Hoffman of Allegan, Paul W. Shafer of Battle Creek, and Bartel J. Jonkman of Grand Rapids. Hoffman, faced by two opponents, State Senator J. T. Hammond of Benton Harbor and Benjamin J. Burton of South Haven, has opposition from Townsendites, the CIO and AFL unions, and other groups who have fought him unsuccessfully in other years.

Three others on the purge list who are without primary opponents are Fred Bradley of Rogers City, Fred L. Crawford of Saginaw, and Roy O. Woodruff of Bay City.

HOFFMAN BLASTS PURGE CAMPAIGN AS DICTATOR PLOT

Charges Plan to End Free Government.

South Haven, Mich., Sept. 12 [Special].—Rep. Clare E. Hoffman [R.] of Allegan, the No. 1 target of eastern smear groups seeking to drive out of congress members who were noninterventionists before Pearl Harbor, today assailed the purge groups as "would-be dictators from outside" who are seeking to destroy constitutional government after the war.

In an address here tonight with which he wound up his campaign for next Tuesday's primary in Michigan, Hoffman said:

"A small group of internationalists, another group of Communists, and another group who would remake America, destroy constitutional government and establish some harebrained scheme of their own have been creating disunity. They have falsely, viciously, and maliciously accused pro-Americans of disloyalty.

Cites Stand for Defense.

"Because I expressed in congress, forcefully and persistently, your desire that we should not enter this war if it was avoidable; that we should, before entering it, prepare for national defense, because I have exposed the efforts of the Communists to overthrow this government, not only by force, but by subterfuge, I have become No. 1 man on the Michigan purge list and No. 3 on the national list.

"The very fact that those who, prior to Pearl Harbor, sought to drag us into war, unprepared as we were, now seek to defeat me, is one good reason why I should be reëlected. The fact that they love other countries, other people, other nations, more than they love America is another reason why they should not have their way.

"When comes the day that the people of this district or any other do the will of a financial, greedy group seeking the overthrow of this government, the hauling down of the stars and stripes, then indeed has democracy departed from this land.

Voters Asked to Answer.

"Let the people of this district make these would-be purgers, these creators of disunity, these would-be destroyers of the independence of the voters the same answer that has been made in other districts. Because of my championship of free speech and of the right of American citizens to work without paying tribute, I have become the target of the New Dealers, the Communitsts, and the racketeers. First and foremost in my mind is defeat of our enemies, the winning of the war, and with it the preservation of the liberty and freedom of our own citizens."

Hoffman said congress is shirking its responsibility to fix ceilings to prevent inflation. He recalled that in 1940 he introduced such a bill, which was reintroduced last Jan. 13.

"All recognize," he said, "that if inflation is to be avoided there must be a ceiling over all things and services—manufactured products, farm products, wages, and salaries. The President has on the statute books a price fixing act, passed at his demand. Many of us were certain it would not work.

"So-called smart politicians in congress say inasmuch as the President has failed to fix a ceiling on wages, which he has assured us was necessary to prevent inflation, and has thrown the burden on congress, we will pass it back to him, let him assume the responsibility, and incur the political enmity of the pressure groups. That may be smart politics, but it is a shrinking congressional responsibility."

A Big Help

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—President Roosevelt appealed today for wide publicity of a chart showing that tires on a card driven at 30 miles an hour last twice as long as one driven 50 miles an hour. The Baruch rubber investigating committee recommended among other things a national speed limit of 35 miles an hour.

The chart made public by the White House was prepared by the automobile and rubber industries committee of the Society of Automotive Engineers War Board.

The President addressed the chart to Secretary Stephen Early and attached this note:

"This is worth putting before the eyes and ears of all car drivers all over the country. Won't the news, photo and radio people do this? I hope so—it would help a lot."

NELSON FAVORS TAKING TIME OFF WAR JOB TO VOTE

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—Holding that "voting is a duty, not a privilege," Donald M. Nelson told the nation's war workers today they had his full approval to leave the production lines long enough to cast ballots in all elections—national, state, and local.

Replying to a letter from a war worker who said there had been "quite an argument" over whether it was patriotic to take time off to vote, the War Production board chairman said:

"The right to vote is, in short, what this war is all about. It should be one of the very few exceptions to the all important rule of staying on the job and getting the war materials off the production lines and on the battlefronts."

Jurors to Resume Sedition Probe After Week's Recess

The special grand jury investigating seditious activities in this area will resume tomorrow after a week's recess, federal officials announced yesterday. The jury is expected to seek to trace persons associated with Newell Mecartney, attorney, indicted last week on charges of sedition and sending scurrilous material thru the mails; Elmer Hartzel, a statistician, and Elmer W. Soller, alleged associate of Mecartney. Mecartney is free on $5,000 bonds. Hartzel and Soller are held in bonds of the same amount.

Kidneys May Need Help to Clean Out Excess Acids

If you're feeling out o'sorts, Get Up Nights or suffer from Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes and feel worn-out, the cause may be non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. Worry, Colds, working too hard, or over-eating or drinking may create an excess of Acids and overload your Kidneys so that they need help to flush out poisonous wastes that might otherwise undermine your health.

Help Kidneys Remove Acids

Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters through which the heart pumps blood about 200 times an hour, night and day, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down when overloaded.

Sixteen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three simple ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages, and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, which may easily make you feel years younger.

Guaranteed Trial Offer

Usually, in non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder disorders the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess Acids, poisons and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. An iron clad guarantee insures an immediate refund of all your money unless you are completely satisfied. Get Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c.

FEW MOTORISTS TRY TO STORE UP GASOLINE SUPPLY

Fill Auto Tanks, but Not Extra Cans.

Few Chicago area motorists have sought to stock up on gasoline since Thursday's announcement nationwide gasoline rationing is to begin soon, B. M. Provis, president of the Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago, said yesterday.

"The motoring public has taken the announcement very graciously," Provis said. "We're filling up more automobile tanks than usual, but not one in 500 drivers is bringing in an extra can to be filled. Service station men must refuse to fill many of these cans, since the customers' plan for storing the gas often does not conform with safety regulations in many cases."

Some Afraid, Some Patriotic.

Provis said many persons are afraid to store gasoline on their premises, and others refuse to consider storing it for patriotic reasons. He said some stores had displayed five gallon red gasoline cans prominently, but that he doubted that sales had come up to expectations.

Of dozens of dealers he has talked to since Thursday, Provis said, virtually all plan to eliminate credit accounts. They feel that with the reduced volume of business, they will be financially unable to extend credit. He said the association membership may take some formal action on credit after details of rationing have been worked out.

Closing Plan Gets Approval.

Provis said Guy Runyon, Ames, Ia., president of the National Association of Petroleum Dealers, gave full approval by telephone to a Chicago association resolution calling for closing of service stations from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. and from 7 p. m. Saturday to 7 a. m. Monday.

Runyon told him, Provis said, that he will ask other dealer associations thruout the nation to pass similar resolutions and forward them to Washington. The Chicago resolution asks that the 7 p. m. and Sunday closing be incorporated in gasoline rationing regulations.

Tire life begins under 35!

Assuming that you get 100% tread wear at 25 miles an hour, you get only 29% of your potential tread wear at 65.

First, slow down. Second, see your Goodyear Dealer.

No matter what your tire problem may be—whether you're eligible for new tires or not—he can give you sound tire-saving advice and service.

If you are in war work, and eligible for new or recapped tires, your Goodyear Dealer can help you get a certificate. If you are a truck or fleet owner, his Truck Tire Engineering Service can add many miles to the life of your tires.

Your Goodyear Dealer is the recognized tire expert in your community. Let him help you save the tire miles you may need a year from now.

5 VITAL SERVICES TO INCREASE YOUR TIRE MILEAGE 25% TO 50%

1. Check air pressure at least once a week. An underinflated tire quickly breaks down sidewalls and is much more likely to be injured. An overinflated tire causes excessive wear in the center of the tread.

2. Have your tires rotated every 2500 miles. This evens up wear on all tires and helps give you maximum mileage. At the same time, have your license numbers branded on your tires to discourage theft.

3. Have your tires inspected right away and every 2500 miles—inside and out! Small cuts or bruises, if neglected, may cause you serious damage or even a completely ruined tire that can't be replaced.

4. Have your wheel alignment and brakes checked today and every 2500 miles. At slow speeds, a wheel out of line 3/8 to 7/16 of an inch reduces vital tire mileage by 33%. Improperly adjusted brakes scuff off good tread rubber.

5. Have your wheels checked for proper balance now and every 2500 miles. If the wheels on your car are improperly balanced, uneven, spotty tread wear will result.

YOUR GOODYEAR DEALER CAN DO IT FOR YOU

See your Goodyear Dealer. He knows tires, his business is tires, and he knows how to perform the five vital services that will extend the life of your tires.

Perhaps you are eligible for NEW OR RECAPPED TIRES

• Ask your Goodyear Dealer. He can tell you if you're eligible—and will gladly help you do what is necessary to get a certificate.

• If you are eligible for new tires, get long-wearing Goodyear Passenger or Truck Tires. If you also need new tubes, get LifeGuards, longest lasting air containers you can buy. They give extra tire protection if punctures occur.

• Don't wait too long for recapping. It is too late when fabric shows through. When tires are worn smooth, have them inspected by your Goodyear Dealer.

• Remember, you can't get either new or recapped tires if it is apparent that you have damaged your old tires through unwarranted abuse.

ACCUSE TUGWELL OF PUERTO RICO DICTATOR SCHEME

Farm Leader from Island Demands Ouster.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—Rexford Guy Tugwell, one of the original New Deal brain trusters, who was appointed governor of Puerto Rico by President Roosevelt, was charged today with attempting to use his office to establish dictatorship on the island. The charge was made by Miguel Martorell, president of the Farmers' Association of Puerto Rico.

Rexford G. Tugwell.

Martorell issued a statement demanding Tugwell's recall and the appointment of another governor. He asserted Tugwell is "playing politics with human suffering and capitalizing on the national emergency to further his own political ends."

Tugwell has been a storm center in island affairs for more than a year as a result of his asserted attempts to impose New Deal theories of planned economy on the territorial residents. Martorell said the majority of civic, political, farm, and business leaders on the island are in favor of his removal.

Lack of Ships Cripples Island.

Martorell is in the capital conferring with federal officials and congressional leaders on economic conditions on the island as a result of the war. Lack of shipping has disrupted its export trade and hardship is being visited upon the residents thru reductions in the amount of clothing and food supplies transported from the United States.

Territorial officials have complained over the failure of the United States to aid its own people in the territory while supplying many foreign nations thru the lend-lease program. Martorell assailed what he described as Tugwell's policy of furthering the liquor trade at the expense of space for the transportation of necessities.

"To finance his program of government control over every phase of insular life, Gov. Tugwell has persisted in making room for empty rum bottles in south bound ships and for thousands of cases of rum in north bound vessels at a time when the island can not obtain more than a fraction of its food requirements and can not ship more than a small part of its sugar to continental United States," Martorell said.

Rum Taxes Top 15 Billion.

"It would be assumed that every available ton of cargo space would be used for sugar, rather than for intoxicating beverages.

"However, the insular government received more than 15 million dollars in the last fiscal year from rum taxes alone and without that money Gov. Tugwell can not proceed on schedule with his program to place all forms of transportation, communications, and distribution under outright government ownership and control.

"Nor can he go ahead with his program to place at his mercy, with the pretext of the war, all important business enterprises and to socialize the Puerto Rican sugar industry, which accounts for more than one-half of all employment in the island. That is why precious shipping space is being used for rum rather than sugar."

A Recognized Group.

Martorell, a sugar planter influential in island affairs, has been head of the farmers association for years. According to sources in Washington, the association, which has 10,000 members, is the oldest of its kind in the territory and has always been the recognized group for planters until a group supporting Tugwell's policies attempted to form a new organization. It is estimated the governor's faction numbers less than 1,000.

Martorell said that after the 10,000 members of the farm association opposed Tugwell's program the governor attempted to form his own farm group, offering members special rations of fertilizer and food, which were being withheld from his opponents.

"Such tactics, at a time when shipping restrictions have caused a great shortage of both food and fertilizer, as well as other necessities of life, are clearly undemocratic and unjust," Martorell said.

Sailor Is Stabbed to Death in Bar; 60 Tipplers Quizzed

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP).—Gregorio Aquino, 33 years old, a merchant seaman, was stabbed to death in a taproom today and 60 patrons were detained for questioning. Detective Sergeant John McEnroe said a fight started when two men refused to drink with Aquino.

CANADA LIMITS USE OF ELECTRICITY TO SAFEGUARD INDUSTRY

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 12 (AP).—A power shortage in parts of Ontario and Quebec, today caused the government to order a sharp curtailment of electricity consumption in the affected areas.

Effective Sept. 20, advertising signs, show windows, and highway lights will be blacked out entirely, and ice rinks must shut off floodlights at 10 p. m.

Munitions Minister C. D. Howe said in announcing the restrictions that unless the public coöperated fully to reduce consumption of current there may not be enough power to meet requirements of war industries.

HORRORS OF SUB WARFARE TOLD BY SINGING 'MOTHER'

Victims' Hands, Legs Are Burned Off.

New York, Sept. 12 [Special].—Mrs. Foster Dudley of Los Angeles, Cal., said her hair was brown before she went to the British West Indies Island of Trinidad only four months ago. But today her hair was freely sprinkled with gray, and there was impatience in her husky voice as she looked from the window of her hotel room.

"I saw boys coming in every day at the harbor at Port of Spain with their hands and feet burned off. I saw survivors of axis sea attacks, more than a thousand of them, sleeping five and six to a room in huts, and in the Queen's Park hotel, and in Coblenz house, and in every private home on the island.

"There was nothing in the stores, they were all bare, and people were standing in line trying to get flour and meat, glad for horse meat and rancid butter or anything they could get. And before I left last week there was a food riot."

Appealing Barroom Voice.

Mrs. Dudley's visit to Trinidad followed a trip during which she toured South America and spoke to women's groups on war work.

At an embassy party at Balboa Gen. Frank Maxwell Andrews heard her sing and asked her to do a tour of American and British bases in the Caribbean. "He said I had the definite kind of barroom voice that appeals to the boys," Mrs. Dudley said, laughing heartily.

"The first place I sang was at the Dockside Theater in Trinidad. I was so nervous I almost fainted, but I simply told those kids I was scared to death and they were wonderful."

"It was really a job of mothering that I did, universal mothering, and the boys need it. They told me that they miss their mothers most of all, that they want to see them even more than their sweethearts."

Mrs. Dudley is herself the mother of two children.

Real Heroes of the War.

"The survivor situation in Trinidad is dreadful," she went on. "If I could only make people realize. These survivors are the real unsung heroes of the war. They're not in uniform and they're not welcome any place. They're just giving their lives getting things to people.

"There isn't enough food in Trinidad to take care of these survivors. The boys at the bases haven't suffered much, but one week they had nothing but sauerkraut and weenies."

"I want to tell about the evening a group of us watched three lifeboats come in from a small British merchant ship. We went down to meet them, as everyone does there. There were 17 men in the boats and there was murder in their hearts.

"They told us they had been proceeding from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to Trinidad when a German sub stopped them. They had eight women on board, and the Germans came aboard and took the women off and put them on the sub. Then they sank the ship."

SOCIETY WEDDING OFF; GROOM'S IN JAIL AS BANDIT

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 12 (AP).—This was to be Rodney Gwinn's wedding day, but he is in jail instead. Detective Chief E. W. Yoris said the 24 year old son of a prominent Seattle builder confessed the toy pistol robbery of a department store of $600 yesterday "so I could have some money with which to start married life."

Gwinn, student instructor at the University of Minnesota medical school, was to have been married tonight in a society wedding.

"Why didn't you come to me?" asked Gardner J. Gwinn as the young man confessed to holding up a pay roll cashier. "You know I would have given you anything you needed."

Gwinn replied he didn't want his father to know how little money he was earning. His fiancée, Ruth Havward, visited Gwinn last night in his cell.

ROBBED BY TWO GUNMEN.

Rocco Tamburrino, 34 years old, a truck driver, reported to the police that he was robbed of $150 early yesterday by two gunmen near his home at 1743 North Central Park avenue.

Federal Ban on New Homes May Bring Housing Shortage, Builders Warn

CLAY PRODUCTS SUGGESTED TO REPLACE LUMBER

Brick Plants Operating Only on Part Time.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago may face a housing shortage next spring as a result of the recent government order temporarily banning all new home building in the metropolitan area, Joseph E. Merrion, president of the Metropolitan Chicago Home Builders' association, asserted yesterday. He declared that the federal edict is based upon a series of figures, many of which are admitted to be based on assumptions.

Joseph E. Merrion.

"Should these assumptions be incorrect, as we believe some are, it is entirely probable that we'll discover next spring a lack of living accommodations," he said. "That might cause a curtailment of war materials production many more times serious than diverting now a small amount of building material to war housing."

Warns Against Mistakes.

Fred J. Walsh, treasurer of the home builders' association, also warned against incorrect statements regarding housing which, he said, have been made by various federal bureaus.

"The importance of adequate housing to shelter war workers is appreciated and admitted by all departments of the government," he said. "To make a mistake in determining the supply and demand in relation to housing, as already has been made by other departments of the government in several fields, would seriously affect Chicago's contribution toward an allied victory. Every effort must be made to prevent such a happening."

In reply to a statement made by the National Housing agency, which issued the order against new home building, that the average house requires 2,000 pounds of critical metal in addition to lumber, some grades of which are now on the critical list, T. D. Collins, chairman of the material research committee of the home builders' association, asserted that use of substitutes can eliminate practically all lumber in critical grades and sizes.

Plenty of Brick Available.

He pointed to the recent War Production board request to builders to use clay products wherever possible in place of lumber, and recalled a story in THE TRIBUNE last Wednesday quoting Chicago brick manufacturers as ready to meet practically any demand.

"Brick, cement, and tile are plentiful," he said. "Chicago brick factories are working at only one-fifth of their capacity. Our effort in this direction greatly changes the relative value of critical materials and adequate shelter."

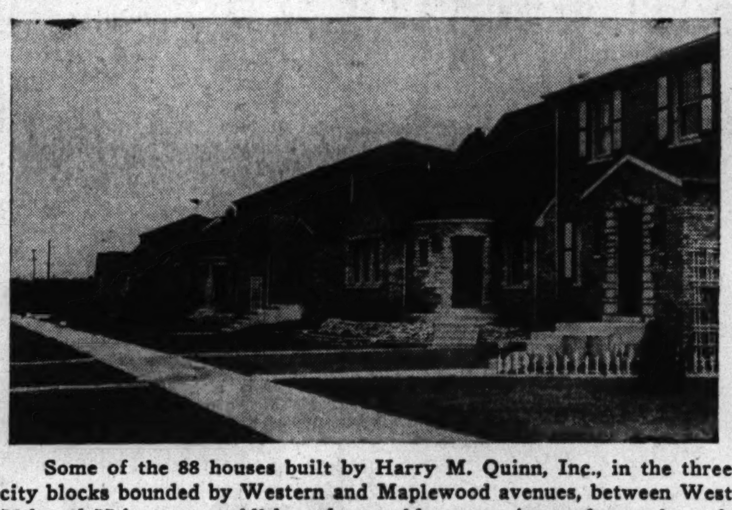
The order stopping all future home building in the Chicago area was issued by Philip N. Klutznick, regional director of the National Housing agency, last Wednesday evening. Klutznick said Chicago will get no more new housing until it utilizes all present dwelling units and its local labor supply. He asserted that Chicago can house 500,000 more workers thru utilization of space in dwellings already built.

Later federal officials admitted that some of their assumptions might be not entirely correct and invited the home builders association to discuss further the data on which the housing curtailment order was based. This conference will be held shortly, it was said.

Northwest Highway Flat Building Sold for $47,500

The southwest corner of Northwest highway and Oshkosh avenue, in the Edison Park area, improved with a building containing stores, flats, and offices, was sold by State Mutual Life Assurance company to Hightop Building corporation for $47,500, according to county records. I. Deemar & Co. was broker.

South Side War Workers' Homes



Some of the 88 houses built by Harry M. Quinn, Inc., in the three city blocks bounded by Western and Maplewood avenues, between West 76th and 77th streets. All have been sold except nine, and rented to officials of the Chicago Dodge aircraft engine plant under construction a few miles to the west. Lee Van Scovoc is architect of the above homes, on the east side of Campbell avenue.

Builder Turns Activities to Buying of Land

The recent government order temporarily stopping all new home building in the metropolitan area will not affect the activities of all Chicago builders. Harry M. Quinn, who has built and sold 400 homes for workers on the south side in the last four years, yesterday reported that with the completion of nine homes, all of which have been rented to officials of the Dodge Chicago aircraft engine plant, he will devote his time to the purchase of land for home sites to be used when the federal ban is lifted.

He already has 500 lots in various localities on the southwest side, all convenient to the Dodge factory, on which he will resume his home building program as soon as he again is able to get priorities on building materials.

In addition to these 500 lots, he contemplates purchasing several good sized acre tracts on the southwest side which he said he eventually will improve with homes for war workers.

The nine houses rented to Dodge officials, who will move here from Detroit, will be ready for occupancy before Nov. 1, Quinn said. They are part of a building program of 88 homes started in February, 1941, on the three blocks bounded by Western and Maplewood avenues and 76th and 77th streets. The other 79 homes have been completed and sold to workers in war plants.

Quinn put in underground improvements and paved the streets. The homes cost from $5,500 to $8,500 and have five and six rooms. The total investment in this project was $500,000, he said.

At the Realty Boards

The Chicago Real Estate board will hold its annual fall outing next Wednesday at Olympia Fields Country club. Stephen V. Ronksley, committee chairman, said all members of the board and their guests are invited to spend the day at golf, baseball, horseshoe pitching, and other entertainment.

Randolph Bohrer, Chicago attorney, one of the buyers of the Marshall Field Garden apartments last January, will speak on "Why Invest in Chicago Real Estate?" before the North Side Real Estate board next Tuesday noon, Sept. 15, at the New Lawrence hotel. Hugo W. Mortenson of Mortenson & Johnson will speak on "Stimulation of Sales." Herbert F. Philipsborn of H. F. Philipsborn & Co. will discuss the lender's viewpoint in connection with the future of Chicago real estate.

Edward V. Walsh, loan officer of the First Federal Savings and Loan association, will speak on changes in the mortgage and real estate fields at the first fall meeting of the West Side Real Estate board, tomorrow noon in the Graemere hotel. John McCarthy, head of the OPA legal division, will be present and answer questions regarding rent registration.

Letters

Galesburg, Ill., Sept. 9.—The interesting story in today's TRIBUNE relative to the "Chicago Brick Makers Ready to Fill Demand" has awakened this response from a downstate area in which a large defense plant soon will be constructed.

At the present time land is being acquired in the Lewistown and Bernadotte districts in Fulton county, and after this work has been done, the construction corps will move in. Originally, this project had been set up as a frame—a large cantonment—but since the War Production board has recently urged the use of masonry construction in place of frame to relieve the acute shortage of lumber, we are naturally very much interested in what the war department will decide for Lewistown in this connection.

This much we are sure of: the several large brick plants within a short radius from Lewistown can immediately expand their production to meet any and all demands for their material, and a favorable decision by the war department will prove a boon to these plants which have long operated on a serious under production basis.

Like the plants in the Chicago metropolitan area, production has been very low in relation to capacity and it is our sincere hope that this new development from the offices of WPB will have a favorable reception.

As a large down-state manufacturer of brick and building tile, we appreciate the publicity you are giving to this subject and we are anxious to dispel all doubts as to our ability to handle a greatly expanded volume of business.

Cohen was attorney for the buyer.

Realty Miscellany

Rent control, the soldiers' and sailors' civil relief act, and the trend of current realty values will be discussed at the first fall meeting of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers association, in the Palmer House Tuesday evening. John McCarthy, head of the legal department, rent control office of OPA, Chicago, Albert E. Jenner Jr., attorney, and James C. Downs Jr., will be speakers. L. A. Clarahan, president of the association, will preside.

A motion picture dramatizing the dangers to health resulting from faulty plumbing will be shown at a meeting of the Plumbing Contractors' Association of Chicago in the Blackstone hotel Tuesday evening. This will be the first Chicago showing of the film.

WAR WORK HIKES CONSTRUCTION IN CHICAGO SUBURBS

August Home Building Is More than July.

War construction in the suburbs during August boosted building figures for the month to $24,434,709, nearly 17 million dollars higher than for the corresponding month last year. Excluding the largest war job—the 22 million dollar Great Lakes Naval Training station expansion—last month's building activity of all types was nearly 5½ million dollars below August of last year, according to the monthly survey of suburban building compiled by Bell Savings and Loan association.

Comparison of August with July also is misleading unless deductions of war building are made. Leaving out the 36 million dollar Great Lakes job announced during July and comparing the result with the August total minus the new 22 million dollar Great Lakes job shows a decrease of $1,774,975 from July.

Metropolitan Area Gains.

Building figures for the entire metropolitan area—91 suburban towns, Chicago, unincorporated areas in Cook, Du Page, Lake, and Kane counties—totaled $41,256,751 last month, compared with $12,328,987 during August of last year, and $43,683,923 for July, 1942.

Home building in the suburbs during August increased over July but showed a large decrease in both number and cost compared with August, 1941. There were permits for 428 homes costing $1,880,203 issued last month, compared with 929 homes, valued at $5,819,636, in August of last year. The July, 1942, totals were: 275 homes, costing $1,319,735.

Gary Leads All Suburbs.

Gary led all suburbs last month in homebuilding, with permits for 123 dwellings, costing $516,790. Hammond was second with 81 homes, at $324,000. Following were Broadview, with 53 homes, $260,025; Westchester, 31, $156,000, and Elmwood Park, 27, $123,762.

CONGRESS BALKS AT ROOSEVELT'S WAGE STAMPEDE

Demand for Free Hand to Fix Pay Hits Snag.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—An atpede congress into lowering price ceilings on farm products while giving lings on farm products while giving him a free hand to fix wages appeared today to be headed for failure.

Sen. Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.] announced following a conference with other congressional leaders that hope had been abandoned for getting anti-inflation legislation prepared before Monday. The majority leader said hearings on the measure originally scheduled for Monday have been postponed until Tuesday because of a deadlock arising from divergent views over what powers the bill shall contain.

At the same time, Sen. Robert F. Wagner [D., N. Y.], an unswerving supporter of administration policies, both domestic and foreign, admitted that the legislation will contain a specific mention of wage fixing as well as a limitation on the ceilings for agricultural commodities. The President had ordered congress to act only in reference to farm prices.

Necessity Is Not the Issue.

There is no disagreement among the congressmen about the necessity for preventing inflation, he said. He added, however:

"I don't think the senate will agree to a bill that is so general that it is without a formula on wages and prices."

In an ultimatum to congress Monday, Mr. Roosevelt decreed that he must be authorized to fix farm prices at parity or approximately their present level before the end of the month. And he said he will "stabilize" wages, without approval of congress. Should congress fail to act by the Oct. 1 deadline, the President's manifesto stated, the action on farm prices would be taken anyway despite prohibitions in the existing price fixing law.

Parity is an artificial price level designed to provide farmers with a return on their products to give them the same relative purchasing power they enjoyed in the 1909 to 1914 base period. Under the price control law farm price ceilings cannot be set below 110 per cent of parity.

"Resentful" Recollection.

Following receipt of the President's message on capitol hill, many members of both houses took the floor in resentful recollection of the fact that the provision for high ceilings on prices, now being condemned, was placed in the bill by the White House stalwarts. They have also reminded their colleagues that the failure of the bill to mention ceilings for wages was another creature of the administration.

The original measure was conceived in politics, they charged, and designed so as to offend neither the farmer nor the working man whose votes will be needed in the November elections. The attempt to blame congress for the runaway prices and vast increases in the cost of living was seen as merely a pretext for depriving the legislative branch of more of its constitutional prerogatives.

An early suggestion that congress give Mr. Roosevelt blank check authority to fix prices and wages at his discretion has been discarded, it was learned. This suggestion came from Speaker Sam Rayburn [D., Tex.] who had proposed the passage of a simple resolution conferring unlimited authority upon the President.

Demand Wage Fixing, Too.

Ranking Republican and Democratic members of both houses, however, said they would not act to put lower ceilings on prices until they had definite assurance from the White House that wages would also be fixed.

The admission by Barkley and Wagner that the new legislation will deal specifically with both the inflationary factors signalized a victory for those who refused to be frightened by the Presidential ultimatum.

BLAZING PLANE'S FACTORY CRASH PROBED BY FBI

Death Toll Reaches 12; Pilot Tells of Fire.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 12 (AP).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation today investigated the possibility of sabotage in the crash of a flaming Curtiss plane which ripped thru the roof of a building yesterday at the Curtiss-Wright airplane plant, killing 12 persons and injuring 35.

Kenneth M. Piper, a special agent, said the FBI is making an inquiry. He said there is "plenty of motor left" from the plane to be examined by technicians.

J. Bertrand Purnell, the test pilot, a veteran of more than 3,500 hours in the air, parachuted to safety two miles from the plant but suffered severe burns. The dead were identified as Francis Ryan, 37 years old, Kenmore, N. Y.; Paul Chase, 41, Glens Falls, and Lester Glenn, a civilian employed as an army inspector, Martin Till, Salvatore Palmeri, Carlson Rauh, Frank Warda, Joseph Sciolino, Norman Savage, Laverne Voelker, James E. Collins, and Samuel Shalala, all of Buffalo.

Pilot Tells of Blaze.

Purnell, 34, said in a hospital interview he "stayed up there until I couldn't stand the heat any longer" and then bailed out. It was his first parachute jump.

"I'm trying to figure out what happened—I couldn't say definitely—just that the engine caught on fire," he said. "I tried to put out the flames before I jumped.

"The flames kept coming up and hitting me in the face. I couldn't stand the heat—I had to jump."

Winston Dandreau, a plant workman, said the crews at first thought the crash was a bombing.

Explodes Inside Plant.

"First there was the crash of the plane thru the roof and then, almost simultaneously, a blinding flash occurred as the plane exploded," he said.

The plane fell to the concrete floor of the building after it had ripped thru the roof. Witnesses outside said the plane made several loops after Purnell bailed out.

William Davey, general manager of Curtiss plants here, said damage to the building was slight and that production continued.

ROB DRIVER OF $135.

Rocco Tamburrino, 1743 North Central Park avenue, a driver for the Baskind Radio corporation, notified police yesterday that two men robbed him near his home of $135 in company collections.

Arrives Tomorrow

The Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Baily circus will arrive tomorrow for a 14 day run in Grant park, south of Soldiers' field. The first of the four trains bearing the circus is expected at the Randolph street sidings of the Illinois Central railroad about 4 a. m., with the others arriving soon afterward. The menagerie will be on the first train.

PILOT AND TWO GUNNERS KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Alexandria, La., Sept. 12 (AP).—An army pilot and two gunners of a training plane were killed yesterday in a crash three miles north of Esler field, it was announced today. The dead were Second Lieut. Walter H. Wynens, pilot, Hillsboro, Ga.; Staff Sergt. Jack C. Farling, Frankfort, Ind., and Sergt. George W. LaPointe, Claremont, N. H. The plane crashed in a thickly wooded area.

Two Die in Texas.

Victoria, Tex., Sept. 12 (AP).—Lieut. James A. Simpson and Cadet Edward S. Bissell of the Matagorda Island air base were killed yesterday in the crash of an advanced training plant. Simpson was the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Simpson of Uvalde, Tex. Bissell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Bissell, live at Harland, Ky.

FBI in Oklahoma Takes Arsenal from German Alien

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 12 (AP).—Seizure of 28 guns and 136,089 rounds of ammunition near Oklahoma City from a German alien was reported today by W. G. Banister, special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation office here.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The eastern army All-Stars, driving 77 yards for a touchdown the first time they got their hands on the ball, today poured in overwhelming man power from their huge squad to beat the New York Giants of the National football league, 16 to 0.

The Giants never threatened seriously to score on Col. Bob Neyland's hand picked huskies, their best shot being a futile try for a field goal from the 45 yard line late in the third period. The soldiers, running and passing with deadly effect, scored touchdowns in the first and fourth quarters and made a field goal in the second.

The game, the first for the soldiers, attracted approximately 40,000 spectators to the Polo grounds. Receipts were divided equally between a New York fresh air fund and army emergency relief.

General Praises Victors.

Maj. Gen. A. D. Surles, director of army emergency relief, in a happy dressing room speech after the battle, predicted to the players, standing rigidly at attention, that they would go on to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers Wednesday at Baltimore and the Chicago Bears on Sunday at Boston. "Then," he added, "you'll go on to win the war."

The soldiers that Col. Neyland had whipped into a formidable gridiron machine in five weeks employed the complicated Tennessee system smoothly and looked, in fact, a far more seasoned unit than the Giants. Their defense was superb, holding the Giants to a net gain of 57 yards by rushing.

If there was an outstanding player for the soldiers it probably was Capt. John Pingel, the former Michigan State star. His bullet passes carried the All-Stars straight down the field to their first touchdown, climaxed by a 12 yard peg over the goal line to Pvt. Jack Russell, formerly of Baylor university. It came with the game only seven minutes old. In all, Pingel threw 12 passes and completed eight of them for 69 yards.

Spadaccini Scores.

Lieut. Vic Spadaccini, formerly of Minnesota, scored the army's other touchdown a few minutes before the game ended when he intercepted a pass thrown by Tuffy Leemans from behind the Giants' goal line and raced it across untouched. The score, however, was far from unearned, as army's second team previously had just driven from its own 40 down to the Giants 2 foot line before being halted by the battling red shirts.

Corp. Mike Basco, once of Villanova, place-kicked a field goal from the 22 yard line in the second quarter after the soldiers, thru a fumble, had missed a chance to score from a yard out. He also added the extra point after Spadaccini's touchdown.

Against the furious defense thrown up by the All-Stars, the Giants looked more or less hamstrung. The only time they had the ball past midfield in the first half was on the recovery of a fumble by Al Blozis, ex-Georgetown giant. Not until near the end of the third quarter did they carry the ball past the middle and then they were blocked on Army's 40. Statistics:

	Army.	Giants.
First downs	16	7
Yards gained by rushing [net]	143	57
Forward passes attempted	14	15
Completed	10	8
Gained by passes	81	74
Passes intercepted by	2	0
Opponents fumbles recovered	2	1

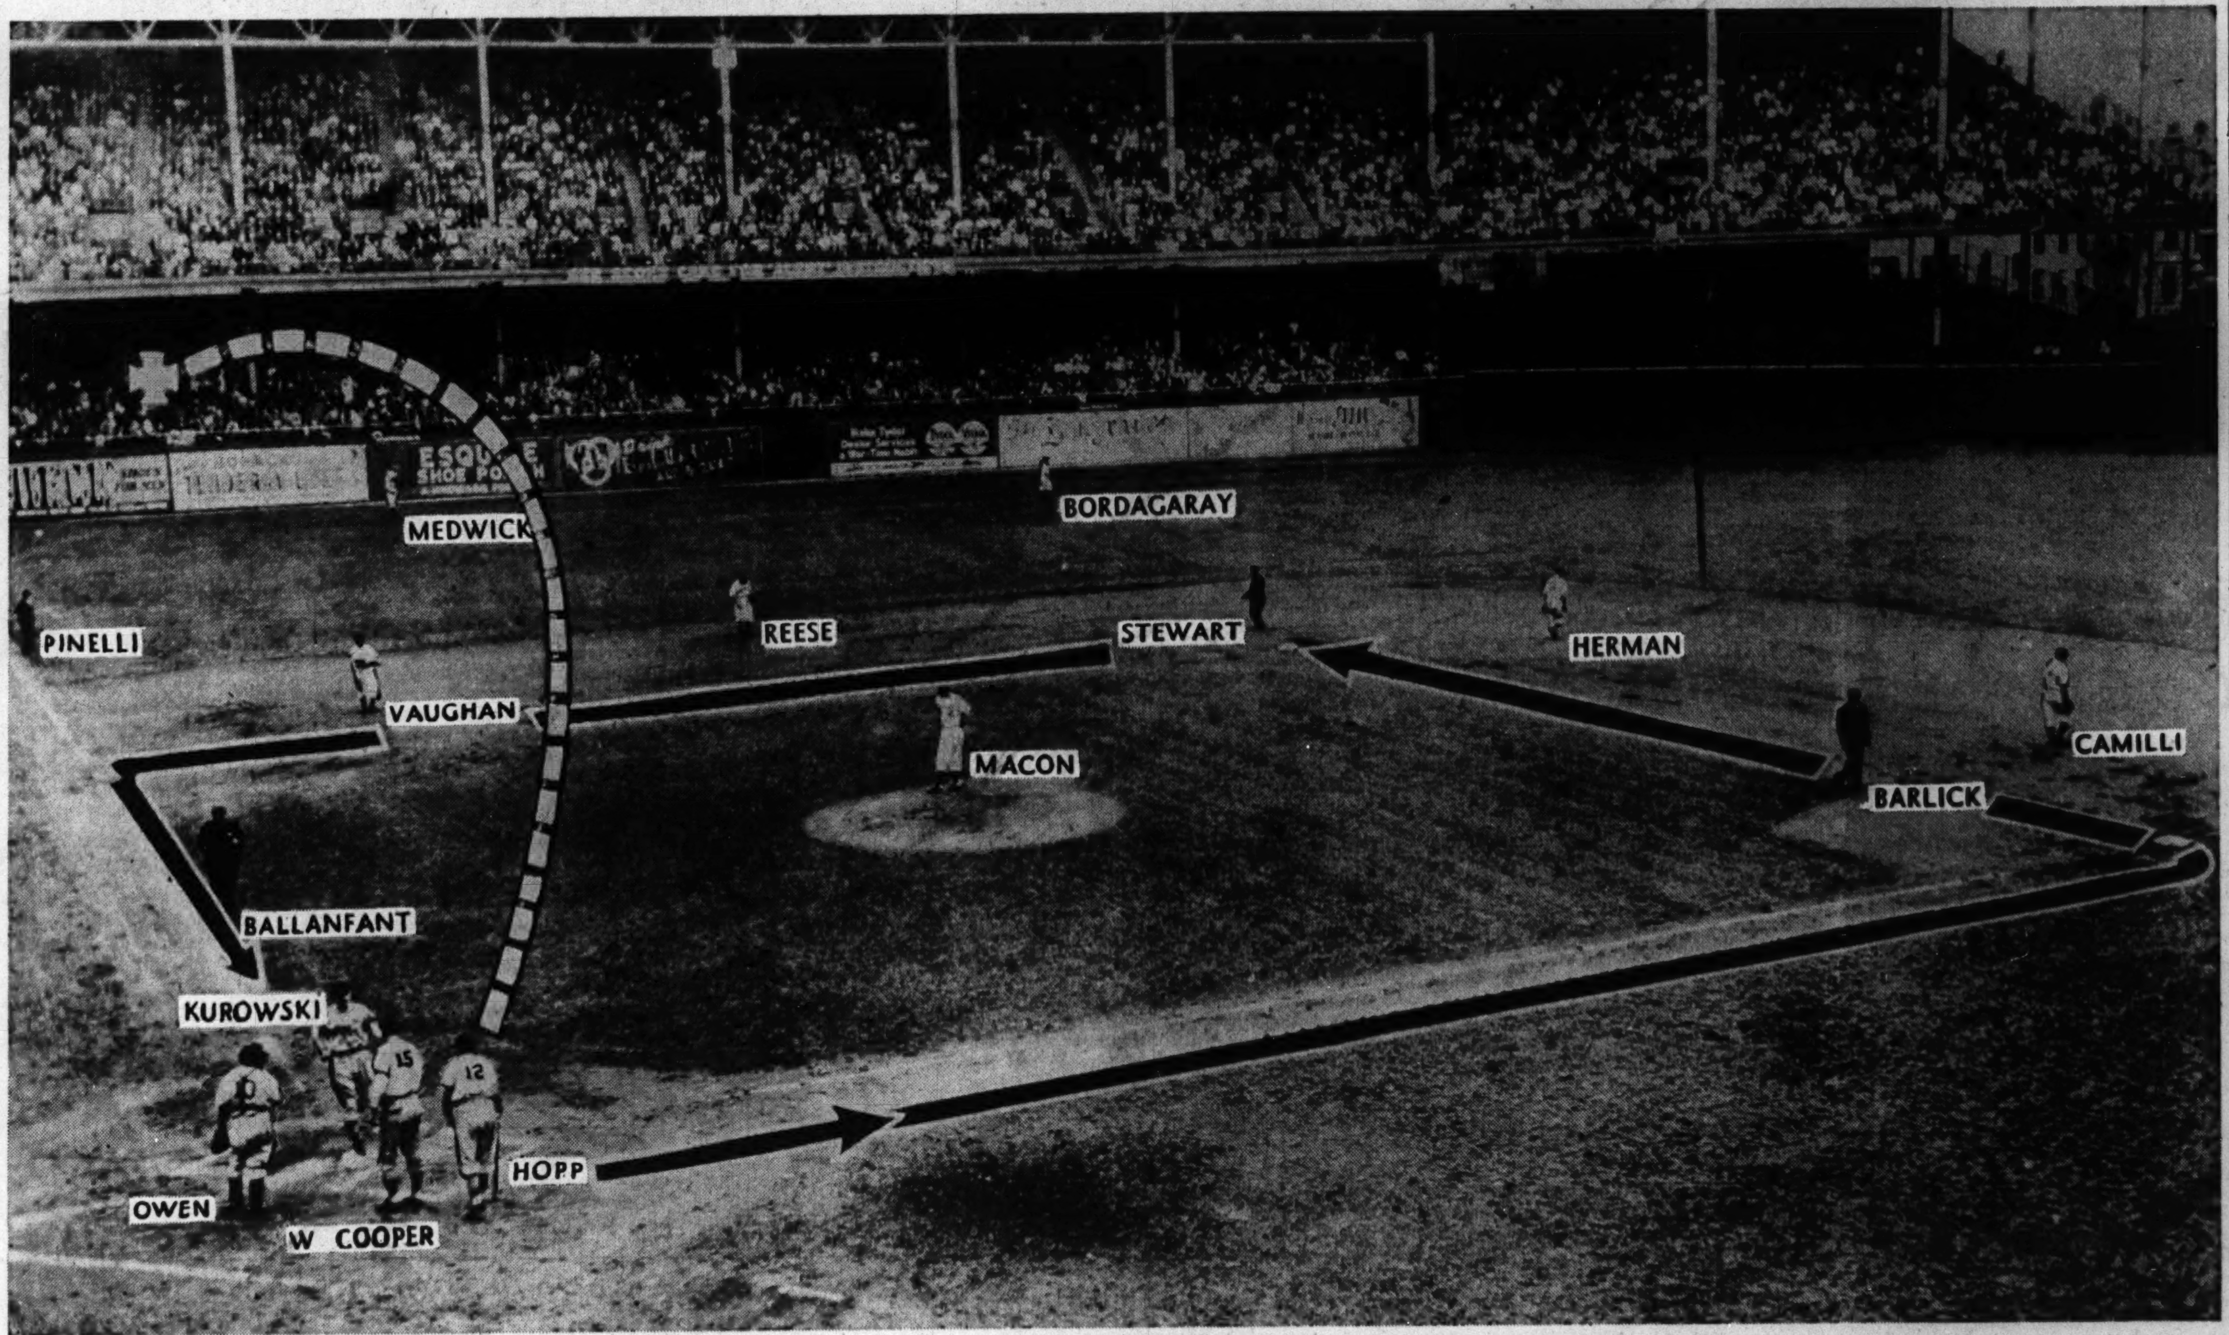
HOME RUN THAT GAVE ST. LOUIS TIE FOR LEAD WITH BROOKLYN



The St. Louis Cardinals' rookie third baseman, George (Whitey) Kurowski, trots home after slamming a home run (dotted line) into the lower left field stands in Ebbets field, scoring Walker Cooper ahead of him for the two runs which beat the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday and left the two clubs tied for the National league lead. The final score was 2 to 1. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Whirlaway Wins; to Meet Alsab Saturday

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 12 (AP).—The year's dream race turned into a nightmare today when Alsab refused to tangle with Whirlaway in the Narragansett special, but the two will get together here next Saturday.

After Alsab had been scratched and Whirlaway had romped to a convincing triumph, Track President James E. Dooley announced he would put up a $25,000 purse for a special match race between the pair.

Al Sabath, owner of Alsab, agreed immediately and it took Trainer Ben Jones only a short time to get the approval of Warren Wright, Whirlaway's owner.

The $25,000 race would be on a winner-take-all basis over a mile and three-sixteenths. The two thorobreds would be saddled under a weight-for-age arrangement with the 4 year old Whirlaway carrying 126 pounds and Alsab 119.

Alsab probably was lucky he didn't tangle with Whirlaway today.

For Whirlaway ran one of his greatest races to come from far back, win going away, and get even for all the things they said about him when he lost this same rich stake a year ago.

Earnings Climb to $491,136.

With the $24,300 he picked up, he skyrocketed his all-time record bankroll to $491,136 to near his half million dollar goal.

And the way Whirlaway did it, coming from as far back as he ever came before—in fact, just about as far back as he possibly could and still remain on the same race track with the others—it is doubtful if even Alsab could have matched the speed he turned loose on the stretch. He was some 16 lengths out of it at one point, and it appeared as if Jockey Georgie Woolf just couldn't get him out of a mild lope. Suddenly he turned it loose—and it was just a romp.

Whiraway led Tom Heard's Boysy by two lengths at the finish. Valina Orphan was third.

Track Leads War Fund Givers.

A lot was taken out of the race when Owner Al Sabath, Chicago lawyer, withdrew Alsab a few hours before the race with the explanation to Narragansett Park officials that the colt's arrival Thursday was too late to permit him to carry out the scheduled training plans that had been mapped out for the horse. Yet, only late yesterday Trainer Sarge Swenke had told turf writers, "Alsab shipped well and is in the best condition of his life."

Dooley said that Narragansett's contribution to war relief funds from today's card was $101,804, which, added to the $58,227 offering from its spring meeting, makes the track the turf's biggest single contributor in the country.

HOLMSTROM AND FRISINA TO PLAY TODAY FOR ILLINOIS GOLF TITLE

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 12.—John Holmstrom of Rockford and Jim Frisina of Taylorville, each of whom has been there before, will play 36 holes, more or less, for the 12th annual Illinois state golf championship today at the Mount Hawley Country club.

Holmstrom, the tall, fast striding captain of this year's University of Illinois foursome, already holds one leg on the Louis L. Emerson trophy, having captured it in 1938, before he was 18 years old. Frisina, par sniping scion of the family which operates threescore movie theaters thruout the state, will be making his second consecutive appearance in the finals, for last year he finished runner-up to George Dawson in a 2 and 1 title battle in Quincy. And it won't be the first meeting between John and James, for the latter put out Holmstrom by a 3 and 2 count in the second round of the 1941 tourney.

Mathisen and Novotny Lose.

While Holmstrom and Frisina made the finishing twosome, a report of today's play would not be complete without a bow to the two losers—Harold Mathisen of the Goodfellow Athletic club on Chicago's south side, and Gus Novotny, Edgewood Valley veteran.

Mathisen, four time winner of the Chicago City Amateur, including the current season, lost one of this afternoon's semi-finals to Holmstrom, but not until he forced Johnny all the way for a 2 up decision. The Rockford star had a medal card of 71, one under par, while Mathisen wasn't far behind with a 73. This performance, added to the morning 70 with which the precise Harold had done in Gus Moreland, 1940 champion from the home club, in the quarter-finals gave the south sider a record of one under par for 36 holes.

Novotny Wins Six Holes in Row.

Novotny, after rallying from a 2 down deficit thru seven holes of the morning round to win six straight holes and put out young Herb Chambers of Highland Park, 4 and 3, drew Frisina in the other semi-final. Three down at the turn to a well fashioned par 36 by Jim, Gus fought back and kept the match alive to the 16th green, where he went out by 3 and 2. Frisina's penchant for par is evinced by the fact that he was even for 16 holes. An out of bounds at the 12th and a penalty shot on No. 15 proved costly to the Novotny cause.

The Holmstrom-Mathisen match, a fight between two relentlessly steady competitors all the way, saw them reach the turn all even, off 38s that included seven pars and two bogies for each. Harold was charged with errors on the first two holes, missing the first green and missing his drive at the second. Holmstrom was short at the fifth and eighth.

Mathisen Squares Match.

Came No. 10 and John knocked in a 20 footer for birdie 3. Mathisen retorted with a 20 foot chip shot from the shoulder of the 13th green to square it again. They halved the 14th in par fours, Holmstrom nearly holing out of a trap for a birdie. Harold then got a great 5 at the 508 yard 15th, where he overclubbed on his third shot and had to hole a seven footer for his. Then Holmstrom hit the shot which proved to be the decisive one. The 16th hole at Mount Hawley measures 317 yards, running slightly downhill about two-thirds of the way. His wallop finished no more than 20 yards from the putting surface, and after getting on, six feet above the pin, John holed out for the birdie that sent him 1 up. They halved the short 17th, and Harold then conceded his opponent a seven foot birdie putt and the match on the 18th.

This Year It's Different

We'd like to be able to say that the Wake book is the same as ever this year—because you've enjoyed it so much in the past. But of course it isn't the same—because nothing is the same this year.

However, we think you'll like the new Wake book even better than you did its predecessors. You'll find that the war has sharpened rather than crushed its spirit. You'll find the wit a bit keener, the homely philosophy a bit deeper and the verse a bit more appealing.

This volume, which contains the best items published in the Wake during the last year, will go on sale at all news stands on Friday, Sept. 25. Price 15 cents—18 cents by mail. Address mail orders to Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street. You'll like the

ODT Asks Cut in Out-of-Town Gridiron Travel

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—The Office of Defense Transportation today called upon colleges and high schools and professional football clubs to discourage out of town attendance at sports events.

Joseph B. Eastman, ODT director, said that drastic curtailment in travel to football games and other sport events was necessary to conserve transportation facilities.

Eastman added that he was asking colleges and universities to transfer games to centers of population "where as many people as possible will have an opportunity to attend the games without traveling." Eastman also said he would ask school authorities to help curtail travel thru their control over the distribution of tickets to games.

Permit No Special Service.

No special train or bus service, including charter bus service, will be permitted to football games or other sports events, Eastman announced. He also directed that "steps be taken by my office to prevent the overcrowding of regular trains serving areas in which such events are to be held."

Remarking that he was "not unmindful of the benefits derived from college football and other types of sports events," Eastman said it was desirable that these activities should be continued.

"Thru the coöperation of the public in refraining from travel we hope to assure conditions which will make possible the continuance of sports events without depriving those who must travel on essential transportation systems," he said.

"Avoid Travel by Auto."

He added that attendance at games was not objectionable when travel can be accommodated by local transportation systems, especially those using steel rails rather than rubber tires. Travel by private automobile from any distance, however, should "be avoided because of the need for saving rubber."

"Passenger travel on public carriers in some sections of the country has increased 100 per cent over a year ago, and there is no section where the increase is less than 33⅓ per cent," Eastman said. "Week-end congestion on both trains and buses is a serious problem in all parts of the country.

"College football games and even high school games in some states have attracted many thousands from long distances and have made heavy demands on public transportation facilities. This year these facilities cannot be made available for these purposes."

MACPHAIL GIVES GLOOMY DODGERS A PEP TALK; CARDINALS CELEBRATE

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 12 [Special].—Injecting verbal hypodermics into a flock of gloomy ballplayers, Larry MacPhail, club president, marched up and down the Dodgers' dressing room today, actually smiling and with no indication of giving up on his Cardinal-deflated ball club that once had a fat lead.

Larry MacPhail.

"There's still nobody out in front of you. You're still in first place," he was saying, "it's like the start of the season all over again but from now on the pressure is all on the Cardinals.

"You're sitting right on top of your own gold mine and you'd better start digging. If you want the ore you've got to get busy and get it yourself. Don't expect anybody to help you. I've seen you fellows look a lot better than you did today but I'll tell you one thing I've never seen this ball club fold up under pressure before and I don't think it will fold up now."

Larry Finds a Customer.

Larry's steam of chatter kept flowing. You could see it was having some effect on the players. They were beginning to perk up a little. Finally he stepped in front of one cluster of lockers, sized up everybody in the room, and offered: "If anybody here thinks we're not going to win, I'll buy up his world series share right now."

"Okay, Larry," Lew Riggs piped up. "My selling price is $6,000, not a cent less." This brought a laugh from some of the boys. The room brightened up as tho the sun had just come out.

There were few post mortems on the game itself. Manager Leo Durocher and Coach Charley Dressen, both chased for disputing Umpire Al Barlick's decision at first base in the seventh inning, still were barking complaints.

Leo Insists He's Right.

"Lanier hasn't touched the base yet," Durocher bellowed. "How could Mickey Owen be out? I could see it. The play was right there in front of my face. Barlick was in back of the play. Lanier stopped a foot away from the bag and wasn't on it at all."

Medwick, fondling the ball he smacked for his 2,000th major league hit, admitted Whitey Kurowski's homer fooled him. "The way it came off his bat, I thought I had a chance to get it," he said. "But it went in over my head. It was hit a whole lot better than it looked."

In the 'Cards' dressing room you'd almost think they had clinched the pennant. Branch Rickey, business manager, was hopping from locker to locker shaking hands with the players and beaming. Only Manager Billy Southworth seemed to realize there are still 14 games to play.

Southworth Keeps His Head.

"Of course, I don't think the Dodgers are licked yet," he said. "They are not going to fold up. They're still a good ball club and they're still going to be mighty tough to beat out."

Kurowski, whose homer won the game, was sitting on his locker stool tugging off his socks.

"Gee, I don't know what kind of a pitch that was," the rookie grinned. "Macon usually gives me slow stuff and all I know is he didn't that time. I didn't even know the ball had landed in the stands until I saw Walter Cooper start jogging around the bases ahead of me."

One of the calmest of them all was Max Lanier, who was happy enough about pitching his mates into a first place tie, but seemed to be merely waiting calmly until his next turn to pitch. Terry Moore pointed out: "I've seen Max pitch when he had more stuff than today. The Dodgers hit a couple of balls pretty hard in the last couple of innings, but he had all he needed to beat them."

KUROWSKI HITS HOMER WITH ONE ON IN SECOND

Durocher and Coach Are Chased.

Beazley Is Injured

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP).—Johnny Beazley, star rookie right hand pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, suffered a laceration of the right thumb in a scuffle with an unidentified assailant in the Pennsylvania station tonight.

Police said the assailant, a Negro, fled thru the railroad yards and was not immediately apprehended. Beazley is scheduled to pitch against the Phils tomorrow.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 12.—George [Whitey] Kurowski, fair-haired freshman third baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals, this afternoon collaborated with Lefty Max Lanier to lift the St. Louisans into a first place tie with the distraught Brooklyn Dodgers. Whitey's part in a 2 to 1 victory which brought the westerners abreast of the faint defending National league champs was a second inning homer off Max Macon with Walker Cooper on base. Lanier's part was a five hit job of pitching, in which he starred not so much as a pitcher as a fielder.

Today's torrid battle left each team possessed of 94 victories and 46 defeats, each with 14 games to play, but with the season series between the teams ended—13 victories for the Cardinals and 9 for Manager Leo Durocher's palsied fellows.

Newsom and Head Pitch Today.

Tomorrow Buck Newsom and Ed Head will be pitted against Bucky Walters, Johnny Vander Meer and the Cincy Reds in Ebbets field. Over in Philadelphia the Cards, with Johnny Beazley and Harry Gumbert pitching, will be engaged in the first half of a four game series which will see them in single games with the Phils Monday and Tuesday, while the anguished Dodgers are at home, stewing in idleness.

All the runs of today's game were scored in the second inning, the Cards taking a 2 to 0 lead on a single by Cooper, first of the St. Louisans' eight hits, and Kurowski's ninth homer of the year, a drive that plainly was destined for the left field stand as soon as it left the bat of the 22 year old infielder, whom the Cards brought up from Rochester this year. In their half of the second the Dodgers scored their only run of the two game series on a single by Dolph Camilli and a double by Peewee Reese, which drove in Mickey Owen, who had forced Camilli.

Leo and Chuck Are Bounced.

But the second inning was by no means the most exciting. The Dodger seventh took the frenzy prize. Manager Durocher, striving bravely to maintain his former arrogance, was tossed out of the game in the seventh, as was his first lieutenant, Chuck Dressen.

From the fourth to the home seventh things had gone along in a calm manner, but blood pressures rose at the start of that home seventh. Owen, first Dodger up, bounced a mean one toward right field and both Jimmy Brown and Johnny Hopp went after it. Brown captured the ball far back in the grass. Hopp dropped flat, out of Brown's way, and Brown threw to Lanier, who barely was able to reach first. Umpire Al Barlick waved Owen out, whereupon Coach Dressen gave Barlick a big shove and launched a hysterical yelp. Barlick immediately waved Dressen out of the game and as he did, Manager Durocher charged from the dugout, gesticulating frantically. When he got up to Barlick he also pushed him around.

Durocher Goes Too Far.

Leo was not at first ordered from the game, but when he followed Barlick almost to the right field wall,

TIGERS DEFEAT ATHLETICS, 6-5, IN 11TH INNING

McCosky and Ross Hits Furnish Victory.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 12 (AP).—Bob Johnson drove in five runs for the Philadelphia Athletics today, but the Detroit Tigers put on a three run seventh inning rally to send the game into extra innings and then won, 6 to 5, in the 11th on Don Ross' double and Barney McCosky's single.

Virgil Trucks, third Detroit pitcher, hurled four hitless innings to achieve his 13th victory against eight defeats, and Bob Harris, who had relieved Rookie Bob Savage in the seventh, was charged with his 10th setback against two triumphs.

Johnson hit a three run homer, his 14th, off Alton Benton in the sixth to erase a one run Detroit lead, and in the seventh he singled with the bases loaded for two more scores. Score:

BOSTON BEATS INDIANS, 8-6.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 12 (AP).—A four run uprising in the ninth inning gave Boston an 8 to 6 victory over the Cleveland Indians today and a sweep of a two game series.

The Indians scored two runs in the eighth to take a one run lead, but Mel Harder was unable to get a batter out next inning. Dom DiMaggio opened with a triple and Johnny Pesky's third hit—a single—produced the tying run. Ted Williams then drove Harder from the box with a single. Tom Ferrick, who replaced Harder, tossed out Ulysses Lupien, but Pesky scored on an infield out. Lou Finney was purposely passed and Lamar Newsome hit a two bagger, bringing in Williams and Bobby Doerr, who had forced Finney. Score:

The Senators combined four hits to knot the count, 4 to 4, and then moved ahead as George Case slammed his fourth home run of the year with one out in the 10th.

HAPPY DAYS ARRIVE FOR CARDINALS

Third Baseman George Kurowski (second from left) and Pitcher Max Lanier of St. Louis Cardinals shake hands in dressing room after the Cards beat the Dodgers in Brooklyn yesterday, 2 to 1, to tie for first place in National league. Kurowski's home run with one on in the second inning was enough to win the game. Lanier held the Dodgers to five hits.

Cards Defeat Dodgers, 2-1; Tie for First

making menacing motions of one sort or another, he, too, got the bounce.

When the game was resumed with Coach Johnny Corriden ostensibly in charge of the Dodgers, Reese flied to Terry Moore, but Arky Vaughan walked. Augie Galan batted for Macon and sent a grounder over second. Martin Marion made a brilliant stop directly back of second, and, while sprawled on his stomach, was able to toss to Brown in time to force Vaughan. Brown, however, dropped the ball, Vaughan reaching second and Galan first on the only Cardinal error of the series.

The crowd, already highly excited because of the earlier incidents in the inning, had fits when Lanier cast a wild pitch which went to a corner formed by the screen and the end of the St. Louis dugout. Vaughan tried to get home from second on it but was out, Cooper to Lanier.

The climb which brought the Cards to a first place tie today was possible because the speedy, relaxed St. Louis boys have been able to win 29 of their last 34 games. The old gents assembled from here and there under the Dodger banner have been pretty good themselves. They have won 20 out of their last 34, which would have been easy sailing if the Cards hadn't gone crazy after finding themselves nine and a half games behind the Bums [being spelled with a little "b" in Brooklyn tonight]. With 14 games to go, each team expects to winn 100 games or more this season. The Cards won their first pennant in 1926 with 89 victories, or five under the total each of the teams possesses tonight. The Dodgers won the pennant last fall with an even 100 victories.

They Can Field, Too.

The Cards' powerhouse boys, Enos Slaughter, Terry Moore, and Stan Musial, contributed nothing to the hitting total against Macon and Curt Davis, his successor, today, tho they did sparkle afield. Besides the vital hits by Kurowski and Cooper, Hopp had two singles off Macon and a triple off Davis. Coaker Tripplett banged a double and Lanier made two singles.

Stan Bordagaray made two singles, the only Dodger to get more than one. The other hit besides Camilli's single and Reese's double and the two by little Frenchy was stroked by Joe Medwick. It was his only hit of the series but his 2,000th in National league competition. He made it with two out in the eighth and it sent Bill Herman, who had walked, to third with the potential tying run. Then Camilli bounced out to Brown.

Frenchy Is Out at Third.

After the first three Card batsmen in the game had been retired, Bordagaray opened the Dodger offensive with a single over second and promptly stole second to become the second Dodger to see second in 17 innings of competition with the Cubs and Cards. Herman struck out, then Bordagaray sought to panic the Cards by trying to steal third on Lanier's first pitch to Rizzo. Frenchy was sunk easily, but there was one of those automatic squawks by Manager Durocher, coaching at third. The inning then ended with Rizzo's fly to Slaughter.

With one out in St. Louis' second inning, Cooper singled to left. Kurowski knocked one against the right field wall which was an inch or so foul, then returned to the plate, after running to second base, and proceeded to drive the ball into the left field stand, over the 357 foot marker, scoring behind Cooper.

With two out in the Dodger fourth Lanier walked Camilli and Owen, provoking a flood of recollections that the same pitcher started an 11 run Pirate inning last Monday by walking two batsmen after two were out. The deadly parallel data was put back in the brine when Reese ended the inning by flying out to Slaughter.

Whitey Kurowski, Cardinals' Man of Hour, Only 22

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 12.—George [Whitey] Kurowski, the youthful husband and father whose home run bat rammed the St. Louis Cardinals into a first place tie with the fading Brooklyn Dodgers this afternoon, has been a major league player one year and in organized baseball four years.

After batting .303 for Rochester last season, he was brought to the National league by the Cadinals and became the roomie and job-challenger of Frank [Creepy] Crespi, who is dark and sinister looking in marked contrast with Kurowski's blond and bland appearance.

Whitey is a native and resident of Reading, Pa., where he was born 22 years ago, and where he learned to play baseball, tho his right arm is crooked and much shorter than his left. It is said the bones were inaccurately set after the arm had been broken in three places in a childhood accident. He has been rejected from military service because of the arm and deferred because he has a wife and one child.

In addition to rooming with Crespi, whose job he has won, Whitey is a roomer at Crespi's house in St. Louis.

In the last semi-official averages, Kurowski is listed with an average of .268. He has played in 102 games and has batted in 39 runs, including the two big ones today. In addition to his 9 homers he had made 3 triples and 17 doubles.

Dietrich, Ross Face Boston for Sox Today

The second place Boston Red Sox, whose mathematical pennant chances wouldn't bring a 10 cent bid on the open market, will be in Comiskey park this afternoon for a double header. They'll start Wilburn Butland, the rookie who has won six while losing one, and Charley Wagner against Bill Dietrich and Lee Ross of the White Sox.

Phil Rizzuto was back at short for the Yankees yesterday after going thru naval enlistment ceremonies in Norfolk, Va. He'll report there as a seaman first class Oct. 10, giving him ample time to lend a hand in the impending world series with whatever the National league finally decides to offer as competition.

Plans for the White Sox-Cubs city series are indefinite but the opener probably will be played in Wrigley field Wednesday, Sept. 30, with the second game at the same place the next day. Night games would be played in Comiskey park Friday and Saturday, thence back to Wrigley field for Sunday afternoon, if necessary.

JAX GIRLS BEAT RHEINGOLDS, 9-1, AS SERIES OPENS

The Jax Girls' softball team of New Orleans, La., defeated the Rheingold Girls, 9 to 1, last night in the first game of their series in Rand stadium. Lonnie Jackson, Jax pitcher, yielded four hits and struck out 13. Shortstop Freda Savona led the Jax attack with a home run in the fourth inning with the bases full. The second and final game of the series will be played tonight on the same field.

DROMO TO JOHN CARROLL.

Newark, O., Sept. 12 [Special].—John Dromo, athletic director and coach at St. Francis De Sales High school, has resigned. He is working in a Cleveland war plant and will assist the coaching squads in basketball and football at John Carroll university.

Cubs Engage Braves Today in Two Games

New York, Sept. 12 [Special].—The Cubs left the pennant feverish metropolitan area tonight for the quiet of Boston where they will play two games with the Braves tomorrow, followed by a single game Tuesday. The Cubs will play two with the Phils Wednesday, one on Thursday, then come back to engage the Cardinals in single contests Saturday and Sunday. The Cubs end their 1942 season in St. Louis with single games on Sept. 26 and 27, which will make them a factor in the pennant race if the tight battle between the Cards and Dodgers continues.

The most important single item for the Cubs tomorrow will be Claude Passeau's quest of his 19th triumph. The lean right hander apparently was headed for a plus 20 record, but has slowed down recently. Henry Wyse, rookie from Tulsa, will start the second game. He won in his major league debut recently, but needed help against the Reds in the eighth inning.

Various other Cub rookies will get a chance to put their skill on display in Boston and Philadelphia, but Manager Jim Wilson will have to present his best battlefront against the Cards in Chicago, which is an unwritten law against a pennant contender. Among the newcomers who will play again the Braves and Phils are Cy Block at third base, Marvin Rickert in center field and Paul Gillespie behind the bat. Paul hit a home run in his first major league appearance yesterday and drove in another run with a single against the Giants in the Cubs' losing 5 to 4 game.

MARVIN SCHMIDT, TESS LUBERSKY WIN IN CLOUT

Marvin T. Schmidt won the men's division of the clout which opened the seventh annual Chicago City Archery tournament yesterday when he shot a score of 244 out of a possible 324. His nearest competitor was Bill Lubersky, who shot 216.

Tess Lubersky won the women's division with a score of 244, also. Mrs. Marian Buswell of Urbana, the defending champion, who arrived too late to be eligible to enter the competition, nevertheless fired a complete round and had the day's top score of 268. Other scores:

Intermediate boys' division—Henry Reinecke, 196; junior boys' division—Clare Lyon, 226; Bill Scharf, 173; junior girls' division—Verdelle Krueger, 192; senior women's open division—Hattie Hahn of Milwaukee, 229.

Competition in other sections of the tournament will start at 9:30 this morning on the range in Jackson park at 63d street and the Outer drive, with all of the defending champions expected to be on hand.

THERMIS TWICE TAKES 1ST HEAT AT SOUTH HAVEN

South Haven, Mich., Sept. 12 (AP).—Karl Smither of Buffalo, N. Y., sailed his Thermis Twice to victory today in the first heat of the national Lightning class yachting regatta, but weather caused postponement of other events to tomorrow.

Smither's 19 foot craft outdistanced 13 others over the three mile Lake Michigan course and was timed in 38 minutes. The winner finished spectacularly after trailing in seventh at the first mile.

Wulter Swindeman Jr.'s Yankee Doodle and William Girkins' Sparkles, both of Toledo, finished second and third. Three boats failed to leave the starting line.

Frank Zurn's Breeze of Erie, Pa., was fourth and Dave Cluet's Butch II. of Long Island, N. Y., was fifth.

The final two heats of this race and two other races are crowded into tomorrow's closing program.

NEW OREGON TRAINER.

Eugene, Ore., Sept. 12 [AP].—The University of Oregon athletic department today appointed P. O. Sigerseth, former coach at Minot, N. D., trainer for the football team.

BRAVES TRIUMPH, 4-1; THEN TIE, 2-2, WITH PIRATES

Boston, Mass., Sept. 12 (AP).—Jim Tobin pitched the Boston Braves to a 4 to 1 victory today in the first game of a double header with the Pittsburgh Pirates, but the teams were forced to settle for an 11 inning 2 to 2 tie in the second game to enable the visitors to make train connections.

It was the second time in two playing days the Braves battled to a tie in the second game of a double header and it was the third tie of the season for the Pirates.

Tobin's victory was his 12th of the season against 19 defeats and his 26th complete game—the highest mark for complete games for a pitcher in either league thus far this season.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP).—Rookie Pitchers Andy Lapihuska and George Hennessey held Cincinnati to six hits today, but the Reds defeated the last place Phils, 4 to 1, anyway. Elmer Riddle was largely responsible for this, as he limited the Phils to seven hits.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Yankees made further preparation yesterday for their sixth world series engagement in the last seven seasons. They didn't progress with their usual gusto but nevertheless revealed enough of it to roll down the White Sox, 7 to 1, leaving themselves only three victories removed from a formal clinching of the 1942 American league title.

Instead of distance hits on which they usually rely, the Yanks politely confined their depredations to singles, but received enough outside assistance to balance the absence of extra base blows. The Sox were slightly out of whack as fielders in certain spots, a state that promoted two runs for the champions on one hit in the first four innings. Then they made a rout of it with a five run fifth, due mainly to Jake Wade's wildness and the ineffectiveness of Joe Haynes, his rescuer.

Sox Score in 9th Inning.

The Sox accomplished only one thing that might have annoyed the champions. James Dykes' lads had to contend with Spud Chandler, who so far as they are concerned never has been a soft touch. While weaving his 16th victory he carried them thru eight innings on a yield of six scattered hits, two by Rookie Jim Grant. But Wally Moses and Myril Hoag touched off a conspiracy in the ninth, the former scoring to cost the Yanks their 19th shutout, a total which would have passed their whitewash record set 'way back in 1909.

Having gone 23 innings without a run the Yanks didn't mind getting one for nothing right at the start. This happened because Wade began his day's work by passing Phil Rizzuto. He loitered around first base until after Red Rolfe had popped out and then set out on a steal of second. He made it and went on to third on George Dickey's bad throw. Roy Cullenbine's long fly gave Phil a quick ride across the plate.

Jake Has a Wild Streak.

The 1 to 0 count was altered after the Yanks got their second handout in the fourth. For a starter Joe DiMaggio bounced to Jim Webb, but the latter tried to throw the ball before it was in his hands and DiMaggio was safe on the error. Joe Gordon fanned and Charley Keller singled for the first hit off the Sox left hander, who then walked Gerry Priddy and Rollie Hemsley, forcing DiMaggio to score. There still was only one out, but Keller was forced at the plate by Chandler and the latter at second by Rizzuto.

The campaign to unseat Wade in the fifth began when Cullenbine singled with one out. DiMaggio walked and Gordon singled to drive in Cullenbine, the other runners moving up on the throw and Wade moving to the clubhouse to make room for Haynes. The rescuer purposely passed Keller and also walked Priddy unintentionally. The gift forced DiMaggio to score. A single by Hemsley shoved two runs home and a single by Chandler registered Priddy with the fifth one of the inning.

17-1 SHOT WINS $5,000 HANDICAP AT HAWTHORNE

Riverland Beats Potranco and Miss Dogwood.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Riverland, a horse which has been moving up steadily from the ranks of the platers, made a successful venture into the stake class yesterday at Hawthorne. Swinging to the outside of the leaders on the turn into the stretch, he came on powerfully to win the $5,000 Speed handicap.

After taking command at midstretch, he drew clear under moderately strong urging to beat his nearest rival by a length and a half. Potranco, Miss Dogwood, and Signator were separated by only a nose and a head for second, third, and fourth places.

With Regards Ninth.

Riverland, a 17 to 1 shot, numbered some highly regarded horses among his victims in this six furlong dash. Defense, the 5 to 2 favorite, finished eighth in the field of nine after he had been very sluggish in getting out of the gate. The only horse he beat was the 7 to 2 second choice, With Regards, which had run second to Alsab in the American Derby and third to Shut Eye in the Classic.

Inasmuch as the three horses in the money ranged from 10 to 1 to more than 17 to 1, substantial payoffs were returned all the way across the board. The prices on Riverland were $37.40, $15.60, and $8.80; on Potranco $11 and $7.60, and on Miss Dogwood $7.20.

Riverland Wins 5 Out of Last 7.

Riverland had been running in the $2,000 claiming class at Washington Park a little more than a month ago. Then his handlers began moving him up steadily and he kept right on winning. In his last seven starts he has won five times and has been second the other two times.

Signator and Miss Dogwood went out to make the pace immediately after the break. Potranco was close up during the run down the back stretch, but he was showing such a disposition to lug in that his rider had his head twisted half way around in an effort to control him. Meanwhile, Nick Jemas was keeping Riverland fairly close to the first flight.

On the curve, Signator went out to a lead of a length while Potranco and Miss Dogwood were following head and head. Then came Woof Woof. Riverland, racing in fifth position, was obliged to go to the outside of the other four as they came into the stretch. Once straightened out, however, he moved up steadily, caught the leaders in midstretch, and came right on home.

Patriot Can't Lose Pack.

Patriot, with Steve Brooks aboard, forged to the front early in this six and a half furlong dash, but he never was able to draw out to secure advantage. Hometown, Florizan Beau, and Yesteryear ran right with him down the back stretch and into the turn. On the curve Patriot got out to a lead of a length and a half, but still he couldn't shake off the pack.

Hometown gave up the chase, but Crossbow II. joined Yesteryear and Florizan Beau and these three came at Patriot powerfully in the stretch. The leader, tiring badly in the last few yards, just lasted long enough to hold a margin of a head over Yesteryear.

The entire proceeds of the fourth race were donated to the Chicago Servicemen's center. The sum amounted to $8,100. Paul Kelley's Votum was the winner of this event. Don MacAndrew brought him on in the stretch to overtake the tiring One Tip and Ariel Bird.

The mutuel handle for the day was $754,651.

Happy Wins Field Trial for Spaniels

BY BEN MARKLAND.

Mrs. Thelma Brown and one of her two hunting companions formed an unbeatable combination yesterday afternoon in the first local field trial of the autumn season.

When it's time to go duck hunting or pheasant hunting the George Browns leave their home at 9118 Dauphin avenue with their springer spaniel—Rod's Happy Contender. The hunting seasons haven't opened yet, but yesterday Mrs. Brown and "Happy" went afield to win the women's handling stake of the field trial being staged by the Sportsmen's Spaniel club.

George Gets Twin Today.

George Brown, who bought "Happy" as a 6 months old puppy and trained him both for field trials and hunting, will have his chance to handle the dog today in the final events of the week-end trial which is being held on grounds just south of 130th street and one-half mile west of Stony Island avenue.

Exceptional bird finding ability and two sparkling retrieves gave Mrs. Brown's charge dominance of yesterday's stake. On the first series he flushed four planted pigeons, the first three of which escaped the gunners. The fourth bird dropped 75 yards away from the dog on fairly heavy terrain, but "Happy" marked the fall perfectly and went to the bird and returned on a straight path.

Happy's Fourteenth Trophy.

"Happy" was one of three spaniels called for a second series from the starting field of seven, and again found all his birds, handled well, and repeated his earlier marking and retrieving act on an 80 yard fall. The trophy awarded to Mrs. Brown at the end of the stake was the 14th won by "Happy" in two years of competition.

Two other dogs called for a second series were Rough and Ready IV., cocker handled by Mrs. W. J. Allison, 14527 Wallace avenue, and Vick's Freckles Aglow, cocker handled by Mrs. Lawrence Vick, 14325 South La Salle street. The judges, H. C. Thies, 8949 South Throop street, and John Harding of Berwyn, placed Mrs. Allison's cocker second and Mrs. Vick's dog third. Fourth was awarded to a springer, Seth Marmaduke, handled by Mrs. Clarice Nierman, 9716 Indiana avenue.

More than 30 spaniels will compete in today's tests, which will start at 8 a. m. with an open stake for cockers. Other events include the spaniel shooting dog stake and the open springer stake. Judges will be Leonard Leader of Milwaukee, and Glen Dundore of Plainfield.

FILLY OWNED BY KING GEORGE WINS ST. LEGER

NEWMARKET, England, Sept. 12 (AP).—Sun Chariot, a filly owned by King George, romped home an easy winner in the St. Leger stakes today and established a new record for the royal stable.

Previously Sun Chariot had won the Thousand Guineas and The Oaks while his majesty's Big Game took the Two Thousand Guineas. With Sun Chariot's triumph today, King George could point to four victories in the five great English racing classics, a feat never previously accomplished by the royal stable. The only big fixture to escape was the Derby, won by Lord Derby's Watling Street.

Sun Chariot was much too good for Watling Street today, pulling away from the Derby winner and favorite at 2 to 1, with every stride in the stretch and winning by three lengths. Lord Rosebery's Hyperides was third. A 9 to 4 second choice in the betting,

FALCON II. WINS FIRST Q CLASS YACHTING RACE

2d, 3d Virginia Trophy Events Today.

Skippers L. L. [Ole] Karas and Clare Udell sailed their 50 foot sloop Falcon II to first place yesterday in the opening race for the Virginia trophy, emblematic of the Lake Michigan Q class championship. The Falcon led the five other entrants all the way. Winning elapsed time was 2 hours, 11 minutes, and 56 seconds.

The race, sponsored by the Chicago Yacht club off Belmont harbor, averaged only 6 miles per hour per yacht in the light winds and heavy seas. The series ends today with a second and third race.

The winner's crew consisted of the owners, Clare Udell Jr., Ed Schnabel, Sam Clarke, and Art Weil. Stephia, Eldred Stephenson's Milwaukee Yacht club Q boat, which won all three legs of the Tri-State race last week-end, placed second.

Hope Finishes Fifth.

Hope, defender of the Virginia trophy which it captured last in 1934 under a different owner, was fifth to finish. John Olsen of the Columbia Yacht club sailed the yacht.

Arrow class crews of the Sheridan Shore Yacht club defeated the Chicago Corinthian Yacht club's five teams yesterday off Wilmette harbor for the Great Lakes Arrow class title. Ralph Wheelock was first to finish.

Emerson Raymond won the Sheridan Shore Yacht club's Star class race off Wilmette harbor in his Dolphin, winner of the Shipping Board trophy last week-end.

Dry Sue Wins Two.

Arvid Gunderson, a private in the signal corps, sailed his and Ken Schmid's Snipe class sloop Dry Sue to two victories yesterday off Montrose harbor in races held by the Chicago Corinthian Yacht club. Lady O, William Wingard's season champion, was runnerup in both races.

Mack Bercaw and Ray Real won a special race for Arrow class crews which had not placed in Sheridan Shore races held this season. They defeated five other 18 foot sloops in their Mack Ray, with a time of 2:35:07.

Fran Byrne and his crew, Gary Comer, won the Columbia Yacht club's Star boat race in the Cherokee.

WOLVERINES GO THRU WORK WITH EYES ON SAILORS

Meet Great Lakes Sept. 26, Then Play Spartans.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 12.—Michigan's football men ended their week's work this afternoon with scrimmage and with more than a passing thought for the opening game Sept. 26 with the Great Lakes eleven. While the Wolverines are hopeful that they again will challenge for the Western conference title — an honor Minnesota alone has denied them for four years—there are five nonconference games which are so arranged as to be equally as important as the intraleague contests.

The Great Lakes game will carry particular emphasis since it will be the first gridiron engagement for the sailors since their undefeated World War I eleven captured the Rose bowl championship Jan. 1, 1919. Then, there are the Iowa City Commandos, who will come here Oct. 10. The preflight squad is coached by Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman, the gray thatched gentleman whose Minnesota teams have walloped the Wolverines for four consecutive seasons.

Play Michigan State.

Before this tilt, however, a game with Michigan State will decide the state championship. As usual, this will be bitterly fought before a large throng and the outcome is all important to the traditional rivals. Michigan, of course, expects to beat Harvard Nov. 7, but on the following Saturday the Wolverines travel to Notre Dame. The midwest has waited for this battle since 1909. That football relations now have oeen resumed, in Notre Dame's centennial year, points emphatically to the importance both universities attach to it.

Michigan scarcely can hope to take all five of these nonconference games. It may be the Wolverines will lose two of them, or even three, and still finish as high up in the Big Nine as they did in 1941 when they tied with Ohio State for second position by virtue of the brilliant 20 to 20 duel with the Buckeyes in the closing game of the campaign.

What of Crisler's Squad?

Head Coach Fritz Crisler sent a varsity eleven against the reserves this afternoon on Ferry field that, barring injury, may be the starting lineup with two exceptions against Great Lakes. Practice was secret, altho high school coaches, who held their annual Michigan State rules meeting here yesterday and today, were admitted. The Michigan varsity was Phil Sharpe, left end; Al Wisert, left tackle; Julius Franks, left guard; Mervin Pregulman, center; Bob Kolesar, right guard; Jack Karwales, right tackle; Elmer Madar, right end; Capt. George Ceithaml, quarter back; Tom Kuzma, left half; Frank Wardley, right half, and Don Boor, full back. Wardley, a sophomore, replaced Paul White, who has an injured rib cartilage. Boor, understudy to Bob Westfall last season, faces a stern fight to retain the full back job against the challenge of Sophomore Bob Wiese.

Excellent Backfield.

Crisler admitted today that Michigan's backfield personnel is excellent. The admission scarcely could be evaded, for Ceithaml, Kuzma, and White are holdovers. Kuzma carried the toga of the famous Tom Harmon last season without dragging the hem, and White, as a sophomore, was superior to any back who had paired with Harmon after 1938. Back of White are Wardley, a brother of Jay Wardley of Illinois, and Doc Robinson, a junior from Detroit, who showed varsity talent a year ago.

Bob Chappius from Toledo, O., a sophomore, is highly regarded as understudy to Kuzma. Cliff Wiese, a 1940 letterman who dropped out last season, again is candidate for the left half back job. In addition to Wiese and Boor, Don Lund, a sophomore from Detroit, is an excellent full back prospect. Lund must pass an examination Sept. 24 to become eligible.

Michigan's personnel problems are the ends, where Joe Rogers and Harlin Fraumann have been lost by graduation, and right tackle. Michigan lost Reuben Kelto at this tackle spot and an inexperienced man is certain to inherit it. Karwales was shifted from end to right tackle in spring drill. Bill Baldwin, 6 foot 4 inch sophomore from Lansing, Mich., who weighs 228 pounds, may eventually get the job. A third candidate is Bob Derleth, a 210 pound junior who was discovered in Michigan's physical condition courses. He has no previous experience.

Material Thin at Center.

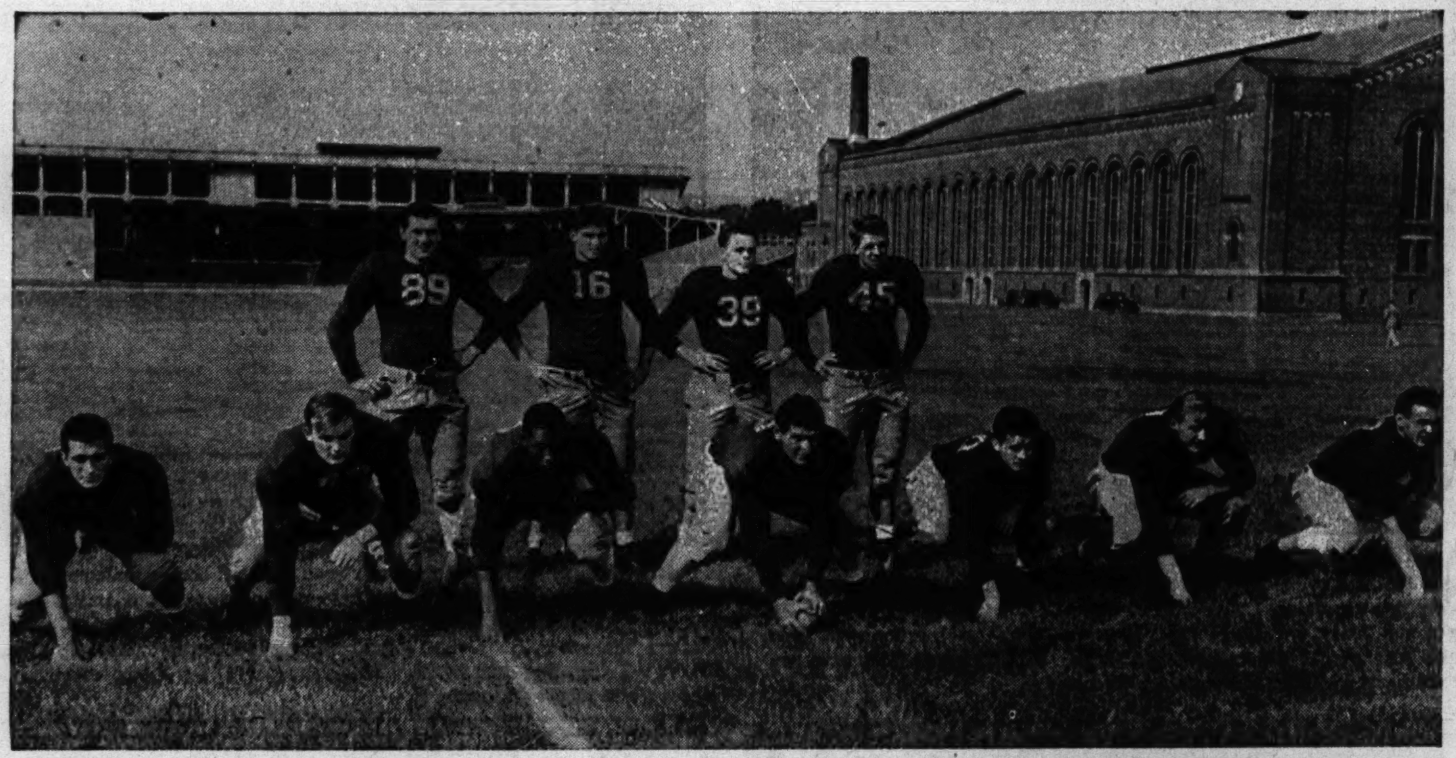
As usual, Wistert must play 60 minute football at left tackle. John Greene, a quarter back last season, has been shifted to support the position, and the third man is sophomore Don Cady. Material also is thin at center and the guards. Pregulman has been moved from guard to center. The substitution problem is so acute that Walter Freihofer, an end, has been sent to guard behind Franks. Incidentally, Franks is expected to continue at the same brilliant pace he showed last season as a sophomore.

Sharpe and Madar now have the end positions. The latter was listed as a quarter back last year. Rudy Smeja, left end, and Charles Kennedy, a transplanted back, at right end, are possibilities. Karwales, of course, can return to end if Baldwin makes good at tackle. Other ends are Jack Petoskey and Frank McCarthy, member of the Michigan track team.

Bill Hewitt to Coach Conshohocken Pro Team

Conshohocken, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP).—Bill Hewitt, former University of Michigan football star and more recently with the Chicago Bears and the Philadelphia Eagles, professional teams, will coach the Conshohocken professional team this year, it was announced today.

THE WOLVERINES SHARPEN THEIR TEETH



This is just one of the combinations Head Coach Fritz Crisler has at Ann Arbor as his squad prepares for its first game with the Great Lakes Bluejackets on Sept. 26. Left to right, front: Elmer Madar, Detroit, Mich., end; Bill Baldwin, Lansing, Mich., tackle; Julius Franks, Hamtramck, Mich., guard; Mervin Pregulman, Lansing, Mich, center; Ralph Amstutz, Oak Park, Ill., guard; Al Wistert, Chicago, tackle; Rudy Smeja, end. Rear: Capt. George Ceithaml, Chicago, quarter back; Paul White, River Rouge, Mich., half back; Don Boor, Dearborn, Mich., full back; Tom Kuzma, Gary, Ind., half back.

Otto Graham Stars in N. U. Scrimmage

Otto Graham's running and passing and the stellar performance of a pair of sophomore half backs, Joe Scriba and Nick Vodick, highlighted Northwestern's first football scrimmage of the season yesterday. Four teams faced each other during a two hour workout that produced five touchdowns, three by the first team and two by the second.

The season's first scrimmage revealed numerous shortcomings, particularly in ball handling and timing of plays. The showing of a number of sophomores indicated that veterans will be pushed for starting assignments at nearly every position.

Graham sparked the first team's attack as it rolled up two quick touchdowns over the third team. Don Buffmire opened the drive with a fifteen yard sortie off tackle, followed by Graham's twenty yard pass to End Bud Hasse to place the ball on the 10 yard line.

Buckets Hirsch, full back, plunged over for a touchdown. The varsity soon tallied again as Graham rifled a long pass to Hasse on the 5 yard line where Hirsch again plunged over.

The first team back field consisted of Graham and Buffmire, half backs; Lynne McNutt, a sophomore, at quarter back, and Hirsch, full back. The line consisted of Hasse and Bob Motl, ends; Warren Karlstad and Ray Vincent, tackles; Nick Burke and Alex Kapter, guards, and Hal Hudson, center.

PURDUE VARSITY WINS, 59-0.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 12 [Special.—Purdue's varsity displayed a versatile attack here this afternoon as it defeated the reserve Bees, 59 to 0, in the first public appearance of Coach Elmer Burnham's short punt formation offense. The varsity rolled up nine touchdowns as a number of sophomores, notably Henry Stram and Andrew Berkley, served notice they will be strong competition to the veterans.

Nine different players figured in scoring the touchdowns as Burnham used over three complete teams. Bob Hajzyk, Ed Cycenas, John Andretich, Henry Stram, Bob Chester, and Tony Berto all scored on running plays; Walter Cook intercepted a pass for a touchdown and Chuck Harris and Norman Maloney scored on passes.

SPARTANS LOSE SMOLINSKI.

East Lansing, Mich., Sept. 12 [Special].—Michigan State brought its first week of workouts to a close this afternoon. Starting the season with one of the smallest squads in years, the problem was increased when several standbys failed to make their appearances.

The chief loss was Ted Smolinski, tall tackle from Rogers City. Smolinski had been considered a likely starter at one of the tackle posts when the season opens against Michigan Oct. 3, but he had gathered enough credits to graduate, so will not be available.

WARRIORS SHARPEN ATTACK.

Camp Grant, Ill., Sept. 12 [Special].—The Camp Grant Warriors worked on signal drill today as they did yesterday, sharpening the attack which they will use against the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Wis., next Saturday.

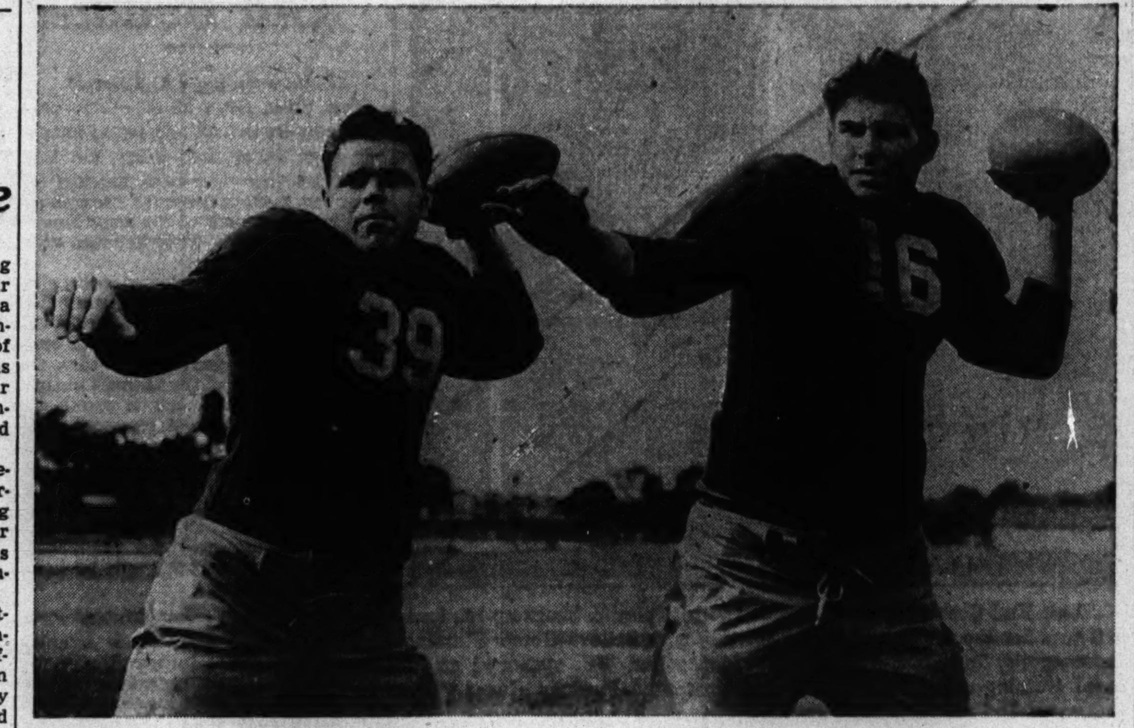
Only two scrimmages are planned next week as the soldiers have been practicing for six weeks and already have played two games. Camp Grant lost, 32 to 6, to the Chicago Bears, but last Sunday beat the Milwaukee Falks, 20 to 0.

HIRSCH LEADS BADGERS.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 12 [Special].—Despite a charley horse which reduced his speed, Elroy Hirsch, sophomore candidate for a half back position on the University of Wisconsin football team, turned in an impressive performance in scrimmage this afternoon. Outstanding among his accomplishments were thirty-five and fliftyfive yard jaunts and a pass to Half Back Mark Hoskins for a touchdown. In all the play covered eighty yards. The best job in the line was done by Lloyd Wasserbach, one of four veteran tackles.

LAWRENCE VS. DE PAUW OFF.

Appleton, Wis., Sept. 12 [Special]:—In compliance with the request of Joseph Eastman, ODT coördinator, that amateur athletic teams curtail their traveling as much as possible, Lawrence college will not travel to Greencastle, Ind., on Oct. 10 to meet DePauw university as originally scheduled. DePauw authorities granted a request by Lawrence for a cancelation which means that the Lawrence-DePauw football series must now await until after the war.



Here are a couple of southpaw passers who ar e expected to make names for themselves with the Wolverines this fall. At left is Don Boor of Dearborn, Mich., junior full back, and Paul White of River Rouge, Mich., junior half back.

MARQUETTE HIGH WINS, 12-6, OVER ST. IGNATIUS

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 12 [Special].—Marquette University High school's football team, coming from behind in the third quarter, made its 1942 debut with a 12 to 6 victory over a strong St. Ignatius eleven of Chicago here today.

After Full Back Bob McDonald had give St. Ignatius the lead with a twenty yard touchdown run in the second quarter, Marquette tied the game in the third period when End Gene Eberle took a pass from Half Back Jim Brennan and lateraled to Full Back Telk, who went twenty yards to score. Brennan provided the winning margin on a thirty-one yard run later in the third quarter. Lineup:

MARQUETTE [12].		ST. IGNATIUS [6].
Farrell	L.E.	Sweeney
Lauer	L.T.	Janousek

CEDAR RAPIDS WINS THREE EYE PLAYOFF, 3 TO 0

Madison, Wis., Sept. 12 (AP).—The Cedar Rapids Raiders scored a grand slam in the Three Eye league tonight as they beat Madison's Blues, 3 to 0, in the final playoff contest. The Raiders won all three games. Cedar Rapids won the pennant during the regular season. Score:

Cedar Rapids	000	001	110—3	8	2
Madison	000	000	000—0	4	2

Gophers Beat Second String, But Fumble

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 12 (AP).—Minnesota's football team, suffering from an acute case of fumbling, squeezed out a 6 to 0 victory over the second string today.

Coach George Hauser game the second eleven a rest after 20 minutes and the regulars worked against a third string lineup.

Daly scored a second touchdown against this team on a 47 yard run after taking a lateral from Quarter Back Bob Sandberg.

Tackles Dick Wildung and Paul Mitchell led the regulars' hard charging line.

IRISH CAPTAIN HURT.

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 12 [Special].—Capt. George Murphy was added to the long list of Notre Dame football casualties today when he suffered an injured leg early in practice and had to leave the field. He will be out of action for several days. Other regulars who are out of action entirely because of injuries are Dippy Evans, left half back, Creighton Miller, right half back, Gerry Cowhig, full back, and Bob Neff, right tackle.

Two varsity elevens worked out today against two freshman teams, the varsity concentrating on defense for the passer, using few running plays. The varsity retained possession of the ball at all times, and after each play the ball was returned to midfield. The passing of Angelo Bartelli and the running of Jim Mello, sophomore full back, featured the two hour scrimmage session. Bertelli again displayed amazing accuracy with both short and long passes. He is one regular who is expected to be in midseason form by the time the Irish open their season with Wisconsin in Madison on Sept. 26.

BUCKEYES NEED KICKER.

Columbus, O., Sept. 12 (AP).—Coach Paul E. Brown watched his Ohio State university football squad in its first regulation practice game today, then commented that the team had three principal shortcomings: Lack of weight, experience, and a punter of Western conference caliber.

Half Back Les Horvath turned in the best play of the first string Red's 21 to 0 victory over the Whites. He intercepted a pass and ran 75 yards for a touchdown in the second period. Earlier he had scored the Red's first touchdown.

F. J. Buckridge Wins North Shore Tournament

F. J. Buckridge yesterday won the North Shore Country club 54 hole tournament with a score of 76—72—72—220. L. R. Sams finished second with 72—72—77—221. E. R. Kerber Jr. won the match play against par shoot with a 70—2—72, 3 up, with Buckridge second, 86—14—72 all even. G. R. Stewart took the Club Grand Prize sweepstakes with an 80 plus 3—83.

ILLINOIS HOLDS 1ST SCRIMMAGE; SCORES TWICE

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 12 [Special].—In the first scrimmage of the season today the Illinois Blues, composed of first and second string players, defeated the Whites, 13 to 0.

The first eleven was unable to score. Dick Good and Tony Butkovich in the second backfield drove fifty yards on running plays, Butkovich scoring on a short plunge. Good later intercepted a pass by Art Dufelmeir and threw to Ray Grierson in the end zone for the second touchdown. Good kicked the additional point from placement.

Starting lineup:

Craig	L.T.	Clatt
Wilson	L.G.	Buddenbaum

INDIANA SCRIMMAGES.

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 12 [Special].—Coach Bo McMillin pulled the throttle on the Indiana football machine for the first time this season today, sending his first and second teams against each other in a block and tackle scrimmage.

Altho he was withheld from the scrimmage, Billy Hillenbrand barked out the orders, ran and passed with the first string team in a single rehearsal that preceded the scrimmage, which represented the first genuine contact work.

MARQUETTE RESERVES IMPROVE

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 12 [Special].—Three men were used at almost all positions today as Coach Tom Stidham sent his Marquette university football varsity thru an offensive scrimmage. Improvement by the reserves was a pleasing aspect, and the power and speed shown by Full Backs Carl Schuette, Johnny Rudan, and Hal Eigner was encouraging. No new casualties were picked up, but Chuck Simon, sophomore tackle from Chicago, continued to take things easy because of the head injury he received in scrimmage Thursday.

IOWA HOLDS SCRIMMAGE.

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 12 [Special].—Coach Eddie Anderson sent the Iowa football squad thru a light scrimmage today. The workout, however, was not heavy, for Anderson does not want to risk injury to key players.

He stuck mainly to a first team composed of Bill Burkett and Bill Parker at ends; Bruno Niedziela and John Staak at tackles; Gene Curran and Del Dickerhooff at guards, Tom Hand at center, Jim Youel at quarter back, Dick Hoerner at full back, and Ted [Duke] Curran and Tom Farmer at half backs.

The scrimmage was limited to line tackling and followed a short signal drill. Anderson said the squad was in sound physical condition, but he didn't want any one turning up with lame ankles or legs prior to next Saturday's opener against Washington university of St. Louis.

Harris Stageberg, 20 pound junior guard, has reported for workouts.

BEARS, REDSKINS VIE TODAY; ARMY TO PLAY PACKERS

Cards Open Season with Rams in Buffalo.

Games Today

Chicago Cardinals vs. Cleveland Rams in Buffalo, N. Y.
Philadelphia at Pittsburgh.
*Chicago Bears vs. Washington in Washington.
*Green Bay vs. Western Army All-Stars in Milwaukee.
*Not league games.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

Professional football bursts forth this afternoon with two National league openers which are overshadowed by a game for the army emergency relief fund and an exhibition between the probable finalists for the 1942 championship.

Additional evidence accumulated last week that today's skirmish between the Chicago Bears and the Washington Redskins, with nothing at stake except their professional pride, will be a preview of the league championship battle scheduled for Dec. 13. The Redskins' 28 to 7 whacking of the Green Bay Packers supports earlier predictions that they are the powerhouse of the eastern division and something of a cinch to succeed the New York Giants as head men of that sector. Today's game will be played in Griffith stadium.

Packers Meet Army All-Stars.

A replica in miniature of the recent College All-Stars-Bears' game in Soldiers' field will be held this afternoon in Marquette stadium, Milwaukee. This one pairs the Packers and Maj. Wallace Wade's western soldier eleven and it is understood that Mons. Curley Lambeau, boss of the Packers, has been instructed by those who preach that National league football is tops to stop the westerners' march. Since losing to the Redskins, 26 to 7, Maj. Wade's huskies have beaten the Chicago Cardinals, 16 to 10, and the Detroit Lions, 12 to 0.

The Milwaukee game, which will start at 2 o'clock, is for the benefit of the army emergency relief fund. More than 800 contributions of $25 each have been received from fans in exchange for choice seats. Marquette's stadium accommodates 24,475 and it is believed the place will be packed. Regular ticket prices are $3.30, $2.20, and $1.10.

Cards and Rams in Buffalo.

As for the league games, they bring together the two bottom elevens of the eastern and western divisions in the 1941 race. The Chicago Cardinals, fourth in the west, meet the Cleveland Rams, fifth in the same sector, in Buffalo, one of the early shrines of pro football. The Pittsburgh Steelers, who won one game in the eastern division last season, meet the Philadelphia Eagles, who were fourth in the same group. This one will be in Pittsburgh.

George Halas, owner-coach of the Bears, said as early as last August that his champions probably would lose to the Redskins whom they do not meet in a regular league game. The doings of Sammy Baugh, Andy Farkas, and Dick Todd, and a powerful line against the Packers are enough to restrain any raucous comment in answer to Halas' semiprediction. One thing is certain, this will be the Bears' toughest game to date, even granting that next Sunday's meeting with the Eastern All-Stars in Boston is a tough assignment, too.

Bears vs. Packers on Sept. 27.

After this Boston game, the Bears will come back home and prepare for a drive to their third straight league title. The first test will be Sept. 27 in Green Bay against a Packer team weakened by loss of 19 players, but fortunately possessing some talented newcomers. At last count, Mons. Lambeau had only 31 players on his roster, two under the league limit and was scurrying around for more help. When an old organization like the Packers has a shortage, this is evidence the war really is cutting in on football material.

Maj. Wade's army warriors are a mixture of stars fresh from college and the National league. One of them, Kay Eakin, ex-New York Giant, threw a touchdown pass to Bill Conatser, one of the nine one-time Texas Aggies on the team, against Detroit Wednesday night. Marion Pugh, a triple threat back, is another former Giant. The squad is made up of 6 first lieutenants, 12 second looeys, 9 noncommissioned officers, 1 first class private—Steve Petro of Pitt—and 18 buck privates.

Kimbrough Most Effective.

The All-Stars' most effective offensive player to date has been John Kimbrough, who ran fifty-nine yards for a touchdown against Washington and almost single-handedly beat the Cardinals in Denver.

The Cardinals should be slight favorites to win in Buffalo today. In fact, they have designs on winning their first three league games, which would bring them to a showdown with the Packers in Comiskey park Sunday night, Oct. 4.

Coach Jimmy Conzelman pronounced his Cardinals in excellent condition after today's final practice. Frank Ivy, end from Oklahoma, twisted an ankle in the Western Army game in Denver last Sunday, but will start. Otherwise the Chicagoans are in top shape.

The Cards are using a Notre Dame box, without a shift, and a flanker. Their starting back field will be made up of Buddy Parker, quarter back; Bud Schwenk and Steve Lach, halves, and Marshall Goldberg, full back.

ILLINOIS PGA GOLF TOURNEY TO OPEN TODAY

Revolta to Defend His Title at St. Charles.

The Illinois section of the Professional Golfers' Association of America, for several years one of the most progressive in the national organization, today will resume the business of competitive golf by opening its annual state tournament at the St. Charles Country club. John Revolta of Evanston, the hamfisted, curly-haired one who took the highly valued national championship in 1935, will be back to defend the title he won last year at Hieland lodge in Kankakee.

Pro-Amateur Today.

The professionals will warm up for their own show by joining with amateur members of St. Charles in a morning pro-amateur tournament today. This afternoon they will get down to the serious business of their own party by playing the first 18 holes of the 54 hole medal play battle. The concluding 36 holes will be transacted tomorrow.

Revolta is assured no easy route to another title, for he must meet such talented fairway debaters as Jim Foulis of Ruth Lake, recent author of a 64 on his home course; Tommy Armour of Medinah, the veteran who has won them all; Abe Espinosa of Decatur; Dick Metz of Oak Park, another former champion; George Smith of Onwentsia; Harry Adams and Charley Penna of Medinah, and Ky Laffoon, who generally registers from Miami, Okla., but who happens to be a member in good standing of the Illinois section when it comes to PGA competition.

Taught in Tribune Golf School.

The Illinois section, thru its president, Alex Cunningham of North Shore, and its tournament chairman, Bill Gordon of Tam o' Shanter, has had a right busy season of it in this war year. After contributing their services to the annual free Tribune golf school in the spring, the Illinois pros embarked on a series of exhibition matches for war relief which proved highly successful. It was this same group which gave the national body one of its most progressive presidents in Tom Walsh of Westgate Valley, and which first sponsored such forward plans as caddy education and general clinics for all golfers.

Pairings follow:

1:30—Kenneth Keith, Gary; Art Toepke, Itasca; Chick Faltus, Kankakee.

1:40—Dick Metz, Oak Park; Al Huske, De Kalb; Matt Mattison, Ridge.

Soccer Teams Pry Open New Season Today

BY OFFSIDE.

Another long grind for 1942-'43 soccer supremacy gets under way today, with most of the 50 clubs in all divisions going into action. With the disbanding of the Swedish Americans and American Nickelods new faces will be seen with several of the teams.

The attraction on the north side will be the match between the Vikings and the Linneas, in Winnemac park stadium, Foster avenue and Leavitt street. The Vikings, who lost the services of the Anderson brothers, Harold Roscoe, will have Weck Hennley, their star defender, back in the lineup after a year's layoff; Hans Ohrenberger of the Swedes, and Leonard Anderson of the Chicago Sport club also have been added to the roster.

The Linneas, who won the A division championship last year, will field the same side that carried them to the title.

In Yates stadium, 82d street and Yates avenue, the South Side Swedes meet the Fichte in the feature match of the A division.

The Swedes, who came thru last season without a defeat, have signed Einer Pearson, the old Sparta star. Included in their lineup will be Bully Fraser and the Waldrom twins, Art and Al. The lineups:

DUPONT IS READY FOR LANDER BOUT TOMORROW NIGHT

Joe Dupont, 1940 city Golden Gloves featherweight winner, is ready for the most important bout of his career—a 10 round event against Eddie Lander in Marigold Gardens tomorrow. The south side boxer never has gone more than eight rounds before but believes the extra six minutes will not be a hardship.

Perhaps he is correct since his opponent from the west side has not fought since last March 24 when he suffered his 11th setback in 44 appearances, at the hands of Terry Young.

Rise a Mystery of Boxing.

Dupont's rise to a windup spot in the popular north side club is an example of the mysteries of professional boxing. One June 1 he ran into a blow to the chin propelled by Billy Parsons, Danville, Ill., junior welterweight, in the first round and the punch floored him for the count.

The incident only served to drive Dupont to greater endeavor. He won his next four fights, Eddie Carson, Alvin Gomez, Parsons [in a rematch], and Ramey McKnight being his victims. The conquest of Carson did not come as a surprise but the others did.

Draws with Teaney.

However, Joe's major achievement was an eight round draw fight he fought with Harry Teaney in the Marigold arena on Aug. 24. It was this effort which gained for him the chance against Lander.

A six round secondary feature tomorrow will bring together Gomez and Gene Spencer. Jerry Pitino and Al Walker will be foes in a five round encounter. Four rounders will involve Walter Schramm, Gary heavyweight, and Harold Lang, and Parsons and Bill Jordan.

Bert Rubi, Detroit heavyweight wrestler, is paired with Charles [Gorilla] Grubmyer in White City tomorrow. . . . Tami Maurielo, Brooklyn heavyweight, will face Jimmy Bivins in Cleveland Tuesday. . . . Georgie White, who was a welterweight when he joined the United States army, sends word from his base in England that he has put on 35 pounds and is now boxing as a heavyweight in service bouts over there. . . . Amateur boxing shows will be offered in Paderewski stadium tomorrow and Wednesday. . . . The Forest Park Civilian Defense organization is sponsoring tomorrow's card.

CHANUTE FIELD PLANESMEN WIN 8TH IN ROW, 6-3

Chanute Field, Ill., Sept. 12 [Special].—The Chanute Field Planesmen beat Chicago Pirates, 6 to 3, here this afternoon and ran their winning streak to eight straight. Two runs in the last of the sixth tied the score and three more in the seventh provided the margin for Milton Goemer's eighth pitching victory.

Some heads-up base running brought Frank Scalies all the way in from first on Vern Riha's single with the run that tied the score in the sixth. Hugh Corbin's double to center field scored the fourth and fifth tallies in the next inning. Ed Gittens collected three singles, hitting in his eighth straight game. Score:

Louis, Conn Meet; Soon Old Buddies

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Two soldiers who on Oct. 12 will try to knock out each other met today for the first time since they were matched to fight for the heavyweight championship for the benefit of the army emergency relief fund. They behaved like long parted buddies.

Sergt. Joe Louis, wearing corporal's stripes as "Ah didn't have time to sew on the new ones," arrived this morning from Fort Riley, Kas., ran the gantlet of gaping red caps in the dim caverns of the Grand Central station train shed, left a group of young Canadian aviators speechless at the unexpected glimpse of him, and headed for Promoter Mike Jacob's office.

There he met Billy Conn, the party of the second part in the charity contest, which, as previously announced by the Associated Press, will be held in Yankee stadium.

Greet Each Other Affably.

They greeted each other affably, then for a few minutes stood self-consciously, Louis spreading out a newspaper and avidly perusing first the sports page, then the comics. The embarrassment quickly wore off, however, and before long the two were chatting animatedly, pairing off together for the walk to a car which took them, seated side by side, to the war department's office of public information.

There they sat in on a meeting attended by army officials, Jacobs, and the sports writers' committee, at which the announcement of the Yankee stadium site was confirmed and the time of the bout, approximately 5 p. m. CWT, was set.

They then attended the Army All-Star New York Giant charity football game this afternoon, and will leave tomorrow night or Monday morning for their respective training camps.

Louis a Trifle Heavy.

Louis, munching an apple which his secretary, Freddy Guinyard, had brougt to the train, looked fit as a fiddle, altho a little on the heavy side. He reckoned he weighed about 215, but agreed when pressed it probably was closer to 220. And, he said, he's only been eating two meals a day.

He had little to say about the coming fight which will mark his second meeting with the Pittsburgh boxer. He did venture that he was going to try for a knockout, and that "unless Billy keeps out of the way it will come early." Louis won the first fight by a knockout in the 13th round.

Too Fine in Last Meeting.

He was accompanied by his comanager, Julian Black, who said the champion planned to enter the ring at between 206 and 208 pounds, as he was too fine the last time he met Conn.

Louis will take it easy the first week, becoming adjusted to a changed eating schedule and shaking out the kinks acquired in army life and the almost daily horseback routine.

ALL-STAR TENPIN PROGRAM MOVES ON ALL FRONTS

Construction of Alleys Starts Tomorrow.

The program which is to reach its culmination in the All-Star bowling tournament for the national match game championship and, thereafter, surrender of the 12 tournament alleys in the Auditorium theater to the armed forces, this week will reach the point whereat Chicago bowlers will be enabled to make their first move toward participation.

The tournament framework has been set up by the committee of its sponsors, the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors Association of America. It has been decided that the event shall be held Dec. 5 thru Dec. 13 in the Auditorium theater, that Champion Ned Day shall defend his title against John Crimmins of Detroit in a 90 game match, that a maximum of 120 of the nation's outstanding bowlers shall shoot in eliminations which will scale down to a field of nine plus Day or Crimmins—finally ending in the crowning of the 1943 champion. Furthermore, Bowling Proprietors of Greater Chicago have voted to acquire the tournament alleys and turn them over to the Auditorium service center for free use by men in uniform.

Lay Alleys Tomorrow.

And about the details. One deals with the alleys. Construction of those lanes will start tomorrow and work will go on until the shiny maple pathways have been installed in the Auditorium, along with all the newest equipment such as benches, modern pin racks and other features.

While this physical side of the program is being advanced, the committees handling the All-Star tournament and the Chicago proprietors arranging the Chicago preliminaries will be at work. The local group expects to have entry blanks out within a week for the top flight shooters who will be aiming at the eight places in the big show open to Chicagoans. Only 190 and better average bowlers will be eligible. They may obtain entry blanks from Math Luecker, 1738 Addison street, and must get them back to him with their $25 entry fee by Oct. 10. They then will compete in matches on the first three week-ends of October—Oct. 17-18, 24-25, and Oct. 31-Nov. 1. Each bowler will be one of a group of eight and will roll a four game match against every other man in the group.

Luecker Is Secretary.

Proprietors wishing to have preliminaries in their houses also must communicate with Mr. Luecker, who is secretary of the Chicago proprietors' group. Their bids must be in by midnight of Sept. 30 and the places at which the trials will be held are to be determined in a proprietors' meeting the following day.

The Chicagoans who qualify will have their expenses paid into the All-Star event, including the entry and bowling fee of $50. All entry fees for the preliminaries will go into the prize fund as will part of the $25 to be charged. A 30 cent admission, including tax, is to be asked. Accordingly, the prize list in the preliminaries should be attractive whether a participant makes the big show or not. The qualifying bowlers will join Joe Wilman, Joe Sinke, Bill Hargadon, Herb Freitag, Wally Freitag, and Bill Felsch as Chicago's 14 man entry in the All-Star finals in the auditorium. Those last six are seeded by reason of having finished among the first 20 in the 1941 tourney.

Bowling in Other Centers.

While Chicagoans are shooting, bowlers also will be keeping pace with them in Detroit, Milwaukee, and other tenpin centers from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific coast. Last year 80 bowlers from 43 cities in 19 states took part in the All-Star tournament in the Coliseum. This year the representation by states and cities is expected to be even greater. All preliminary competition will be over some weeks beforehand, so that the contestants will all be ready to go to the Auditorium with the same test.

All profits from the All-Star tournament will go to the Auditorium service center's free bowling plant. Furthermore, the Classic league of Chicago has decided to put the year's proceeds of its Sunday evening sweepstakes into the maintenance of the alleys, thereby assuring soldiers, sailors, marines, and other fighters of a first class bowling center for the duration. The Classic will open these sweepers tonight at 5961 Kedzie avenue.

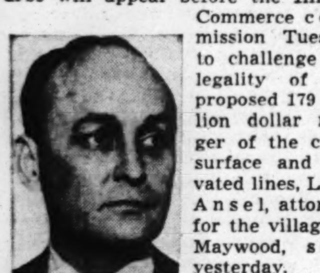
SUBURBS SEEK PART IN MERGER OF CITY'S LINES

Protest Is Planned at Next Hearing.

BY LAURENCE BURD.

Representatives of six Chicago suburbs will appear before the Illinois Commerce commission Tuesday to challenge the legality of the proposed 179 million dollar merger of the city's surface and elevated lines, Louis Ansel, attorney for the village of Maywood, said yesterday.



Leslie E. Salter to conduct hearings.

Ansel said Maywood, Oak Park, Forest Park, Berwyn, Cicero, and Evanston will ask permission to intervene in the traction merger case at Tuesday's hearing, the first to be held by the commission on the transit plan for six weeks.

The commerce commission's approval of the unification program was asked by the surface and "L" lines July 22, after the merger had been approved by the United States District court, the transit securities' holders, and the people of Chicago in a referendum.

Suburbs Want Voice.

"We believe the proposed unification would be illegal," Ansel said, "because the suburbs would have no voice in regulating the transit lines, altho the lines run thru the suburbs and are used by many outlying residents."

Ansel said only residents within Chicago were permitted to vote on the traction plan at the referendum last June 1. The program provides, moreover, he added, for a three man local transit commission, to be appointed by the mayor of Chicago, which would replace the state commerce commission as the regulatory authority over the surface and "L" lines.

He contended the creation of such a local transit body would be illegal, because the suburbs would have no representation on it. Suburban residents at present are indirectly represented on the state commission because it is appointed by the governor who is elected by a state-wide vote, he added.

Merger Is Anticipated.

The establishment of a Chicago transit commission was authorized by enabling legislation adopted by the state assembly in 1929 in anticipation of a traction merger in Chicago. The Illinois Supreme court in 1932 upheld the validity of some phases of a previous transit consolidation program for Chicago, but did not rule on the legality of the creation of a local commission.

The commerce commission is expected on Tuesday to order the immediate resumption of hearings on the merger plan so that evidence on which to base a decision can be presented by the companies. The commission is required under state laws to inquire into all details of the plan and to approve or disapprove it.

Follows Conferences.

The commission hearings are to be conducted by Examiner Leslie E. Salter, who was special prosecutor for the federal government in the Insull mail fraud case in 1934. The commission will also be represented at the hearings by Fred Kleinman, chief of accounts and finance.

Salter and Kleinman at informal conferences with the traction lines' attorneys in the last few weeks have requested complete data supporting the proposed $179,000,000 capitalization for the merged company and evidence to show that earnings will be sufficient to pay interest and dividends on bonds and stocks to be issued. Kleinman has also asked for a statement as to why the Chicago Motor Coach company is not included in the unified setup.

CALL PRODUCER VOTE ON BOOST IN MILK PRICES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—An immediate vote will be taken by Missouri and Illinois dairymen supplying the St. Louis market on revision of producer prices under a federal milk marketing order, the department of agriculture said today.

The price of Class 1 milk [used for drinking and cream] would be increased from about $2.85 a hundred pounds [approximately 47 quarts] to $3.20. The price for Class 2 [used for manufacture of cheese, butter, and ice cream] would rise from about $2.15 to $2.50.

The federal order does not set retail prices.

Butter and Egg Futures Add Fractions to Advance

Butter futures advanced 0.05 cent a pound on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, the November delivery closing at 42.15 cents. Firm cash markets and decreasing storage stocks were behind the rise. Shell egg futures were unchanged to 0.05 cent a dozen higher, with December contracts at 35.20 cents.

War Contracts in Chicago Area Pass 4 Billion Mark

Total war contracts and subcontract in the Chicago area topped 4 billion dollars as 52 companies were awarded 57 new war orders last week, Leverett S. Lyon, chief executive officer of the Chicago Association of Commerce, announced yesterday. Seven of the companies previously had not received contracts.

United Nations Meat Supplies Grow Steadily

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

As the war enters its fourth year the meat situation for nations fighting the axis is better than it was at this time last year or at the beginning of the war in 1939, thanks to the strenuous efforts of American farmers and the meat packing industry. Chicago packing authorities who expressed this view yesterday said that packers are turning out meat at a rate 16 per cent higher than in September last year and 30 per cent above the September, 1939, output.

While stringent rations are doled out for the axis and enemy dominated populations, the united nations as a group will have more meat this winter than at any time since the war started, it was said.

There has been a steady increase in the butchering of meat animals in this country and all records will be pulled down during the next four months as the fall and winter selling by farmers gets under way.

Contrast in Axis Lands.

In contrast to this record breaking flow of meat products into the united nations' larder, packers estimate that the axis and conquered countries will be on a bare subsistence meat allowance. Meat production in most of Europe is expected to be at the lowest level in recent history. One source placed the supply of the axis and conquered territory at about 60 per cent of the 1939 supply, basing the figure on the trend of production in countries from which information is available.

Germany has ruthlessly confiscated animals, depleting breeding herds in countries long known for ample production. One example is Denmark, which has about 40 per cent fewer hogs than before the war and expects a much steeper decrease in 1943. Danish farmers report 51 per cent fewer sows farrowing pigs this fall than in 1939.

Swedish Output Falls.

Pork production in Sweden, despite its nonbelligerency is off substantially, partly because of the shortage of animal feeds. Hogs slaughtered during the first half of the market year [October-March] 1941-'42, totaled 452,000 head, 29 per cent fewer than in the preceding year and 46 per cent below the level of two years ago. Swedish farmers also report a steady decline in population of other animals since 1939. Production of cheese, an important product in that country, has dropped sharply.

Meat production in plants under federal inspection in the United States during the first eight months that this country was at war, set a new record at 11,427,253,000 pounds of beef, veal, pork, lard, lamb, and mutton. It is estimated that production during the next four months will average 25 per cent larger than a year ago.

Movement of the record supply of spring pigs showed signs of increasing last week. Despite the Monday holiday, the Chicago stock yards received 97,800 hogs during the week, the largest total since July.

KANSANS DEMAND ANSWER TO FARM LABOR PROBLEM

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—Steps to curb the depletion of agricultural man power in the midwest, including a proposal to declare the farm belt a critical area, were discussed today at a conference between Paul V. McNutt, war man power commissioner, and seven members of the Kansas congressional delegation.

Sen. Clyde M. Reed [R., Kas.], one of the conferees, said the suggestion to declare the farm belt a critical area in order to halt the drain of farm workers to the army and other industries, was made by McNutt.

The senator said McNutt also had agreed with members of the delegation that efforts should be made to stop employment of farm laborers by ordnance plants.

Present at the conference, in addition to Reed, were Sen. Arthur Capper and Representatives Clifford R. Hope, U. S. Guyer, Thomas D. Winter, Edward H. Rees, and Frank Carlson.

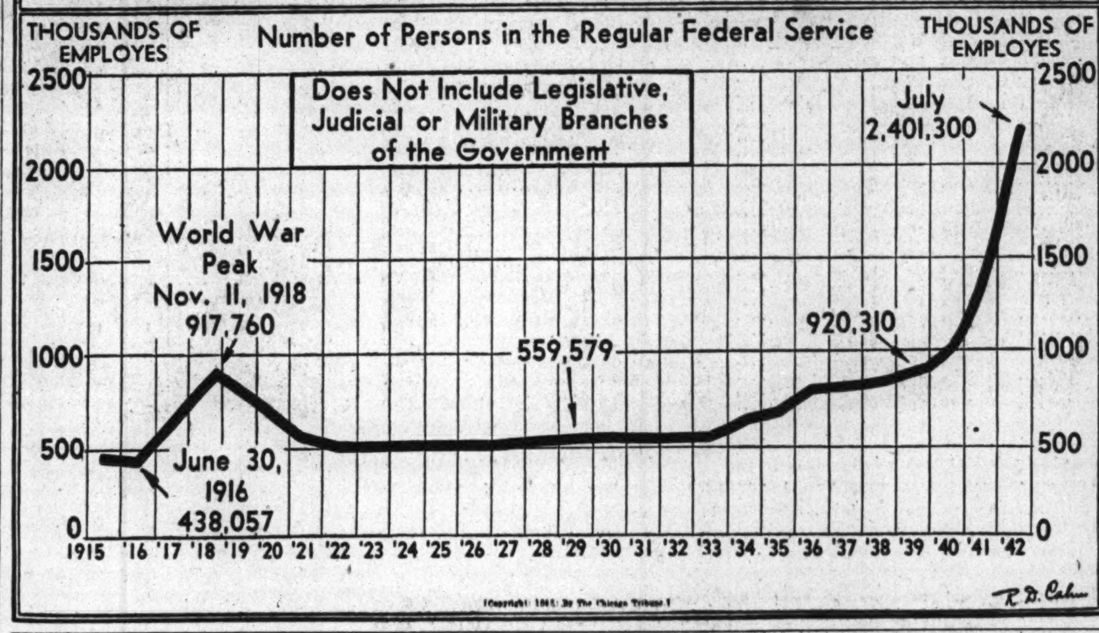
Peoria, Ill., Sept. 12 (AP).—The national convention of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing committee today officially adopted the name of the United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers of America. The organization decided to locate its national headquarters in Chicago.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES



Display Men's, Boys' Wear at 3 Day Market

Chicago's first wartime emergency market, sponsored by manufacturers and distributors of men's and boys' wear, will open tomorrow in the Merchandise Mart. More than 500 merchandise lines will be represented at the three day show, with attendance expected to exceed 1,000.

"Calling of this market for September was considered necessary following a survey by the Men's and Boys' Wear association which showed many apparel retailers were not being called on because salesmen must practice mileage economy," Percy Wilson, managing director of the mart, said. "Since this situation will grow progressively worse and because it makes for inequities of distribution, holding this market was deemed imperative.

Bright Side to Rationing.

"Chicago's growth as a market center will be enhanced as a result of the proposed gas rationing and manufacturers and distributors will find a new group of buyers seeking goods in the city, particularly from smaller towns. Decreasing service by salesmen and travel limitations of customers will make it necessary for these retailers to stock many items formerly purchased in nearby cities."

Male apparel firms in the wholesale district are participating in the market. A feature of the show will be a clinic program, with industry representatives and government and Chicago Association of Commerce officials taking part. Problems of retailers and other divisions of the industry will be analyzed at forum sessions.

Saltiel Among Speakers.

Speakers will include William Saltiel, special assistant to the United States attorney general and chief of the small business section of the department of justice for the middle west, and C. L. Christenson, regional Office of Price Administration price executive in Chicago. The Illinois Retail Clothiers' association will hold its mid-year meeting during the emergency market.

Manufacturers and distributors of masculine apparel in Chicago estimated that men in the armed forces will share in the nation's Christmas spending in the amount of 45 million dollars. The necessity, they said, for sending gifts overseas two months in advance will give an early impetus to holiday buying.

HOME BUILDING CUT IN HALF BY FEDERAL CURBS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP).—The Federal Housing administration reported today that construction of new homes under the FHA program during August dropped to less than half the number a year ago as a result of material shortages and the elimination of nonessential construction.

New homes started last month numbered 11,064, compared with 11,573 in July and 22,356 in August, 1941. Applications for mortgage insurance on new one to four family houses numbered 13,408, compared with 13,026 in July and 24,122 in August of last year.

The FHA insured 32,297 title I loans [for remodeling or repairing existing structures] amounting to $11,326,182 last month, against 48,003 loans totaling $19,496,265 in August, 1941.

ESTIMATE 5 MILLION WOMEN EVENTUALLY TO ENTER WAR WORK

New York, Sept. 12 [Special].—Approximately 1,750,000 women are working in war industries compared with a peak of 2,225,000 in the closing months of the last war, a survey made by Index, New York Trust company quarterly, showed today. The estimates place at 5 million the eventual number to be employed, the greatest participation in any conflict by women.

The million and three quarter women war workers is out of a total employment of some 13 million women on July 1, according to the report. By the end of 1943 it is estimated that 18 million women will be employed out of a total work force of 53 million.

The pool of woman power numbers something over 22 million between 14 and 44, normally not members of the labor forces. Almost 17 million are housewives and 4½ million are normally in school.

3 War Plants in Michigan at Standstill

Muskegon, Mich., Sept. 12 [Special].—Operations at three war production plants here were at a standstill today with company and union officials disagreeing over the cause of the walkout. The companies involved were Campbell, Wyant, and Cannon, operating two plants, and the Motor Specialties company. The men, who walked out this morning, were members of the United Auto Workers CIO.

Ira A. Wyant, secretary-treasurer of Campbell said the dispute at his plants arose over pay for today's work. He said the management contended that, since the plants were closed Labor day, this was the fifth day of work this week and regular rates should prevail.

Leonard Woodcock, regional CIO director, said the question of premium pay [for Saturday work] was in dispute at one Campbell plant while the classification of workers was involved in the other. The strikers are expected to return to work Monday.

Production Is Curtailed.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP).—The H. H. Robertson company reported today several hunderd employés failed to report for work at the company's Ambridge plant, curtailing production of building materials for new war plants.

The company said the cause "was unknown to the management." Adding that negotiations had been under way on a new contract with the CIO United Steelworkers, the company said:

"We have indicated our willingness to comply with the terms of the recent "little steel" decision of the WLB but to go no further."

Militia Ordered Released.

Alton, Ill., Sept. 12 (AP).—With employés again at work at Western Cartridge company's big East Alton plant and the situation apparently peaceful, Adj. Gen. Leo M. Boyle at Springfield tonight ordered demobilization of Illinois reserve militia men. The militia had been held in readiness since Thursday for possible duty during the four day strike at the plant.

SEC Holds Up Over Counter Sale Control

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—Objections to a contemplated rule of the Securities and Exchange commission which would extend its control of the securities market to over the counter transactions has delayed its adoption by the SEC, it was learned today.

Rep. George A. Paddock [R., Ill.] announced that he had word from the trading and exchange division of the commission that the matter is being restudied and that public hearings will be held before the rule is finally adopted.

He has threatened to start action in the house to block the rule which, he asserted, would have "disastrous effects" on the municipal bond market, dealers in unlisted securities, buyers and sellers of municipal securities, and states, counties, and cities which finance their operations thru existing machinery.

Could Punish Violators.

The principal objection is to a proposed amendment to SEC powers which would require dealers to provide over the counter customers, in writing, "the best independent bid and asked prices for the security at the time of the sale or purchase which the dealer is able to ascertain upon the exercise of reasonable diligence." Failure to do this would make the dealers subject to punishment under SEC fraud provisions.

Paddock, who assailed the proposed rule as illegal and unworkable, disclosed that he wrote to the commission asking by what authority it contemplated adopting any such rule. He received an answer from James A. Treanor Jr., director of the SEC's trading and exchange division, who said:

"I wish to assure you that while the question of authority to cover municipal securities was looked into prior to the making of the proposal, it will be carefully restudied in the light of the questions which have been raised, before the proposed rule, or any alternative thereto, is submitted to the commission for adoption.

Promises Public Hearings.

"You understand, I am sure, that the proposal is one of this division and has not yet been adopted by the commission. I might add, for your information, that I anticipate that before the commission will consider the adoption of any such rule, it will hold a public forum at which all viewpoints may be expressed."

Dealers have objected to the proposal on the ground that it would be physically impossible to obtain independent bid and asked prices for customers in many cases and if they were obtained they would not necessarily reflect existing market values. There is also the added factor of increased operating expenses which would accrue because of the new requirement, they said.

CANADA STUDIES PLAN TO ASSURE ADEQUATE NEWSPRINT SUPPLIES

Montreal, Que., Sept. 12 (AP).—Tonnage allocation of newsprint is one of the answers to the electric power-manpower production problem which faces the industry, R. L. Welden, newsprint administrator for the wartime prices and trade board asserts.

The board is considering a plan which provides for maintenance of normal business relations between producers and the newspapers which rely on them for their requirements, he said. The plan will insure that newspapers will obtain sufficient supplies.

Welden believes that a reduction in newsprint production will have to be brought about in areas where there is insufficient power available for production of war materials. It may be necessary also to reduce the number of machines in operation in mills.

STRICTER CURBS ARE DECREED IN WAR ECONOMY

Indices in Industry Swing Unevenly.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

The strongest measures so far taken in this war to handle problems of price controls, transportation, rubber supply, and man power were in the making last week, pointing to drastic adjustments in industry. Meantime the few available indices of business activity failed to show any decisive trend. Retail trade was livelier than in the preceding week, but 8 to 12 per cent under year ago levels. The trend was up in electric power output, but down in railroad freight movement, steel production, and heavy construction.

In an unprecedented move President Roosevelt told congress in an ultimatum that unless it authorizes effective control of farm prices by Oct. 1 he will set aside existing restriction on such control. He said he will stabilize wages without additional legislation. Action is required to prevent inflation, he warned.

Move to Conserve Rubber.

Action to conserve rubber was set afoot when the President received from a special investigating committee headed by Bernard M. Baruch a report calling for a nation-wide speed limit of 35 miles an hour, mileage limitation on driving, nation-wide gasoline rationing, and a shakeup in the agencies handling administration of rubber.

Baruch's committee charged the rubber program has been bungled. The President approved the highly critical report and said he would name a rubber administrator, probably tomorrow, to carry out most of the recommendations. Gasoline rationing will be delayed until the local rationing machinery can be set up.

In a related step aimed at conserving truck tires and equipment, the Office of Defense Transportation ordered all commercial vehicles put under sweeping controls, including rationing of gasoline, tires, tubes, and accessories, on Nov. 15. All such vehicles will have to have a certificate of war necessity to get supplies.

Ordered to Ignore Limits.

The Interstate Commerce commission ordered railroads to ignore state limitations on train lengths.

The War Man Power commission barred workers in the lumber industry and in the copper and other nonferrous metal mines from taking jobs in other industries in a 12 state area where the government is attempting to increase production of the vital supplies.

The treasury offered 3 billion dollars of securities in the largest single financing operation since the first World war, and a heavy oversubscription was reported.

SEEK TO HOLD UP BAN ON STEEL IN COFFEE JAR LIDS

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The coffee industry today asked the WPB for an extension of the Oct. 1 deadline after which use of steel for lids on glass coffee containers will be prohibited.

George C. Thierbach, president of the National Coffee association, said the order would create "a purely artificial shortage of coffee" unless coffee men were given time to find substitute containers.

Thierbach said the order would put out of use machinery for 300 million packages a year and said that the industry had gone to "great expense" to convert from tin cans to glass containers. He estimated that to keep present packaging machinery in operation would require "not more than 8,000 tons of steel at most" on an annual basis.

RENT CONTROL EXTENDED THRU CHICAGO AREA

Rent control was extended thruout the entire Chicago industrial area yesterday with announcement by the Office of Price Administration that rents in the Gary-Hammond, Ind., war rental area must revert to March 1 levels on Oct. 1.

In announcing the move, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said he would appoint a rent director within the next few days. The Gary-Hammond area comprises all of Lake county and includes the industrial centers of East Chicago, Whiting, Hobart, and Crown Point, in addition to Gary and Hammond.

27 STOCKS to Benefit BY TAX CHANGES

Shoe Rationing Predicted Only as Last Resort

Rationing of shoes is a possibility, but is not likely unless other measures being taken or planned to relieve the shortage of leather for civilian use fail, Chicago shoe manufacturers and retailers said yesterday.

Production of shoes for civilians declined in the first half of 1942. The industry expects a further and more severe curtailment because of government restrictions on materials and the wartime difficulty of maintaining adequate hide imports.

These factors have led to forecasts of shoe rationing by as early as next year. Those taking this view assert it is obvious that supplies for civilians will be reduced further because the government took over the nation's entire stock of hides and skins last July to assure enough leather for military purposes.

Imports Under Control.

Imported hides were already under government control, and all sole leather of military quality had been ordered set aside for military and lend-lease requirements.

Chicago representatives of the industry, however, said that rationing would not be imposed until conservation measures and inventory control had been tried. Earlier this week, the War Production board restricted the variety of styles and colors of shoes to be made for next spring and summer. Inventory control would be aimed at reducing excessive stocks and effecting widespread distribution.

"Actually, the reduction in civilian shoe production by next year may impose rationing in itself," an official of a retail shoe chain asserted. "This would simply be rationing on the basis of scarcity, not by government order."

Full Effect Next Year.

The full effect of government hide and leather control is not expected to be felt until well into 1943. Total shoe production increased in the first six months of this year, but output since April has been under a year ago and the total for the entire year is expected to be below the record figure of 1941. Production thru June of 250,453,000 pairs compared with 237,910,000 in the corresponding period last year, but the gain resulted entirely from government buying.

Retailers are expected to experience a substantial decline in sales and profits. The recent government conservation order eliminates many fancy styles on which profit margins are largest. Fewer styles mean smaller sales volume, particularly in women's shoes, merchants said.

"There doesn't appear to be any danger that the public will actually be in want for shoes," a Chicago manufacturer said. "People simply won't be able to buy as many pairs as formerly. Fewer styles will means more utility footwear, and at the same time provide more leather for repairs. The industry is confident rapid progress will be made in leather substitutes."

EARNINGS OF 373 FIRMS DIP 27 PCT. FOR SIX MONTHS

New York, Sept. 12 [Special].—The effect of federal tax appropriations on industry this year is reflected by the decline in net profit reported by 373 corporations from $942,890,095 in the first half of 1941 to $681,721,571 in the 1942 period, a drop of 27.7 per cent.

Heavy industries were particularly affected. Steel, petroleum, and automobile companies dropped from nine figure to eight figure net earnings; net profits of 38 steel, iron, and related companies were 68 per cent below the first half of last year; 14 automobile companies earned 54 per cent less, and 20 oil companies 11.5 per cent less than in the first half of last year.

EXPECT TO PRODUCE TIRES FROM COTTON AND ITS PRODUCTS

College Station, Tex., Sept. 12 (AP).—Tires fabricated from cotton and cotton products are envisaged by Director John Leahy of the Texas cotton research committee.

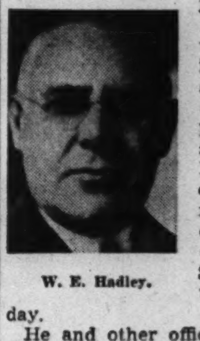
"Our research to date has not advanced sufficiently to produce a tire forthwith," Leahy said in a report reviewing the committee's activities in the first year of its operation, "but progress thus far warrants highly optimistic expectations.

"I am confident that before too many tires fail on automobiles now in use the research activity will supply the tractive surface necessary to keep the cars and trucks rolling. This material will come from one of the most abundant materials which we have at our command—cotton and its byproducts."

STEEL OFFICIAL URGES STEADY FLOW OF SCRAP

Tells WPB of Metal Dealer Handicaps.

Maintenance of an even flow of scrap metals, so waste metal dealers' yards will not be flooded at one time and partly idle another, will add much to the success of the present metal salvage drive, W. E. Hadley, Chicago district manager of operations for the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, said yesterday.



W. E. Hadley.

He and other officials of the company spoke during a two-hour meeting in the company's offices at 208 South La Salle street with 20 field men serving the War Production board's industrial salvage section in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin; 10 employés of the WPB's special projects sections, and newspapermen.

Tells of Handicap.

Hadley explained that the scrap dealers, confronted with a tremendous job of collection, are handicapped by loss of personnel and by restrictions on equipment and tires. They can handle their vital job, he said, if an even flow of waste metals is maintained.

Hadley and L. A. Touzalin, manager of the company's district raw materials department, emphasized that steel companies are not equipped to perform the important jobs of sorting and preparing the scrap for steel mill consumption. They urged the public to utilize facilities of waste metal dealers, especially in the case of light metals, which must be cut up before mills can use them.

Touzalin urged WPB field representatives to teach scrap producers that separation of the various kinds of scrap metals is necessary.

Counts on Homes, Farms.

Touzalin said industrial scrap is coming in "pretty well," and that the "outlying" scrap from homes and farms offers the best opportunity for stepping up scrap metal collections.

Harvey T. Hill, regional chief of the WPB's industrial salvage section estimated the four states in the region must ship 10,000 carloads of scrap metal each month if the steel mills are to continue operating at capacity. He estimated 7,000 carloads must come from industry and 3,000 tons from farms, homes, and special projects.

Walter Malatesta, regional chief of the WPB's special projects section said his office is seeking to obtain scrap which cannot be salvaged profitably thru use of Metals Reserve company funds.

Study "Ghost Structure."

The office of William L. McFetridge, director of salvage for the Chicago area, disclosed it is investigating a 15 story "ghost structure" at 69th street and Crandon avenue as a source of scrap metal. A spokesman estimated 3,500 tons of fine scrap are in the structure, started in 1929 but not completed.

The nine story steel skeleton of another unfinished building at 4735 Winthrop avenue was offered to McFetridge by G. W. Kunstman, a real estate broker at 30 North La Salle street.

McFetridge announced he would ask Gov. Green and Mayor Kelly to suspend a provision of the state automobile code which requires scrap dealers to obtain a certificate of sale or title to an automobile before it can be wrecked. Such an action would make it possible to turn over to steel mills an estimated 4,800 abandoned cars in back yards and vacant lots of the Chicago metropolitan area, he said.

Eight workmen employed by the Hoyne Salvage company started razing 12 steel frames, 20 feet tall, of an unused elevated lines spur extending more than a block south of the elevated tracks crossing Union avenue at 41st street. The work is expected to yield 165 tons of scrap metal as well as materials for elevated lines repairs.

STOCKS RECORD LITTLE CHANGE IN DULL TRADE

Twin City Rapid Transit Issues Bound.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Buying of specialties helped prop today's stock market altho leaders generally closed a rather disappointing week without getting anywhere in particular. Aside from a few broad jumping favorites price changes were small at the opening, and closing trends were indecisive. Dealings were slow.

In addition to a religious holiday, which limited boardroom attendance, traders had little to go on in the way of news inspiration and many remained out of the market pending more definite foreign and domestic developments.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 36.6, but on the week was off .3 of a point.

Transit Issue Spurts.

Twin City Rapid Transit issues again were conspicuous performers. The senior stock ran up 7 points to a new high since 1937, further reflecting prospects of more payments on accumulated dividends. The issue later backed down and ended up 2 points. The common shares held a plus sign of 1¼ at the best mark in four years. The preferred on the week showed a net gain of 20 points.

Pittsburgh Coal, Pennsylvania Coal and Coke, and Consolidation Coal were pushed up on the senate finance committee's vote to ease excess profits tax burdens for mines. Goodyear and Goodrich were up ⅜ each, the former at a new 1942 peak, as the synthetic rubber outlook brightened.

CHICAGO PRICES RISE.

Chicago Stock exchange prices were moderately higher yesterday on volume of 7,000 shares. Of the issues traded, 21 advanced, 12 declined, and 16 closed unchanged. Volume leaders included Chicago corporation, Middle West corporation, and Commonwealth Edison, all unchanged; Schwitzer-Cummins off ¼ and W. B. Jarvis up ¼. In the final half hour of trading Curtiss-Wright, General Motors, and Studebaker were down ⅛ from the New York close, while Illinois Central and Swift International advanced ⅛.

RAILROAD BONDS ATTRACT TRADE; SOME AT PEAKS

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Bond market activity today continued at a high level for a Saturday and, as in the lively sessions during the week, rail loans were favored over other corporate groups.

Profit selling in some of the lately buoyant rails made the general price structure uneven but a number of reorganization rails rushed ahead to new high for the recent movement. Industrial and utility liens were steady.

Buyers displayed interest in the obligations of Missouri Pacific, Seaboard Airline, Frisco and Missouri Pacific.

A few Canadian issues moved up fractions to a point or so in foreign department dealings. Certain South Americans also were in good demand. United States governments remained inactive.

ADVISE BRITISH DRIVE TO BOOST LATIN BUSINESS

Financiers Eye Growth of United States Interests.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—With an eye to postwar markets, British exporters are reported perturbed over restrictions on trade with South American countries resulting from lend-lease and the migration of American industry to Brazil. Despite the shortage of shipping and the need to devote every inch of cargo space to war supplies, suggestions were advanced in financial circles this week that competitive trade should be resumed.

Emphasizing the growth of United States interests in South America and England's resultant loss of trade, S. W. Alexander, the Evening Standard's financial editor, said: "If it is correct that British empire countries are providing large quantities of lend-lease material to the United States, then the time has come when restrictions on exports from this country in deference to the wishes of the United States should be reconsidered."

Ask Service on Debts.

Reports that United States authorities are "considering" the problem of defaulted South American bonds aroused interest in the London financial district. The trade position of most South American countries, it was observed, has vastly improved in the last year, but so far the only benefits derived by sterling bondholders have been agreements recently concluded with Corrientes [in Argentina] and Colombia, two of the smallest debtors. No offers are yet forthcoming from the larger countries despite their increased sterling balances accumulated in London.

Urging the closest collaboration between Washington, D. C., and London, the Daily Telegraph financial expert said:

"It should not be impossible and it certainly is desirable that trade agreements being arranged between the United States and South American countries should provide for a resumption of external debt service or improvement in the existing scale of payments whenever the debtors are in a position to pay."

Finances Big News.

National finances made big news in parliament and the press this week. The fact that the country spent 12 billion 100 million pounds [about 48 billion 400 million dollars] in the first three years of war and now is laying out 12,250,000 pounds daily on the war, caused scarcely a flutter in the securities markets, however.

Financial observers were intrigued, however, by the chancellor of the exchequer's statement describing the British contribution to the common pool in which, to echo President Roosevelt's contention, the costs of the war should be distributed so no nation grew rich from the efforts of its allies.

This principle is so far not mentioned in any diplomatic document and ignored in the latest Anglo-American agreement, which reaffirms the lend-lease principle. Consequently financial writers here are expressing hopes that the chancellor is hinting at some new agreement being negotiated under which lend-lease would be replaced by "real pooling."

Week's Bank Clearings Are Reduced by Holiday

Chicago banks cleared $341,600,000 of checks last week, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The association's report follows:

GRAINS UNEVEN AT CLOSE OF A BUOYANT WEEK

Flour Business at Highest Level in Months.

BY PHILIP WARDEN.

Wheat prices closed unchanged to ¾ cent lower on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday in the windup of the best week of flour sales in several months. More than a million barrels of flour were reported sold to bakeries and other commercial consumers since last Monday, causing wheat futures to rise a maximum of about 3 cents a bushel.

Profit taking became general, however, as the market reached new peaks for two months or longer, and the week's net gains were shaved to 1⅝ to 2⅛ cents a bushel, the December delivery closing at $1.25¾.

Corn Higher in Week.

Corn futures advanced ¼ cent during the day, making the net gains for the week ⅜ to 1⅛ cents. Oats futures were down fractionally.

Rye, which scored sharp gains on several days because farmers were receiving prices far below parity in relation to other grains, extended the week's gains to 4⅛ to 4⅝ cents. Soy beans were down 1⅝ to 2⅛ cents for the week.

One of this season's largest sales of wheat by Chicago elevators to outside flour mills was completed during the day. It was disclosed the business would involve more than 100,000 bushels of wheat.

Big Canadian Sales.

The Canadian wheat board reported that about 1 million bushels of coarse grains, including large amounts of barley, were sold to United States buyers last week. Canadian production of oats and barley has more than doubled in the last year, the board reported, and Chicago dealers expect large quantities of these grains to be imported soon.

A factor that depressed all grains at the close of the week was the government's forecast that 1942 crop production will far exceed all previous records.

State, Chicago Property Sold; Price Undisclosed

The Willing Investment trust has sold the Ottawa building, containing 18 apartments and 8 stores, at the northwest corner of State street and Chicago avenue and the old three story residence at 8 West Chicago to an undisclosed purchaser for whom Rica V. Mollema took title. It was indicated that the property was purchased in anticipation of the area's development when the subway goes into operation. The price was not disclosed.

DIVIDEND TRENDS.

Dividends paid on common stocks listed on the New York Stock exchange totaled $895,712,000 during the first six months of this year, compared with $961,315,000 in the corresponding 1941 period.

Altho aggregate dividends were 6.8 per cent less than a year earlier, the number of common issues which paid dividends increased from 550 to 560. Of dividend paying common shares, 25 per cent increased disbursements and 24.6 per cent reduced payments from the first half of 1941.

Results for all common stocks listed by the exchange showed that rising taxes and operating costs did not cause as heavy dividend casualties as had been expected earlier.

Market analysts have declared, however, that results for this six month period should not be taken as an indication of future dividend trends.

Taxes remain of primary importance. Tax rates for 1942 still are to be fixed by congress, and it is believed probable that the tax bill now in the making will be superseded by a new and more drastic measure in 1943.

An increasingly important factor in shaping future dividend policies is the pending renegotiation of war contracts by the army and navy. Until this is completed, companies with war contracts will be unable to estimate earnings or cash requirements with any degree of certainty. In addition, an over-all ceiling on war profits is under consideration in congress.

Long range factors add further uncertainty to future dividend trends. Corporations are having some difficulty determining what postwar reserves are necessary and how much to set aside from current earnings for these purposes. Many are faced with the possibility that technological advancements during the war may make present facilities obsolete.

It is believed that as long as large volume production continues, substantial gross earnings for most companies should provide some margin of profit. The effect of the war on earnings, however, has varied not only from industry to industry, but among companies in the same field.

Railroads showed a gain of more that 42 per cent in net income in the first six months over the same 1941 period, whereas average earnings of companies whose common shares are listed by the New York exchange declined about 20 per cent.

Electrical equipment manufacturers, with 16 issues listed, increased dividends 56.9 per cent, while the automobile industry reduced payments about 33 per cent.

USE OF COTTONSEED GAINS.

August domestic consumption of 282,015 barrels of cottonseed oil was 22,000 barrels more than expectations, according to trade sources. The increase over private estimates was believed to represent purchases by the government for lend-lease. The August figure was the highest for any month since October, 1941.

THOUSANDS SIP THE WINE OF HOPE AT NAUVOO FETE

War Casts Shadow Across Peaceful Settlement.

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Nauvoo, Ill., Sept. 12.—The war has cast its shadow on this peaceful little vineyard and Nauvoo today celebrated its last historic grape festival for the duration.

Thousands poured into the city to stroll down the main street where every flat-faced store front scrawls its welcome and red, white, and blue buntings flutter in the river breezes.

On foot and in automobiles, they made pilgrimages to the sites where the Mormons created their first great sanctuary and the French Icarian Communists strove to build their idealistic form of government. For Nauvoo is unique in Illinois. Where other towns—New Salem and Galena—tell the history of one man, this little hamlet clothes the history of thousands.

A Bit of Old France.

If it wes the land of milk and honey for bygone dreamers, today it is a bit of old France transplanted, a land of wine and cheese. The grapes, planted almost a century ago by the disillusioned French communists, hang near to bursting on the rolling knolls of the fertile river valley. In caves scattered thruout the neighborhood, thousands of mounds of blue cheese lie aging in their man manufactured mold.

The harmony of the two, and the harmony that has existed in Nauvoo since the communists abandoned the valley, was symbolized tonight in an ancient French ceremony, the wedding of the wine and the cheese. Performed last evening at the opening of the festival, the colorful ceremony was repeated this evening and will be presented again tomorrow for more than 25,000 visitors from all parts of the country.

Youngsters Have Main Rôles.

Two of the town's most engaging youngsters, Nadine Buckert, 13 years old, and Ernest [Teddy] Tedford, 12, are the central characters in the ceremony. Nadine, whose fresh, young complexion is as firm as the catawba grape that grows in her backyard, is the bride—the wine. Her playmate, in a awkward dress suit, is the groom, symbolizing, not humorously but seriously, the cheese.

Even the queen, who rules the festival, walked with militant steps to her throne on the stage of the park this evening. She is Mary Leininger, 20, a pretty, chestnut haired miss who won her title by capturing the most votes in a war stamp and bond contest. Mary, whose three brothers are in the service, became queen when 285,000 votes at a penny a vote were cast in her favor. The contest raised $10,000 among the 1,100 inhabitants of Nauvoo.

Queen's Crown Boasts "V."

Mary's crown boasts a "V" for victory pin in tribute to her brothers in the service and the 115 other boys from the town who have joined them. It is symbolic, too, of the town's leaders, led by young Lowell Horton, mayor, who will turn the proceeds of the festival into war savings bonds.

The residents and the visitors—barefoot farm boys, sunburnt vineyard owners in ill fitting Sunday suits, prosperous business men, and young sweatered girls—know this is the last gay festival of the war.

They frolic on the site that once was the million dollar Mormon temple which was burned by a fanatic arsonist. They go from wine booth to wine booth, sampling the vintages. They nibble at the tasty cheese and devour 35 cent chicken dinners, cooked by the Rosary society of the German Catholic church.

Rolling Hills a Sanctuary.

The rolling hills of Nauvoo, a name taken from the Hebrew and which means "pleasant land," became a sanctuary for the Mormons who were run out of Missouri in 1839. Led by Joseph Smith, the Mormons settled here and built a city that boasted a population of 25,000 by 1846.

A force from Carthage, Ill., marched against the Mormons in 1844. Smith and his brother, Hyrum, whose graves lie on the flats of Nauvoo bordering the Mississippi, gave themselves up to protect their followers. They were slain by a mob in the Carthage jail on June 27, 1844, and the Mormons started their trek westward under Brigham Young.

Nauvoo became a ghost town. Its mansions and homes gave an eloquent testimony to intolerance. Then came another group of idealists, the French Icarian communists, who set the grapevines of their native land on the hillsides and their hearts on a pure form of government.

Only the grapes bore fruit. Their utopian dreams and their achievement, a profitable winery, vanished before the Civil war began.

UNION PAINTERS PICK HARTLEIN FOR SECRETARY

By an overwhelming majority the painters belonging to local unions in the Chicago area yesterday elected Matthew Hartlein secretary-treasurer of the Painters' district council. Hartlein received 5,346 votes, and his rival, James A. Mallette, 1,879.

Lieut. George Barnes of the police department's labor detail, who had placed a guard in each of the polling places—the district council headquarters and the local union offices—said the election was orderly thruout, and "one of the fairest I have ever seen."

Hartlein is a veteran member of the council. He has been acting secretary-treasurer of the council since his predecessor, Arthur W. Wallace, was slain in a battle with a business agent, Charles Youngblood, in July. Hartlein had been elected to the post by the district council members, but insisted he would not keep it unless the rank and file elected him. Mallette, a younger member of the union, had pledged a reform administration.

UNION HELPS END WILDCAT STRIKE IN STEEL PLANT

Full Force on Job in Gary Mill.

Union leaders coöperated with the management yesterday in squelching a strike which threatened to paralyze war production at the 160 inch plate mill in the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation's great Gary works, recently commended by the navy for shattering production records.

Frank Grider, regional subdirector of the United Steel Workers of America [CIO], branded the strike an unauthorized work stoppage and promised to supply strike breakers unless the men returned to work. A full complement went to work on the 4 p. m. shift yesterday, after supervisors and foremen had replaced the strikers on the preceding shift, and the company said no further trouble was expected.

Company spokesmen said the union officials had been "very helpful."

Walkout Hampers Work.

The strike began on Friday, when crane operators refused to go to work. Hookers, the men who attach loads to the crane cables, and loaders, joined in the strike.

Fewer than 30 men were engaged in the strike on each of the three shifts, but the strike slowed down and sometimes halted the work of a total of 450 men on the three shifts of 150 each.

This threatened to stall production of steel ship plates, vitally needed in the war effort.

The crane operators had no grievance pending, altho they had previously demanded higher wages. This demand had been settled by the union and the management thru the institution of a so-called incentive plan—a bonus system based on higher production. The crane operators and their sympathizers nevertheless refused to work.

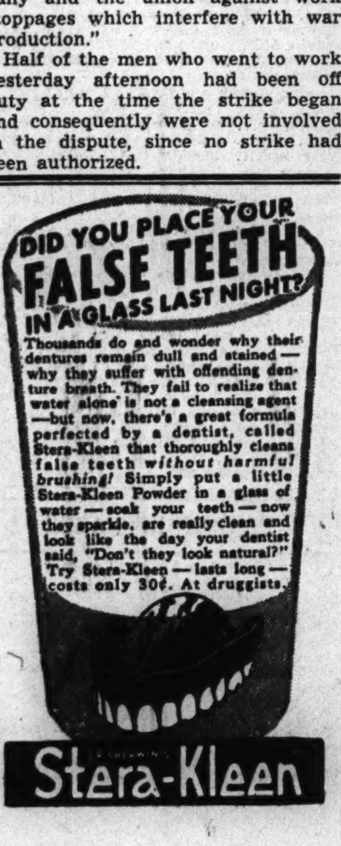
Foremen Take Their Places.

Production was at a low ebb yesterday until the supervisors and foremen stepped into the strikers' places. Production then was raised to 75 per cent of capacity.

The company invoked a clause of its contract with the union, signed a week ago, to suspend 10 of the strikers and announced that it would suspend 30 to 40 more. Company officials said this was done with union approval and explained:

"This action represents a stiffening of the attitude of both the company and the union against work stoppages which interfere with war production."

Half of the men who went to work yesterday afternoon had been off duty at the time the strike began and consequently were not involved in the dispute, since no strike had been authorized.



REALTY OWNERS DEMAND SLASH IN LOCAL TAXES

Contend County's Levies Impede War Effort.

A demand that local tax spending bodies retrench and pare the Cook county tax rate to necessity will be made by 3,000 property owners Tuesday night in the Hotel Sherman. The meeting is sponsored by the property owners' bureau of the Chicago Real Estate board.

Ward Farnsworth, bureau chairman, in announcing the meeting yesterday, charged that high and still mounting local real estate taxes are impeding the war effort.

"Every loyal American," he said, "is willing to make every sacrifice to the successful prosecution of the war. Federal taxes next year will be unprecedented, and we'll pay them cheerfully. But there is no reason, and no excuse, for local government to increase its spending."

"Can't Afford Iuxury."

"The President has said buying of luxuries must cease. Uneconomic and wasteful local governments are a luxury we no longer can afford.

"Stabilization of local taxes should be just as necessary as stabilization of prices and rents. Cook county tax spending bodies seem unaware that the country is at war."

"Needless spending must stop," said Ronald J. Chinnock, president of the board. "The time has come when the average taxpayer, the property owner, is going to have something to say about what he pays for local taxes and how it is spent.

Cites Dates of Leases.

"Rents have been frozen at the March, 1942, level. In March, 60 per cent of the tenants were paying the rent fixed in their leases dated May 1, 1941. The majority of those leases were signed in March of 1941. That was before the 1940 tax bills were mailed.

"If rents are to be frozen as of a date when 60 per cent of the rents were based on a $9.11 rate, we see no reason why taxes should not be frozen at the same level."

ARREST DRIVER IN HIT AND RUN AUTO FATALITY

Jefferson Park police yesterday arrested a driver they said admitted he was the autoist who struck and killed Joseph Urban, 52 years old, 3824 North Francisco avenue, a printer employed by the police department. Urban was killed early yesterday by a hit and run driver at 3114 Irving Park road.

The man arrested was Vernon Wons, 22 years old, 5415 Lawrence avenue. The car, police said, was found in a vacant lot at 4427 Narragansett avenue.

Roberta Carter, 10, colored, was killed by an automobile yesterday while skating in front of her home at 4541 Champlain avenue. The driver was Carlos Barker, 53, a Negro living at 4736 Michigan avenue.

Anton Civic, 43 years old, 1745 West 48th street, died yesterday in Southtown hospital. He was struck by a hit and run driver Friday at Wolcott avenue and 48th street.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 491 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since the first of the year. Of these, 381 lost their lives in Chicago, where 14,356 were injured.

3 PITTSBURGH PAPERS RAISE PRICE TO 4 CENTS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP).—The three Pittsburgh daily newspapers, the Sun-Telegraph, Post-Gazette, and Press, announced today an increase in prices from three cents a copy to four cents, effective Monday.

The Sun-Telegraph and Press, afternoon newspapers, also announced their Sunday editions would be raised from 10 to 12 cents, effective Sept. 20. The morning Post-Gazette does not publish Sundays.

The newspapers said advertising, their chief revenue, had declined sharply because of war conditions, and that the cost of newsprint had gone up.

DISPERSE 15. SEIZE ONE IN RAID.

Commissioner's police under Sergt. Art Manger raided an alleged handbook at the rear of 107 West Lake street yesterday, dispersed 15 patrons, seized Vito Marzano, 25 years old, 3818 Gladys avenue, as the operator, and confiscated $120.

LOOK TO THE LEADER!

A funeral establishment which conducts more funerals a year than any other concern is able to give you lower prices.

Last year, Lain & Son, Chicago's leading funeral directors, conducted over 2000 services. This is more than THIRTY times as many as the average concern.

Funeral directors with such an overwhelming preference as this should be able to give patrons more value for their dollars. Lain & Son are able, because of this 30 to 1 leadership (thirty times the average) to provide lower cost funerals with more services and higher quality merchandise.

DAY by DAY on the FARM

By BEN MARKLAND

In Between Season.

Sept. 12, 1942.

CORNHUSKS turning brown; gray squirrels and fox squirrels dropping acorn bombs on woodlot hikers; black haws showing their first traces of early autumn pink; gay asters in the cottage gardens; Concord grapes ripe on the vines; catalpa leaves turning yellow; Virginia creeper and sumac leaves more red each day—these are the symbols of fading summer on middle western farms as September takes commond of nature's forces.

Despite all these evidences of the changing season most outdoor fans who take a weekly stroll thru a farm woodlot agree that early September has been somewhat of a disappointment. When we hiked thru the lower woods of the Wheaton farm this week it occurred to us that this is an "in-between" season.

Summer Birds Gone.

Most of the summer bird residents have gone south and the autumn migrants have not yet arrived, the goldenrods and several members of the wild sunflower family are on exhibit, but most of the late summer wild flowers have passed from the farm scene, and in northern Illinois a series of September rains have left the woodlot floors dank and musty.

The recent rains served to dampen the enjoyment of September hikes, but every one who looks forward to fall coloration should appreciate the part these rains play in autumn's brilliance. Scientists have found that autumn foliage is much more colorful after a summer of abundant rainfall than it is after a summer of drouth.

Help for Jack Frost.

If there is a deficiency of moisture during the summer months the leaves of the oaks and maples may turn brown and die before Jack Frost has a chance to show his abilities as a leaf painter. If, however, the trees stay green until late in the season as a result of abundant summer rain, their autumn gowns of flaming red, orange, and yellow provide the sort of exhibition which makes autumn the color champion of the four seasons.

Even if our woodlot hike was a disappointment this week, we balanced the day by visiting the farm vineyard. The Concord grapes and some of the varieties of white grapes are ripe, and judging by their flavor must have benefited from the numerous rains of the last few weeks. Each year we make a ritual of visiting the vineyard two or three times on the pretense that it's necessary to sample the various varieties of grapes as part of our job. This season's first test was eminently satisfactory.

CHICAGOANS FACE HARDSHIPS FROM GAS RATIONING

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, Sept. 12.—Nation-wide gasoline rationing, as recommended this week by President Roosevelt's advisory committee, will bring to Chicagoland social and economic changes that have been witnessed in the Atlantic seaboard states where motor fuel rationing has been in effect since May 16.

The hardships will be even more noticeable than in older eastern metropolitan districts. Chicago is more dependent upon motor transportation for its business and recreation than are cities of the east. The older eastern cities were laid out and fully grown before the motor era. Furthermore, they used their mass transportation facilities to a greater degree than does Chicago. Of the large American cities those most dependent upon the automobile are Detroit and Los Angeles, which are also youthful communities sprawled over large areas in the decentralization made possible by the automobile.

Must Form Car Sharing Clubs.

Thousands who now drive to work in the loop district from outlying or suburban homes will have to use street cars, trains, buses, or the elevated. Other thousands will have to form car sharing clubs so that one private car will carry four or five to and from work.

From experience in the east, it may be forecast that many of Chicagoland's numerous gasoline stations will go out of business. Also doomed are rural eating, drinking, and dancing establishments, for patronage is dependent upon automobile transportation.

The half billion dollar resort industries in Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota are doomed for a depression during the rest of the war. Fortunately for them, their 1942 season is nearing its end.

Outlying retail business districts [from experience in the east] will lose an advantage which they enjoyed over loop stores in attracting customers arriving by motor car. The loop stores which have lacked conveniences for motorists, have a superior transportation for the demotorized community.

Golf Courses Affected.

Under strict gasoline rationing, Chicago's suburban golf courses will lose customers. Under gasoline rationing few will have fuel to spare for a trip to a country club or daily fee courses.

Large neighborhood moving picture shows, which have drawn patronage from a wide area by virtue of spacious parking lots, will lose some of this business advantage when fans stop using their cars to visit cinemas. In eastern cities it has been noted that moviegoers attend the theaters within walking distances.

The biggest change brought about by rationing in the 17 eastern states and the District of Columbia has been the shrinkage in weekend driving. The popular pleasure routes which were jammed on week-ends last year have been almost deserted this year.

Almost as conspicuous has been the overloading of street cars and buses as automobile owners left their cars at home for shopping trips and social visits as well as not traveling to and from work.

FOUNT OF YOUTH DIP FOR TIRES IS EXPOSED AS GYP

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—Wartime shortages of tires, gasoline, anti-freeze, and lubricants have nurtured an outbreak of gyp substitutes for these materials. The contest board of the American Automobile association, better known for its peacetime promotion of races, has joined governmental agencies in suppressing these swindles.

"Fountain of Youth" dip for tires, promising longevity, was one of several of the exposed fakes described today by Charles M. Hayes, vice president of the AAA, and president of the Chicago Motor club.

"According to this promotion, tires immersed in a certain liquid will absorb the product thru the pores and will last almost indefinitely. Test samples proved that the material was nothing but a sodium silicate, or ordinary water glass, such as is used to seal-coat cement floors or to preserve eggs.

Apt to Damage Tires.

"When applied to tires, it dries to a hard, brittle, and somewhat crystalline form which not only flakes off during driving but is apt to damage the tire by wedging into cuts or cracks.

"Thru the coöperation of government agencies and motorists in general, we can prevent much waste of money and essential materials," said Mr. Hayes.

As a protection against such fraudulent developments, the contest board of the AAA has established a new technical service program which maintains a constant check on the qualities of substitute supplies, accessories, and equipment currently being offered to the motorist under the stress or "protection" of wartime shortages.

An inflammable anti-freeze material which caused deterioration of hose connections between radiator and motor was another of the examples cited by Mr. Hayes. The product was sold only in one state and therefore was not under the jurisdiction of any federal agency, but a report of the situation was given to local authorities and sent to the Office of Defense Transportation and those sections of the War Production board controlling the allocation of essential source materials and supplies in this particular field.

Homemade Gasoline.

A west coast firm solicited radio time to promote a booklet containing 10 different formulae for homemade gasoline. Investigation showed that the fuel substitute recipes were nothing but various combinations of heavy petroleum fractions such as fuel oil, Diesel oil, and light engine oil with lighter fractions such as benzine, naphtha, and benzol.

Four of the "formulae" were duplicates, one set using benzine and the other benzol—different names for the same product. All the lighter and more volatile products used had already been classed as strategic materials, placed under strict federal control, and prohibited for use as motor fuel.

The automobile association's investigation resulted in the product's withdrawal from the market, the return of all money collected, and prevention of the printing of the formulae book.

New Anti-Freeze Solutions.

Several new anti-freeze solutions have recently been put on the market, according to Mr. Hayes. Altho some of them undoubtedly are satisfactory, a few of them made use of a sodium chloride [salt] base. The use of chlorides in such products causes corrosion of metals, clogging of radiator cores, and ignition short-circuits thru leakage.

The industrial chemicals section of the WPB, working with the bureau of industrial conservation, helped solve the difficulty by denying strategic materials for the manufacture and packaging of any anti-freeze containing harmful ingredients. Discussions have been held with the Office of Defense Transportation in an attempt to find a legal way to stop completely the manufacture of any anti-freeze solution using a chloride base, and the national bureau of standards is conducting a widespread testing campaign.

VOICE OF TRAFFIC

OHIO AND CLARK STREETS.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—It seems that in the city's campaign for safer driving the proper authorities should coöperate with the driving public, by having proper "Stop" and "Go" signs at busy corners.

I have in mind the corner of Ohio and Clark streets. Ohio street at this intersection is a thru street, and the unlighted signs, set several feet back from the curb, due to the way the street widens, are practically unnoticeable, especially at night.

I have witnessed many accidents at this corner, and also have seen many an innocent driver get tickets for not stopping at this intersection.

Before any serious accident takes place I think some prevention in the form of proper "Stop" lights should be made.

JACK DUFFY.

CHICAGO'S BUS TERMINAL.

Rockford, Ill., Sept. 8. — As a person compelled to travel to make a living, I have recently acted upon the government's "suggestion" and stored my car for the duration.

While bus transportation is less convenient in every way, I am glad to contribute the added effort in planning my routings, week-ends, etc., towards the war cause. I pass thru Chicago on an average of twice each week and for the first time in 25 years raise my voice via your column. The government has drastically reduced bus time schedules. I do not question this as a major saving. At 40 miles an hour we still can get along.

My complaint, then, is directed toward the antiquated, inadequate, outmoded, if not actually dangerous, bus terminals found in Chicago. I refer especially to the Greyhound Roosevelt road terminal. One has but to observe a physical setup suited to a city no larger than Waukegan, being stretched to handle an estimated 150 buses and 25,000 to 40,000 persons daily. Loadings and unloadings compete with each other; luggage is spread around, handled and rehandled without plan or system; no organized system of checking is in vogue for either ticket holders or persons who have come to the terminal to meet expected arrivals; no system of dispatch for departing buses is used with the result that the writer observed three cases where ticket holders missed buses which arrived, loaded, and took departure with no final checkup on the waiting room.

At Grant park we hear that Mayor Kelley has a plan to "Keep Chicago Ahead." He needs to look no further than to this important matter of bus terminals. The problem is not new but it is "getting no better rapidly."

PETER BERKLEY.

BLAMES MOTORMAN.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—In these times when cars and tires are so hard to get it's only fair the Surface Lines should coöperate.

My small son and I were riding a Stony Island car, going south today, when an automobile was going east on 73d place. Rather than give the motorist a chance to get across, the street car kept right on going full speed ahead.

It wrecked the car considerably and of course a good tire.

The motorman was very indignant when I and a few others refused to sign anything.

A minute or two behind his schedule could have saved costly repairs, a good tire, and much more delay.

It's too bad the Surface Lines are so independent and don't give any better service either.

DISGUSTED.

TIRE RATION TROUBLES.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—My husband got his tire ration card seven weeks ago. During these seven weeks, one whole week was spent finding a place where he could get them. Incidentally he was entitled to our tires, recapped or retreaded.

Finally the second week he found a place and this party promised him four tires within a couple of weeks, and we're still waiting. This party took two of my husband's tires and replaced them with two of his. By now his two tires are of no use. One has a large blister and the other tire is just as bad. My husband's boss, hearing of his predicament, gave my husband his spare tire.

One night the tire with the blister gave out. So my husband changed to his boss' spare tire. While changing the tire I was watching the cars pass us by and trying to determine the rate of speed at which they were driving. Two cars whizzed by us going about 50 miles per hour, two more cars passed by with one car trying to outrun a Chacker cab, and they weren't crawling either.

All this happened Tuesday night on Archer avenue.

My message to those driving maniacs is to take care of the tires they have or else they'll find themselves in my husband's position or around a lamp post.

My husband is an electrician, and he needs his car to make trouble calls, and also to carry tools and motors. Why is it people who need the tires can't get them? Also why is it people who have tires for just pleasure driving don't take care of them?

ELECTRICIAN'S WIFE.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Altho most automobiles are being driven less because of the war, the need for attention to lubrication is just as necessary as ever. J. Howard Pile of the Chek-Chart corporation urges that cars be lubricated at 1,000 miles or once a month—whichever occurs first.

He comments that the old slogan "lubricate every 1,000 miles" was a good one during peacetime because it brought cars into service stations frequently when they were given necessary check-ups as well as lubrication. Now with the use of most cars sharply reduced it's liable to take several months before 1,000 miles is attained. In that time trouble may develop which may defeat the purpose of use reduction—car conservation.

Pile states that the protective value of lubricants is affected by time as well as mileage. Dirt, dust and grit find their way into lubricants whether an automobile is moving or is stationary, resulting not only in reduced protection but in actual harm because of the abrasive particles they contain.

"Oxidation, too, is a factor that takes its toll regardless of whether or not a car is actually in operation," Pile warns. "When lubricants are exposed to the air they tend to oxidize in the same manner as exposed metals—with a loss in lubricating value which can hardly be tolerated in an all out effort to get from every existing car its full mile of service."

There are other factors making for frequent lubrication of cars. For example, if a car is driven over wet and muddy roads, the tires may throw the water with its dirt and grit at an angle and with a velocity that may dislodge the lubricant from the tie-rod, drag-link and knee action fittings, exposing metal parts to wear and oxidation.

Again, a driver may have his car washed before a 1,000 mile lubrication when some of the lubricant may be washed off exposed parts and leave them subject to damage.

The Shell Oil company announces the development of a radically new type of marine turbine oil which combines powerful rust preventive properties with oxidation stability. It is an outgrowth of war demands. The company states that the new oil will be supplied to all vessels in the navy equipped with modern turbines. The turbines run under a wide variety of loads, requiring an oil able to stand the heavy punishment resulting from the necessity of cruising slowly when convoying cargo vessels and then speeding up in pursuit of enemy craft.

A CODE FOR COLLEGIANS!

● The side of college life that extends beyond the classroom is so full of a number of wonderful things that it takes a student most of his college career to discover them all and to learn by trial and error how to make the most of them. To reduce the friction of learning to live in the campus community, a group of students and advisers at Indiana university has collaborated with J. E. Patrick, director of the Indiana union, in publishing "Our Indiana," a factual, frank, and funny social guidebook.

● Amusingly illustrated, it is neither smug nor sermonish; it has a casual tone and a matter-of-fact, humorous point of view rarely found in official college publications. As a social guidebook for new students, written by those who know all the written and unwritten campus rules—older students—it made an immediate hit at Indiana. Mr. Patrick has also received enthusiastic commendation on it from university unions all over the country.

● Because much of its casually presented but valuable advice on college conduct, slanguage, and customs would be applicable at any campus, excerpts from "Our Indiana" are reprinted here by permission of the Indiana union and Mr. Patrick.

FOR LACK of any better way to begin, we'll start with a respectable quotation from Abraham Lincoln. It is carved over the fireplace in the Fireside Bookshop. Here it is: "I will study and get ready, and then maybe the chance will come."

That's why Lincoln wanted an education. Each of us has some reason for being here, or we wouldn't. For example, being a trifle Scotch, we personally believe in studying and doing the best we can just to get our money's worth. No matter what your reason, even if it is merely to enjoy the social side of college (it's been rumored that a few students are here for that reason), all of us must get a fair share of our scholastic work, or else we'll be bounced out on one ear—a humiliating, not to say painful, process.

Since we all go to class (to keep from being bounced if for no other reason), a book on college customs must necessarily include some tips on classroom conventions.

KEEPING ON THE GOOD SIDE

Take, f'rinstance, the age-old question, to cut or not to cut? You'll find shades of opinion among instructors about the practice. There are those mythical profs who don't mind (or so they say) if the student shows up only twice during the semester, at enrollment and the final exam—just so he passes the latter. But most profs seem to expect you to show interest enough in their courses to avoid cutting except when necessary (your own definition).

"THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER"—HISTORY OF A SONG!

By EDWARD BARRY

ONE HUNDRED twenty-eight years ago today a young Georgetown lawyer named Francis Scott Key found himself in a curious predicament. He had gone (and this was wartime) to visit the British fleet in the Chesapeake and had been cordially received. A little too cordially, he must have thought to himself, for now his hosts would not hear of him leaving. He might have felt a great deal better about the whole situation if he could have foreseen what this refusal on the part of the British authorities was to mean to him.

Without it, he would have died a relatively obscure man and been remembered only by a few of his cronies in politics and the law. With it, he was to esconce himself firmly in history and become a personage every school child knows and reveres.

Compared with the present conflict, the War of 1812 was a gentlemanly affair. One might drop in on the enemy at any time (with the proper credentials, of course) and instead of being insulted and mistreated would probably be asked to stay for tea. Key, with the blessing of President Madison himself, had gone to the mouth of the Potomac under a flag of truce in a small American boat, the Minden, to make contact with the British fleet for the purpose of obtaining the release of a certain Dr. Beanes, an American, who was being held prisoner on one of the English ships. The courtesy with which Key was received threatened to turn to hostility when his mission was made known, for the English seemed to consider Beanes a civilian who had made war upon them without warrant and thus not entitled to the privileges of a soldier. However, a member of Key's party produced evidence of the humanity with which Beanes had treated wounded Britons and the conferences ended amicably.

Amicably except for the news that the city of Baltimore was about to be attacked and that no Americans could leave the fleet for some days lest they warn their countrymen of the British plans. On Sept. 13, 1814, Key had already put up with more than a week of this captivity.

But now the attack was developing in earnest and he would soon know its result. The fleet had moved up the Chesapeake to a point within firing range of Fort McHenry, at the entrance to Baltimore's upper harbor. Shells from the British vessels began falling around the American position. All during the night of Sept. 13-14 Key and a companion paced the deck of their boat (they had returned to the Minden, with a detachment of British marines who were to keep an eye on them). They saw the spouts of flame as the shells left the British guns, then held their breaths until the sounds of the explosions rolled toward them. As long as the firing continued they knew that the fort still stood, but it stopped before the night was over and a period of terrible suspense began. Had the fort been taken, or had the attack been abandoned?

Impatiently they waited for morning, but when the first light of dawn came they hardly dared to look. Would the British emblem now float above the fort guarding the city of Baltimore? Had the American cause received another heartbreaking setback?

When it was light enough to see they clapped their glasses to their eyes. There, floating proud and free above Fort McHenry, were the Stars and Stripes of the United States! The men shouted and wept. The emotion of one of them was to be caught and held in imperishable words, for then and there, in a frenzy of inspiration, Key began jotting down ideas for a poem. Like Lincoln 49 years later with the Gettysburg address, Key had naught with him but an old envelope. It was on such humble stationery that the flaming lines of "The Star-Spangled Banner" were first inscribed.

That very day, Sept. 14, 1814, saw the completion of the poem. Key worked on it on his way to Baltimore (he and his party had been released by the British after the failure of the attack) and he finished it in a hotel in that city the same night.

The new poem aroused so much enthusiasm in an acquaintance of Key's that he had it struck off on a handbill and distributed thru Baltimore. Shortly thereafter it was printed in a newspaper. Sung to the melody of "To Anacreon in Heaven," an English song then very well known in the United States, it quickly became one of the most popular of patriotic anthems.

There has been some dispute as to whether Key himself had the melody of "To Anacreon in Heaven" in mind when he wrote his poem, and evidence has been brought forward to support the contention that he could not have had any melody in mind. Key may have been tone deaf and unable to distinguish one tune from another! This disability evidently ran in the family, for it is said that a great-granddaughter of Key tried for years to acquire enough musical knowledge to recognize "The Star-Spangled Banner" when it was played and that she never quite arrived at this goal!

From the mural by George Gray, depicting the moment that gave Francis Scott Key the inspiration for "The Star-Spangled Banner." The mural was unveiled at Hotel Rennert, Baltimore, Md., in 1835.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

However, there can be no reasonable doubt but that Key had at least the meter of "To Anacreon in Heaven" in mind. Otherwise his poem would hardly fit the melody so beautifully.

By the way, those who call "To Anacreon in Heaven" an English drinking song, and who blush with shame at the idea of our taking a melody with tipsy connotations for our national anthem, have seriously misconstrued the facts. The Anacreontic society of London was a dignified group which fostered the arts and counted among its members some of the most intelligent and cultured people of England. It was named in honor of Anacreon, Greek poet of love, pleasure and wine, but this does not mean that its meetings invariably turned into brawls. The dignity of the melody of "To Anacreon in Heaven" would alone convince any thoughtful person that it was no barroom ballad. The song was probably written by John Stafford Smith (music) and Ralph Tomlinson (words) in the latter part of the 18th century. Perhaps it would be interesting to see a verse of it in print and to imagine how it would sound to the now familiar melody.

To Anacreon, in Heav'n, where he sat in full glee,
A few sons of harmony sent a petition,
That he their inspirer and patron would be;
When this answer arrived from the jolly old Grecian—
Voice, fiddle and flute,
No longer be mute;
I'll lend ye my name, and inspire ye to boot:
And, besides, I'll instruct ye,
like me, to intwine
The myrtle of Venus with Bac-chus's wine.

Altho "The Star-Spangled Banner" gradually took its place as America's No. 1 patriotic song, and altho it was long the anthem of both the army and navy, it had to wait nearly 117 years before its unofficial status as national anthem of the whole United States was officially confirmed. On March 4, 1931, President Hoover signed the bill which extended to the song this official recognition. At least one of the congressional conferences which resulted in the bill was of a unique character, for the conferees were compelled to spend much of their time on their feet. Protagonists of "The Star-Spangled Banner" had brought musicians and singers to perform it before the committee!

Since this is a free country and since one can grumble without being shot, the national anthem has come in for its share of criticism. Its alleged unsingability has been the principal charge brought against it. Certainly it is a fearfully difficult song. Not only is its range great (an octave and a fifth) but its intervals are wide. The melody progresses largely by dizzying skips rather than in simple seconds and thirds.

Words and music of "The Star-Spangled Banner," arranged especially for piano accompaniment, are reproduced on page one of today's Picture Section.

It has been criticized also because it tends to keep ancient quarrels alive. The British were our enemies in 1814 but they have been our friends (off and on) since then. The wisdom of the strong denunciation of the British which the third verse of the anthem contains has, therefore, been seriously questioned.

Some work has been done on the problems raised by the first of these objections. H. J. Kent of Wautoma, Wis., has published a version of the anthem which reduces its compass by two full tones (by using reiterated notes instead of the long downward swoop at the beginning). This, by the way, is from a historical standpoint perfectly logical, for "To Anacreon in Heaven" began with reiterated notes rather than a broken chord. However, these notes were the tonic (low A flat in the version published in the Picture Section of today's Tribune) and did not make the compass any smaller. (Many editions of "The Star-Spangled Banner" followed this form.) Mr. Kent has also suggested some revisions in the words, altho he retains the unkind references to the British.

It has also been suggested (not by Mr. Kent) that a sudden change of key be made at the words "And the rockets' red glare," and that uncomfortably high phrase dropped a minor third.

It is unlikely that any radical changes will be made in "The Star-Spangled Banner" in our time. The melody's extended compass and wide intervals add immeasurably to its grandeur. As for the objectionable third verse, nobody ever sings it anyway.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

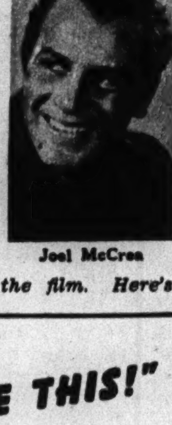
Dear Miss Tinée: My girl friend and I just saw "Tuttles of Tahiti" and "To the Shores of Tripoli" and enjoyed both pictures very much. We would appreciate it greatly if you would give us the addresses of Gene Reynolds and Randolph Scott. Thank you.

ERNESTINE SHAW.

Dear Ernestine: Here's making happy (I hope) "my girl friend and I." You can write to Gene Reynolds in care of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, Culver City, Cal., and to Randolph Scott in care of Universal studio, Universal City, Cal.

Dear Miss Tinée: Just the other day I saw "The Great Man's Lady." It was one of the best pictures I have seen in a long time. Would you please print a picture of Joel McCrea and something about him? Thank you very much.

KENNY SWOFFORD.



Joel McCrea

Dear Kenny: Glad you liked the film. Here's Joel's picture and his biography. Born in Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 5, 1905. He's 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 185 pounds, and has brown hair and blue eyes. Educated Hollywood High school and Pomona college. Married to Frances Dee, screen actress, and has two sons. Hobbies are horseback riding, surfing, tennis, boxing, and swimming.

Dear Miss Tinée: Just a line to let you know that you were strictly "on the beam" when writing the review of "In Old California." Not yours, but appreciative,

GLORIA BANK.

Dear Miss Bank: I'm always so touched when somebody likes my poetry. (And "touched" when I write it, most think.)

Dear Mae Tinée: Each Sunday I read your column. I've often wanted to write to you and see if I could see my letter in print. Since seeing "Billy the Kid" I really have something to write about. What a fine cowboy star Bob Taylor would be if they'd put him in westerns only! Buck Jones was my greatest favorite cowboy, and to me Bob Taylor is Buck Jones Jr. Gee, he sure was great in "Billy." Some day I'd like to be a western star. Would it sound like I was bragging if I said I wrote the words to a war song called "Brave Hearts of America"?

BILL INDELLI.

Dear Bill: Ah, a western fan! Me, too! Indeed it wouldn't sound like bragging. Congratulations. And here's your letter in print. Come again.

WOMAN'S PLACE IS ON THE FARM!

By ELEANOR NANGLE

A picture story of the "Tractorette" school described in this article will be found in today's Picture Section.

IN MARCH the International Harvester company launched a program designed to help solve the threatened farm-labor shortage by training farm women and girls as operators of tractors and other farm machinery. Since then the threat of the shortage has become a reality—a serious one—and the wisdom of the idea behind the training program was proved this summer, when the first crop of thousands of "Tractorettes" assisted their fathers and husbands, ably, on farms all over the country.

The organizational framework of the training program is simple. Dealers, furnished by the company with manuals, slide films and diagram texts, supplied the classrooms, instructors and machines in their individual communities. Dealers also selected the women students on the basis of qualification and need. For the present the free training courses are available only to women who live on farms and might reasonably be expected to help in their operation. If it becomes necessary to train women from towns and cities to replace the vanishing farm hand, the program can easily be expanded.

A striking illustration of the organization and the success of this emergency-inspired training program for women on farms is to be found at Burlington, Ia., a fine farming section heavily handicapped not only by the enlistments and the draft but by the proximity of the huge Iowa ordnance plant on the outskirts of the town.

Three women organized the Tractorette program in Burlington: Mrs. George Schweizer, wife of the president of the Burlington Farm Machinery corporation; Mrs. Roy Murphy, wife of the farmer-secretary of the company, and Mrs. H. B. Schwaller, wife of one of the biggest farm operators in Des Moines county. Acting as a committee, these women canvassed the community, interviewing all the farmers and their wives, and the local girls of the 4-H clubs. They also obtained a list of the farm men who had been drafted, then checked to find sisters, mothers or women relatives who might be trained to replace them in the fields.

Two classes of twenty women each were organized, one at Burlington, one at Mediapolis, Ia., twenty miles north. In each class were farm housewives and high school girls, plus a few office or powder plant women workers whose parents were farmers and who expected to be called upon to help during the peak periods on the family farm.

In the first six lessons, given in the dealer's showrooms, the women studied the motor, transmission, cooling system, and ignition of tractors. They studied service care to insure maximum performance. They learned to operate the machines, and to attach and use the implements that hitch to tractors. And, every step of the way, they were drilled in SAFETY.

At Burlington, as in every Tractorette course given anywhere, safety is of paramount importance. The women were drilled in the knowledge that accidents "don't happen—they are caused." As a safety measure, their regulation costume is close fitting trousers or overalls and shirts; skirts and other loose garments are much too hazardous around moving machinery. And the women must not be afraid of grease and dirt, nor their costumes the kind that are damaged by it.

The first six lessons for Tractorettes are concerned with the principle and theory of farm machinery operation. After these, they put theory to practice in the fields, where they solo and learn plowing and draft distribution. In many cases the course is extended to provide instruction in disking, seeding, planting, and cultivation. In dairy districts Tractorettes are drilled in the operation of milking machines and other dairy equipment.

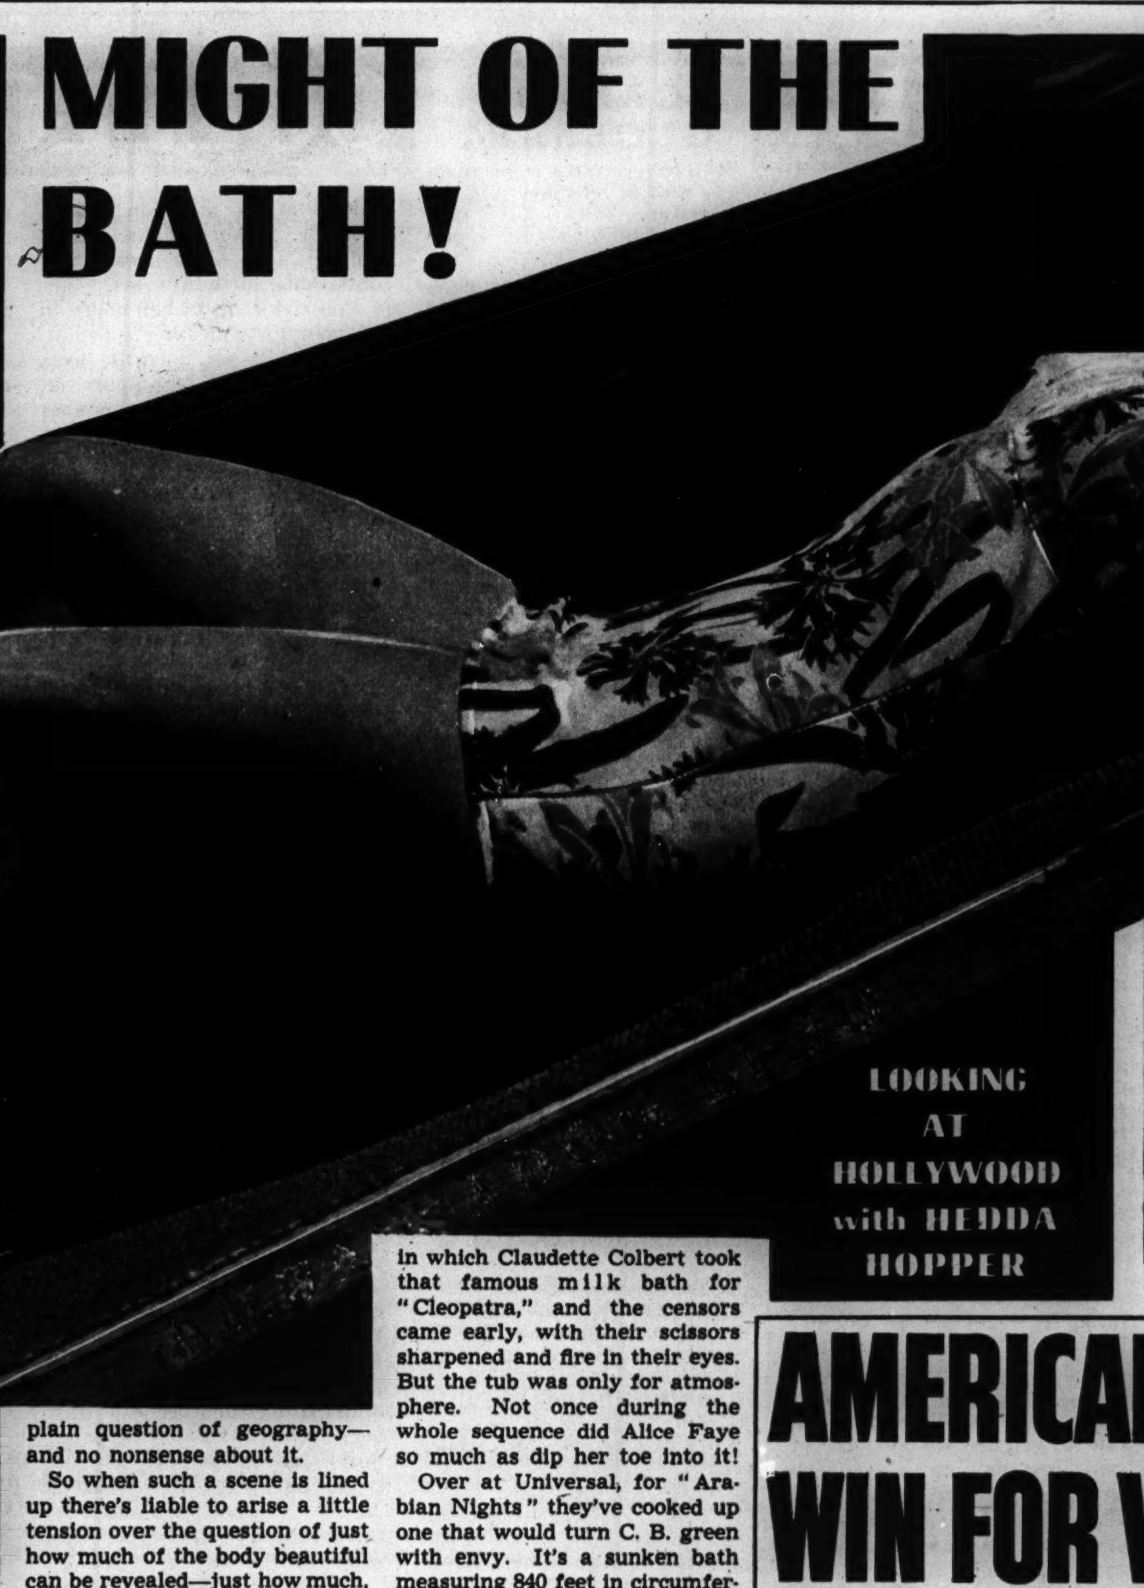
Who are Tractorettes and why do they take the course? In Burlington, Ia., they are young girls, young married women, and valiant mature women who have raised their families and earned their leisure on shady porches. Their common bond is the determination to be useful in their own and the country's struggle to produce with unprecedented efficiency.

Rita Wiemann of Burlington is 17 years old, a senior in high school who weighs in at 100 pounds. Her father is a disabled veteran of World War I.; this summer, with help impossible to find, Rita, with her mother and sister, has operated the family farm—180 acres—and helped milk 21 cows a day. Donna Mehaffy, another Burlington Tractorette, is 14; she handles a tractor as tho it were a bicycle. Her only grown brother enlisted in the navy six months ago; she works daily on the family's farm. Mrs. Blythe Conn of Burlington, a social worker before her marriage, took the training so she could help in the emergency on her husband's farm. Mrs. Glenn Romkey's husband, in addition to operating a large farm, is president of an inland air company; when he goes, as he shortly expects to, into the ferry service, his wife will supervise the farm, more assured in her war rôle because of her Tractorette training.

The prospects for relief of the farm labor shortage do not grow brighter. Many war industries, notably the ordnance plants, must mushroom in the open spaces of rural communities; so do air fields and camps, taking what labor remains after the inroads of enlistments and selective service. Farm girls and women such as Tractorettes might very well be the nucleus of a new kind of army on which the democracies must depend to fill the stomachs on which the other armies march.

MIGHT OF THE BATH!

Director Krasna decided to have Olivia De Havilland bathe in milky water. No fancy dodges like bubbles or steam.



Krasna wonders why a bathing suit girl such as Sally Wadsworth, right, attracts less notice than a bathtub girl.

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD with HEDDA HOPPER

Claudette Colbert in her famous "Cleopatra" milk bath.

NO THINKING person will deny what motion pictures have done for the interior décor of the great American middle class. From the crisscross ruffled organdy curtain to the mirror-top coffee table, they've revolutionized the old homestead, and many a wistful paterfamilias has arrived, footsore and weary, from the office to find his morris chair and carpet stool consigned, along with the bead portières and the fumed oak dresser, to the limbo of forgotten things.

The crayon enlargements of grandma and grandpa have given place to the chaste flower print in its white frame, and the old walnut center table, with its fringed felt cover and its comfortable litter, now masquerades self-consciously on the sun porch beneath several coats of bright red paint. Time passes on, and cherished household gods are crushed beneath the chariot wheels of progress. But does it stop there? No, dear readers, it does not!

Thanks to the incorrigible prankishness of movie directors, glamor again raises its dizzy head in the nation's bathrooms. For years we brushed our teeth, shaved our beards if we had any, and took our baths unthinkingly in a kind of communal comfort station dedicated to stark reality. The family bathroom was the only upstairs room with a lock on the door.

But today the bathroom ranks second in importance to the drawing room—a creation of colored tiles, chromium, and glass, where one sodden towel cast carelessly across the tub's edge knocks the whole décor into a cocked hat. And father's shaving brush, set on the sill to dry, would be nothing short of rank sabotage. It's even got to the point where the memory of how Hedy Lamarr looked when she brushed her teeth in a closeup makes you shy away from your own image in the mirror, unless you've previously got yourself up like a Powers model.

Lillian Russell once said to me: "Being a beauty is a curse. Why, I even have to make up for my bath!" That was long before the advent of Cecil De Mille and the movies, come to think of it. But maybe, along with Anna Held's milk baths, it was the first faint rumble of the revolution to come.

At any rate, if those who manufacture toilet accessories and fancy plumbing thought about it they'd realize how much they owe to Hollywood and would be more coöperative.

Mind you, I'm not kicking. The old-time bathroom was nothing to spill tears over, and the glamorized article, complete with bath salts, mouth wash, and all the trimmin's, has done a lot for personal hygiene in the last few years. But it's the movies in general—and Cecil De Mille in particular—who are responsible for it. C. B.'s super de luxe tubs, a feature in each of his epics, were the marvel of the silent era. The first public response to these plumbers' pipe dreams was a loud horse laugh, but the soapsuds sequences kept rolling along, and, despite the continued ribbing of the ribald, the nation's wives commenced to view their bathrooms with a jaundiced eye. And when an American housewife gets jaundice in her eye it's time for all good men to come to the aid of their country.

What got me started on this is that every movie set I've showed up on for the last month has had one or another of our beauties stepping into a tub or out of a shower for those shots that look so intriguing on the screen and cause such a headache to the studio that sponsors them. "To the pure all things are pure." But to the Hays office godliness is not so much a matter of cleanliness as the producers would like them to believe.

With an eye to the box office, the kindly producer seeks to reconcile the spiritual and physical—the illusion of nudity with the minimum of exposure. The Hays office are built of sterner stuff. Modesty to them is a plain question of geography—and no nonsense about it.

So when such a scene is lined up there's liable to arise a little tension over the question of just how much of the body beautiful can be revealed—just how much, and how clearly it can be shown. And who do you think is the buffer between the two conflicting camps? Why, the prop man, of course—that faithful magician who can dig up anything from a pink elephant to an 18th century sedan chair in five minutes flat. He's the real coördinator betweeen saintliness and ribaldry in our town.

Just now the favorite device for making nudity acceptable to both camps is steam. Soapsuds have had their day, and a good thing, too. After all, what man really enjoyed picturing the gal friend at her ablutions, floundering around in a thick meringue like an animated baked Alaska? In "Girl Trouble," for instance, the script calls for Joan Bennett to get out of her tub and run across the set to answer a telephone without benefit of so much as a bath towel. But all you'll see will be flashes of Joan in multiple mirrors, and it's no use getting your blood pressure up, 'cause the prop man steams up the mirrors as fast as Joan hits 'em—the net result being that the proprieties are satisfied even if nobody else is.

"Tales of Manhattan" lost out on a grand bathroom sequence, but not thru any failure of props. The boys stirred up a terrific bubble bath for one of Ginger Rogers' scenes, but the darned stuff gave her such a sneezing fit she had to break down and confess she was allergic to soapsuds. They tried steam—she kept right on sneezing. After that, a synthetic fog, which made her violently ill—so they just gave up the whole thing.

In "Week-End in Havana" the producers got back a little of their own. They constructed a tub even larger than the one in which Claudette Colbert took that famous milk bath for "Cleopatra," and the censors came early, with their scissors sharpened and fire in their eyes. But the tub was only for atmosphere. Not once during the whole sequence did Alice Faye so much as dip her toe into it!

Over at Universal, for "Arabian Nights" they've cooked up one that would turn C. B. green with envy. It's a sunken bath measuring 840 feet in circumference and six feet deep—lined with goatskins and covered by a canopy of purple silk, with trick lights throwing rainbow shadows on the water. The whole thing's shot in technicolor and shows Maria Montez disporting herself in the company of 50 other harem beauties.

Jeanette MacDonald takes an elegant dip in a sunken tub on the banks of the Nile for "Cairo." The subtle shadows they cast upon her submerged form will have you doing nipups, but don't get excited—like all the rest of them, she wears a flesh-colored strapless bathing suit under the soapsuds. But she's a ravishing eyeful just the same.

One of the funniest bathing scenes in a long time will never be released on any screen. In "The Cat People" there's a shot of Simone Simon bathing in one of those old-fashioned claw-foot enameled iron tubs. After frantic combing of the environs RKO discovered there were none to be had, so props got to work and made a replica in plastic. All went well until the scene was under way, when with an ear-splitting report the tub split neatly in half, leaving Simone on the floor, mad as a wet hen but not nearly so well clothed.

Norman Krasna, who's now directing his first picture, "Princess O'Rourke," in which Olivia De Havilland will dunk the body, says that C. B. is still undisputed maestro of them all, 'cause in "King of Kings" he bathed the whole Egyptian army in the Red sea, which obligingly opened up for him. Norman's turned down all the fancy dodges in this one—says the public's tired of 'em. He's just gone back to the old basic rule—keep the water milky and well up to the lady's shoulders.

"The public knows those bubble baths are just a comeon," he told me. "They'll get a bigger boot out of this, because it looks like the real thing. Why is it, do you suppose," he went on to ask, "you can drive down to any beach and see hundreds of girls cavorting around with not enough on to wad a gun, and nobody gives them a second glance? Yet they'll get a real thrill out of gawking at a picture of a woman's head sticking up out of a tubful of water."

Why, Norman, you should know the answer to that one!

ually wander into class just as the prof has begun to warm up to his subject. Doesn't it annoy you when some one stumbles over your feet on his way to his seat five minutes after class has begun? Observe, and govern yourself accordingly.

But back to the classroom for a minute to talk about one of our pet peeves. He is the lad who, having lost interest in the lecture, tries to carry on a long conversation about that blind date he had rush week. When you are getting something out of the lecture it takes strong will power to avoid doing something drastic. Be considerate, friend, be considerate. There is a time and a place, we always say.

Another interesting problem comes under the head of cribbing. Aside from any question of ethics, fellow classmates don't like to see it done. You can take our word for it, cribbing in any form is a sure way to lose friends and alienate people. Don't be a periscope.

FACULTY RELATIONS

Any self-respecting faculty member is keen enough to recognize apple polishing a mile away. If you want to make a good impression, don't rush up after class and strike up a conversation. A better way to do it is with an alert, interested face in class, rather than a sleepy-eyed one propped painfully on one hand. If you're really having difficulty, tho, don't hesitate to call your prof to the rescue—but during office hours, please. He will be glad to help you if he can.

COMMONS (COKE SHOP) CUSTOMS

It's a popular spot, mainly because of being a swell place to take a date from your 2 o'clock without spending more than 15 cents if you don't want to. With a quarter you can make a deposit on a deck of cards, for bridge playing is practically a required course.

If you are one of the Joe crowd you'll do a lot of griping about the waiter. But some time, just for fun, you might stand back at the soda fountain for a few minutes and watch him at work. We'll guarantee you'll have a new understanding of his problems and will move out of his way more quickly or order more rapidly the next time.

Sometimes the popular spot gets a bit overcrowded, and then it's quite annoying to find several tables up near the front reserved for friends after they get out of their 3 o'clocks. First come, first served, is the generally accepted rule.

MEETING 'EM

"Dating," you say, "that's one part of campus life I'm really going to get a bang out of." Before we can talk about dates we must secure that all-important requirement for dates—namely, a date. No matter how smooth you are, we don't recommend just walking up to a total stranger and introducing yourself. This doesn't, however, mean that you can't be friendly with every one.

At Indiana, however, introductions are considered necessary for dating. The problem is how to get them. One time-honored way is via the blind date system, which is especially useful at the beginning of the semester. The difficulty is that you may not get the campus queen—but then you may not be the king yourself. Make the best of the situation if you don't click, and who knows, you may really go for her roommate or a friend.

Of course, being with some one in class can be considered as an introduction. Strike up a conversation about the prof or the weather on your way out of class, and before you know it you've had a coke date and are ready for a big evening occasion. An acquaintance in activity groups, church organizations, and the like is easily made. One of the best ways to make friends in a new situation is to be a joiner.

Meet people thru your friends and acquaintances on campus. Introductions should always be made in any strange group by friends in common. Try to remember names, and before you know it you'll have more friends than you can count. Just one more hint—it will help if you learn to recognize the pins of various organizations.

ASKING 'EM

The next step is getting the date. Assuming you know how to operate one of those new-fangled gadgets, the telephone, you grasp it firmly in one hand or else between your head and shoulder, dial the number, and ask for your party. Still with us? Don't say, "Guess who," unless you want to be coy. Avoid the "What're you doing next Friday night, babe?" line. Really, you know, it isn't any of your business. After a few well chosen introductory remarks you present your case simply and directly, making it sound so attractive she can't refuse.

Comes her turn at bat. If she's delighted and would love to go, she'll undoubtedly say so; or, having something else planned, she'll probably murmur, "I'm sorry, but I've planned something else for that evening." Now, don't hang up in a huff—also don't reel out an alternate list of dates and times. Try again later. But if you keep getting the "I'm sorry . . ." angle, better give up; you're sailing on the wrong tack. If she really wants a date with you she will probably add to her regrets, "Couldn't we make it some other time?"

CAMPUS GLOSSARY

BORESS—versatile word usually used in reference to a discussion or bull session, if that helps. It is derived, appropriately enough, from the Greek noun Boreas—north wind. Also used to indicate that a good time was had. Also used in reference to examinations in which you write irrelevant material for lack of knowledge of the correct answer, hoping for some little credit in the course. For example, "I had to boress that section." Sometimes used as a synonym for a practical joke.

DRIP—male equivalent of goon. A drizzle is a drip going steady.

FLAPPING YOUR LIPS—talking, usually pointlessly. Various modifications, such as airing your molars.

TO GET A SHOW ON THE ROAD—"Let's get started." Also, "Let's get rolling."

JOE—one who specializes in the social side of campus life.

NO STUFF?—you don't say? "Don't feed me that stuff"—expression of disbelief.

QUACKS—medical students. Also gut-plumbers.

QUAIL, FRAIL, SKIRT, CHICKEN or CHICK, BABE—all synonymous with girl.

RUGGED—adjective denoting admiration of almost anything. Also synonymous with tough, as a rugged exam.

ROCKS—money, usually a dollar. Also lettuce and beans, not necessarily a specific quantity.

SCROGGED—cheated.

SNORKY—expression of approval.

SHYSTER—law students.

SNAFFLE—to take surreptitiously, usually food.

SQUEEK—(noun or verb) complaint.

TURNING GEARS—working hard, usually with connotation of progress in the work.

While we're on the subject of telephoning we might mention a few other things which will keep the wrath of your friends off your head. Please, please make those calls short—especially about 10:30.

THE MALE ANIMAL

By the by, girls—a hint to the wise, and all that. He doesn't want to be told that "I'm sorry, but I've got another date." It may flatter your ego, but rest assured it doesn't flatter his. As a matter of fact, that is a good rule for all dating. Direct the conversation in his or her direction, and don't mention other dates until you know each other better.

Another thing—don't be insulted if you are asked for a date at the 11th hour. Some don't like to make dates far in advance, being unwilling to plan a week in the future. Or sometimes plans have been changed, leaving an evening open, and there is really no good reason why you should sit at home if you don't feel like it. Of course, most evening dates should be made several days in advance—and more than a week if it's an important party or formal dance.

At Indiana dates just aren't broken without a very good reason. You go unless you've broken a leg or lost your favorite grandmother—and you'd better not lose more than a half dozen or you'll get an unenviable reputation. If you must break, try to do it long enough in advance to make other arrangements.

INSURANCE FOR A SUCCESSFUL EVENING

Whew! Now that you've got a date, we can settle down to business. But there are still a few things to check on. Have you called her up a day or so before and told her what time you will call for her? Also find out what's going to be worn by the others and tell her about it. Not that she won't check with her friends, too, but it's better to be on the safe side. For a blind date the same rules apply, plus an identification system of some sort—"Look for the tall guy with the flapping ears."

If you are sending flowers, which is the correct thing to do for formal or semiformal dances, find out what she likes and where she likes to wear them. That's the only way to avoid embarrassment (not to mention a clashing of teeth and colors) at the other end. Incidentally, flowers make acceptable gifts on other occasions—initiations, birthdays, etc.

You stride up to her house in all your go-to-meeting splendor. At a sorority you open the door, step inside, and try to figure out the buzzer system to announce yourself. Elsewhere you ask the telephone operator or any one handy to tell her you've arrived.

Before long (we hope) she comes floating down the stairs, carrying her coat, which you help her with after you've made some very smooth and appropriate remark. If she comes late, or you are late, don't start off the evening wrong with a profuse apology. Make it short and sweet.

Maybe plans have not already been made for the evening, and you now decide what to do. When the wallet is a bit thin, merely suggest several things within its range. She can take her choice. Of course she has the final word—don't they always?

TRY THE THEATER

We'll assume that you do the usual thing and take in a show. Remember that she has the final say-so about whether it shall be Clark Gable or Hedy Lamarr. As a rule she waits in the lobby while you are buying the tickets. If she'd just as soon sit in the balcony she may say so, thus leaving the decision to you. . . . Most people know how to behave in shows, but a few we could mention don't. For the sake of our friendship we hope you don't talk in shows, anticipating each scene. "Now, here's really the way it happened, Susie—he stabbed her with his finger nail file . . ." and so on. . . . Save the smooch for later if you're the type. One show, on the screen, is enough.

You may choose the other usual alternative, dancing, and hie yourself off union-buildingwards, or elsewhere. Almost anything goes except the pump handle style of dancing. It takes up too much room. Speak to the chaperons—or, even better, do your best to entertain them. (You may be one yourself some day.)

THE SECRET IS PRACTICE

Now, before we wind up the evening, we want to answer the question from the back row: "How can you avoid that embarrassing pause in a conversation?" . . . You must train yourself to talk about nothing in particular with great ease. If you can find something in which you are both interested it's easy sledding from then on in. You might try, for a starter, home towns, friends, the old time-tested weather, vacation experiences (if any), or school subjects. And you can always cut the conversation in half by double-dating with some friend. (P. S.—Doubling is, of course, an accepted practice, and rightfully so, among old friends, but keep the conversation on common—not too common—ground.)

AFTER THE BALL

The ladies, bless 'em, are somewhat averse to being marched home from the date and deposited on the doorstep. In other words, they long for that pause that refreshes. Of course, when you've been feeding her on and off all evening, or have just time to make it home before the ax falls, you would probably be excused.

Speaking of axes, the penalties for lateness are rather strict, and, rightly or wrongly, getting your date in late will not make you popular with her or the house mother. Also running a mile or so in high heels is no picnic, we understand.

That good night kiss—singular or plural—is your own business. We'll give advice on everything but that. We can only say that if universality is any criterion of legitimacy (we don't say it is), the "in-a-door smooch" has long since been completely legitimate.

AH, SPRING!

Now, as how romance is what there ain't no better than, we propose to drop a few pearls on that subject. Most eds and co-eds will agree, if not in the throes themselves, that the sane thing to do is to keep yourself free of entangling alliances, especially in your freshman year. Get around and meet people until you have met enough to make up your mind about settling down. Altho some of us think differently, pinning on this campus is not generally considered as binding as an engagement. That pin you give or take, as the case may be, merely announces to the world at large and your public in particular that you are no longer in circulation. Well, when you put it that way, who are we to say no—but don't say we didn't warn you.

IT'S UP TO YOU

Some people at I. U. drink, but there are also many who do not. You will not be ostracized if you belong to this second group. If you do not care for a drink you need only say so, or preferably just ask for something else. For the sake of the record we should point out that the administration does not advocate drinking.

If you do drink, stay well within your limits, especially if you are with a date. As a matter of fact, we would like to discourage any drinking at all on a first date; you might put her in an embarrassing position if you are not sure of her sentiments.

If you do not smoke, merely say, "No, thank you," not "I don't smoke," when the pack is passed around, because your refusal is likely to have a tone of moral disapproval which will not make you popular. Here again the matter is too personal for us to advise you, but if you decide to take up smoking, better practice first. At Indiana co-eds do not (or rather should not) smoke except where ash trays are provided. Do not smoke when in doubt about the preferences of the people you are with.

MAKING A GOOD IMPRESSION

Always stand when introducing some one or being introduced. The basic rule is to introduce the man to the woman. "Harriet Hasbrains, this is Gregory Grind." First names are always used among students, altho you will be titled Mr. in class.

The correct response is "How do you do?", not "Glad-to-meetcha." Men shake hands with other men when introduced but not with a woman unless she offers her hand. Since you make your first impression with your handshake, try to make it sincere and hearty but not bone-crushing. If you simply can't work up a good grip you'll have to adopt some sort of routine excuse, for example, "Pardon the iron grip, but I've been packing marshmallows."

When introducing some one, try to drop a hint that will provide both parties with something to talk about. For example, "Jay B. Oglethorpe is from Squeedunk City, where he is general manager of the Little Tiny Casket company." That's your cue for an intelligent question about the casket business, or your friend from Squeedunk.

You may choose the other usual alternative, dancing.

OF NO USE TO HERMITS

Now that we're well started, we propose to wax eloquent on the subject of getting along with people. You are probably living in a dorm, fraternity, or rooming house. Remember that it is a coöperative venture, and that the conveniences are not put there solely for your pleasure. Don't be one of those who have to be rolled off the davenport when others want to use it. As a general rule, people like to find the comic section on page eleven of section B rather than under the card table.

Wholly aside from any consideration for your roommate, clothes have a habit of looking better if they are hung up rather than slung about the room in wild abandon as you undress. Then, too, it's sometimes easier to find things when you want them if you put them away. Altho roommates can be awfully handy when you run out of soap, don't make a practice of borrowing. It can lead only to tension eventually. While we think of it and are speaking of rooms, girls—that's where most of your vigorous gum-chewing should be done.

DO AS OTHERS DO

Alumni would probably tell you, if you asked, that nothing was more important at IU to them than the friends they made here. Altho times are busy, it won't hurt to stop and spend some of it with acquaintances. These scattered intervals totaled together make a friend. Learn how to play the game the others play (bridge, ping pong, etc); learn how to talk about the things others talk about; how to dress the way they do; in other words, be one of them. Do you dance? If you don't know how, it's time to learn. Your new friends will be glad to teach you.

BUT DON'T BE A CARBON COPY

Now that we've argued for conforming, we're going to turn around and contradict ourselves. You should conform, certainly, but not to the extent that you violate your own ethical code. In the last analysis you must live with yourself. Try to fit in, but not so much so that you would be unwilling for friends who knew you B. C. (before college) to see you as you are.

WHAT WE WEAR

With a last long look at the safety of the conservative world, we proceed to stick our neck far out on the subject of clothes. It's safe to say that a collar-shirt (preferably clean), pants ditto (unless they are Senior cords, in which case slight allowances will be made), and shoes and socks reasonably whole are a minimum for campus men's wear. Anything from this point on up to a suit and tie is O. K. by us.

Now for date dress. In the evenings it's invariably a suit; if you can afford only one, make it conservative. Afternoon dates don't require a coat, but it's not a bad idea. Athletic events take sport clothes, if you've got 'em. If you don't know what goes well with which, ask someone who does. Clothing salesmen are often on to the latest.

THIS IS COLLEGE

Because this is as an appropriate place as any, we want to remind you that when you come to college you left high school behind. Don't wear your award sweaters here, especially with the high school letter. Your high school pins belong at home—not on you. This is a new world to conquer—and in this world wear college jewelry or none at all. To quote the bearded Western Wyoming sage: "When in Rome, shoot Roman candles!"

"Friends wonder what I see in him!"

"I admit my husband's not the handsomest man in the world. Or the brainiest, either. But...

"It isn't every man who has spells of talking like a Romeo to the woman who cooks his meals. My husband has!

"It isn't every man who, out of a clear sky, compliments his wife when other folks are around. My husband does!

"And when he says my hands are 'so smooth and soft' and presses them against his cheek...it may be silly, but it makes me love that man of mine!

"Thank goodness I can help keep my hands lovely for him—by doing my dishes with Ivory Soap!

"I thought for a time that I had to use strong washday soap for speed. But it made my hands red 'n' rough. I didn't know that New Ivory's velvet suds clean dishes fast as the strongest washday soaps!

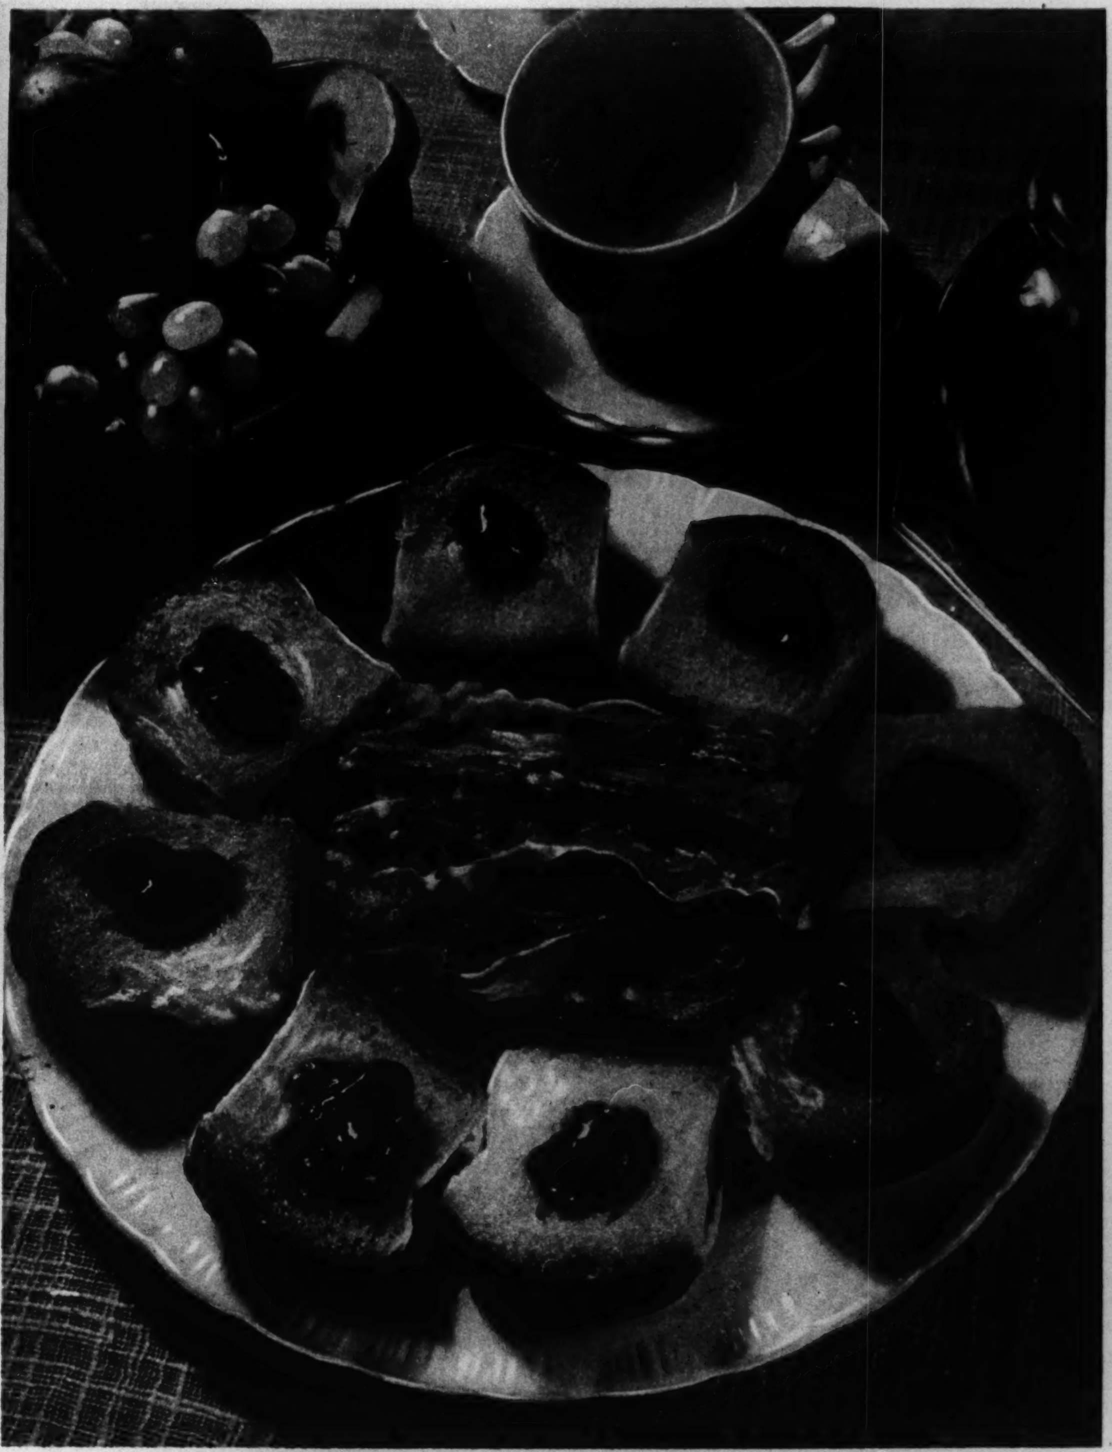
Boost for Better Breakfasts!

Light, golden pancakes are good breakfast food now and then.

Fruit muffins are delicious. These contain bits of cranberry sauce.



French toast with apple jelly and crisp broiled bacon—ah, there's a breakfast for you!

By MARY MEADE

ONCE UPON a time Americans ate more breakfast than they do now. That was commendable. But sometimes what they ate for breakfast wasn't exactly what you could call nutritious food. Take this example of a "good" breakfast dish, the recipe for which is included in an 1872 American cookbook in my possession:

"A WET DEVIL

"Take any part of a turkey, goose, or fowl, cover it with mustard, chutney, diavolo paste, or any other piquant condiment; put a dessert spoonful of cayenne pepper, one of pounded white sugar, the juice of a lemon, a glass of wine, and a glass of ketchup, to a teacupful of gravy; heat them together, pour over the deviled fowl, and send up very hot."

Once in Mexico I ate something that tasted like that, I think. My mouth still burns!

The author of that cookbook appended this note, which is gratifying: "A little cold fresh butter will cool the mouth, should the grill prove too powerful."

Now, I'm in favor of hearty breakfasts, but not that kind. Seems to me that spicy, strong-flavored foods have no place at the morning meal. Little sausages and cinnamon toast are about as far as I will go in recommending seasoned breakfast dishes.

Breakfast foods I will recommend. All of us should eat them. Cooked cereals like oatmeal, cracked wheat, enriched farina not only provide us with energy but furnish vitamin B1 or thiamin, the much-needed guardian of the nervous system. Some of the ready-prepared cereals have been fortified with vitamins and minerals, too.

Eggs have been and remain without a peer as the makings of a good breakfast. They are one of the essential foods in a program of good nutrition. It is much better to soft-cook, poach, or scramble them in the top of a double boiler than to fry them.

Fruit there must always be at breakfast. Tomato juice, orange juice, grapefruit, cantaloupe are good vitamin C sources. The citrus fruits especially are to be recommended. Some persons like two fruits for breakfast—for example, orange juice and whole prunes, with their cereal. This is an excellent habit.

Bacon or ham, liver or kidneys, occasionally pork sausage, add interest, appetite appeal, and good protein to a breakfast. Liver and kidneys are good mineral sources, too.

Homemade muffins, waffles, pancakes are good breakfast companions. It isn't a wise idea to serve waffles or cakes doused in sirup too often, tho, for the concentration of sugar in the sirup is a bit irritating to the digestive system, especially for children.

Coffee and cocoa both are a lot rarer than they used to be, and we may have to learn to like another breakfast beverage. My suggestion is milk, either hot or cold, for milk is one of our best foods and one which many of us neglect shamefully. Cereal beverages which somewhat resemble coffee, but have more food value, are another possibility, as are the several prepared mixes rich in minerals and vitamins which you add to cold or hot milk or water.

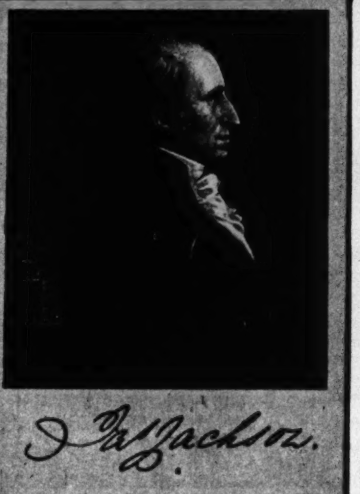
DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

● This is another in a series of biographical sketches of America's historical celebrities appearing every week in the Graphic Section. The illustrations are taken from a famous work, "The National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans," published in 1865.



A COLORFUL figure of American history was James Jackson, soldier and statesman, who was born at Moreton Hampton, Devonshire, England, Sept. 21, 1757.

At the age of 15 he came to America and began the study of law in the office of Samuel Farley, an attorney of Savannah, Ga. Altho Jackson was of English birth, his sympathies were with the colonies in their quarrel with Great Britain, so when the Revolutionary war broke out he abandoned his studies for the time being to enter the American service.

He took part in the unsuccessful defense of Savannah in 1778, the battle of Cowpens, and the recapture of Augusta in 1781, and in 1782, as a lieutenant colonel, he was ordered by Gen. Anthony Wayne to take possession of Savannah on its evacuation by the enemy. The state legislature of Georgia presented him with a house and lot in Savannah as a reward for his service.

After the war he resumed his legal studies, was admitted to the bar, and by 1789 he had built up a lucrative practice. In the meantime, however, he served several terms in the Georgia legislature, was appointed colonel of the militia of Chatham county in 1784 and brigadier general of militia in 1786. Elected governor of Georgia in 1788, he declined the office, saying that he was too young and inexperienced.

In 1789 he was elected to the national house of representatives, but in 1791 General Wayne defeated him for reelection. Jackson brought up a charge of fraud and induced congress to unseat Wayne, but was unable to obtain the place himself. In 1792 Jackson was appointed a major general for military service against the Creek Indians, and the following year he was elected to the United States senate. He resigned, however, in 1795, and returned to Georgia to be elected to the legislature, where he led the successful fight against the sale of millions of acres of Georgia public land.

Jackson was an influential member of the convention of 1798 that framed a new constitution for Georgia. He was governor from 1798 to 1801 and was elected to the senate again in the latter year, where he served until his death.

Very sensitive when the question of his honor was involved, he would "fight at the drop of a hat." He took part as a principal in several duels, in one of which, in 1780, he killed Lieutenant Governor Wells of Georgia and was himself shot thru both knees. He was confined several months on this occasion by his wounds, but he would not permit the surgeon to amputate his legs.

He died in Washington, D. C., March 19, 1806, his death, according to some authorities, having been caused by wounds received in his last duel.

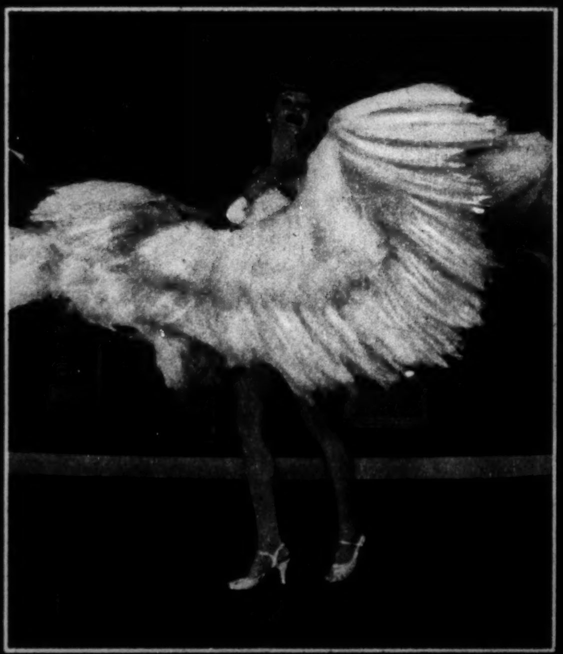
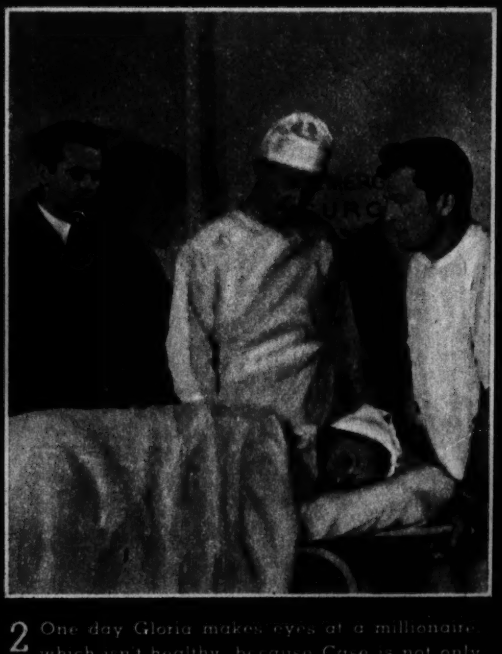
THE GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER



1 Gloria Lyons (Lucille Ball) is a doll with a look of glamor and a heart of pure brass. She is currently engaged to her boss, Case Abeles, a very tough gent who runs a high-class joint. She also is the apple of the eye of a guy named Little Pinks—a busboy.



2 One day Gloria makes eyes at a millionaire, which isn't healthy, because Case is not only tough but jealous. He socks Gloria down a flight of stairs, and she ends up with a broken spine. Little Pinks (Henry Fonda) pays her hospital bill and finally gives her his room, which Gloria accepts but forgets to thank him for.

3 Winter always comes, and when it does Gloria talks Little Pinks into wheeling her down to Florida, where she thinks the sun will help her—and where the money is, too, for dolls who can dance. They have a little trouble with the cops now and then, but she turns on the glamor and all is, as they say, well.

4 Pinks gets a workout one night in Georgia when a couple of hobos, with a couple of persuasive arguments in their hands, come looking for a raise. Pinks clouts one and routs the other, and Gloria's hard heart shows faint signs of cracking a little.

He happens to pick on Mrs. Venus, a very two-faced dame who has eyes for a lug in Case Abeles' mob. This gives Pinks an idea, and he frames Case as the robber.

7 Next Pinks gets a job with Case (Barton MacLane) and makes a deal. He'll clear Case of the Venus job if Case will get Miami society to turn out for a party for Gloria. Case agrees, and the shindig is a big success.

8 But right in the middle of it the cops nab Pinks, who admits the Venus holdup. It seems, however, that Colonel Venus is an amiable gent, and when he discovers that his wife was in cahoots with Case on a fake gem deal he persuades the cops to clear Pinks and take Case. Then he heads for Mrs. Venus, and it isn't love in his eyes.

9 Well, it takes all this ruckus to make Gloria realize what a cold doll she's been, and then she suddenly finds she can walk a little, so she walks to Pinks. She's so happy she wants to dance, so Pinks dresses up in soup and fish and practically carries her thru a routine, and you can see that everything is gonna be up and up from here on in.

Coconut Orange Cream Tarts

2 cups milk
3 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
3/4 cup shredded coconut, cut
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
8 baked Orange Tart Shells

Scald milk in top of double boiler. Combine flour, cornstarch, sugar, and salt and mix thoroughly. Add to scalded milk and cook until thick and smooth, then cook 15 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Stir a small amount of mixture into beaten egg yolks, return to double boiler, and cook a few minutes longer. Cool and add vanilla. Rub coconut and orange rind together. Add to cream filling and blend. Pour filling into baked Orange Tart Shells.

Make a meringue by beating 2 egg whites and 1/4 teaspoon salt until they hold a stiff peak. Add 4 tablespoons sugar gradually, beating constantly. Pile lightly on filling. Bake in slow oven (325° F.) 20 to 25 minutes, or until firm and delicately browned. Makes 8.

Orange Tart Shells

Mix 2 1/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour and 1 teaspoon salt. Add 2 tablespoons grated orange rind and blend. Measure out 3/4 cup Spry and divide into two equal parts.

STEP 1 FOR TENDERNESS
Cut in first half of Spry until fine as meal. This makes the crust tender.

STEP 2 FOR FLAKINESS
Cut in rest of Spry until particles are size of large peas. This makes crus flaky.

Add 5 tablespoons orange juice (no more, no less), mixing thoroughly into a dough. Roll 1/8-inch thick, prick with fork, cut in 5-inch rounds and fit snugly over outside of muffin pans, pinching into about 7 pleats. Bake in very hot oven (450° F.) 8 to 10 minutes. Makes 12 meltingly tender, flaky tart shells.

And notice the delicate orange tang they have. Ordinary shortenings might smother it but purer Spry lets you get its FULL deliciousness. You'll love Spry FULL FLAVOR cakes and fried foods, too. Change to Spry today for all your baking and frying.

GRAPHIC LABORATORY OF POPULAR SCIENCE

ROUNDUP on RUBBER

● This is the last in a series of articles on the making of synthetic rubber. The making of the highly important Buna-S rubber from paper mill waste products, from farm products, and from petroleum has been discussed. Also Buna-N rubber, butyl rubber, and Thiokol rubber have been described and the methods of making these promising materials. ● Today's article names and describes a large number of other ways of making rubber substitutes, some from plants, some from farm crops, and some from minerals. Most of these synthetic rubbers are less promising, less efficient or less well developed than the varieties already described in more detail.

By GUY MURCHIE

NEOPRENE is the first successful American synthetic rubber, and is effective in a number of uses, including tires. It is more expensive than Buna-S, however, and probably less generally practical as tire material. It was announced in 1931 by the Du Pont company and is made mainly from coke, limestone, salt, and sulphuric acid. The coke and limestone make acetylene, which is converted to vinyl acetylene. Meanwhile the salt and the sulphuric acid are combined into muriatic acid, which is mixed with the vinyl acetylene to make chloroprene. The final phase of the process involves polymerizing the chloroprene in the presence of a catalyst, water, and emulsifier to produce Neoprene.

CHEMIGUM, AMERIPOL, and SYNTHAL are trade names for variations of Buna-S rubber made from petroleum by the Goodyear, Goodrich, and United States Rubber companies respectively. HYCAR is another Buna-type rubber made by Goodrich and by the Phillips Petroleum company.

VISTANEX is polymerized butylene and is produced by the Standard Oil company. However, Standard Oil's butyl rubber (previously described in detail) is considered far more promising, than Vistanex.

AXF is also polymerized butylene as made by the Naugatuck Chemican company.

KOROSEAL is a plasticized vinyl chloride polymer made by the Goodrich company. A more highly plasticized version of it, also made by Goodrich, is called KOROGEL.

FLAMENOL is another kind of plasticized vinyl chloride polymer, made by the General Electric company.

There are a number of variations of these chemical synthetic rubbers made in Germany, Japan, Britain, Poland, and Belgium also. In Germany there are at least five varieties of Buna rubber, known as BUNA 85, BUNA 115, BUNA-N, BUNA-S, and BUNA-SS. The last has a larger styrene content than the famous Buna-S, which is about 25 per cent styrene and forms the tires of both the Nazi and Russian war machines, and probably will become the principal substance of the United States army's tires, too, as the war progresses. Buna-N uses acrylonitrile instead of styrene and is a rubber that is very oil-resisting. All the German Buna rubbers are made by I. G. Farbenindustrie in Germany. Buna-N is sometimes called Perbunan, and Buna-SS was formerly called Levulkan.

PERDUREN is a synthetic similar to Thiokol, an organic polysulfide described in a previous article, and made by I. G. Farbenindustrie in Germany.

OPPANOL is another German synthetic made by I. G. Farbenindustrie and similar to Standard Oil's Vistanex, which is an isobutene polymer.

METHYL RUBBER B, METHYL RUBBER H, and METHYL RUBBER W are made with dimethylbutadiene polymers, using sodium as a catalyst in the first, and cold and hot polymerization respectively in the second and third. These methyl rubbers are made by Bayer & Co., Germany.

MUSTONE is the Japanese version of American Neoprene. It is a chloroprene polymer manufactured by the Umeno institute, Japan.

THIONITE is the Japanese form of Thiokol, an organic polysulfide.

SOVPRENE is the Russian form of Neoprene.

RESINIT is a kind of Thiokol once made in Russia.

SKA and SKB are Russian Buna rubbers made from petroleum and from farm products respectively.

VULCAPLAS is the English version of Thiokol and made by Imperial Chemical Industries, England.

KER is a variety of Buna rubber made in Poland, originally by the Stomil company.

ETHANITE is a Belgian form of Thiokol, originally made by the Belgian Cracking company in Belgium.

RESISTOFLEX is another special rubber substitute made in America by the Resistoflex corporation of Belleville, N. J. It is made by compounding polyvinyl alcohol, which is "the enol form of acetaldehyde." Resistoflex resists oil, gasoline, organic solvents, and is impermeable to oxygen, nitrogen, and hydrogen. But it dissolves in water. It is useful as a material for gasoline hose, engine washers, shock absorbers, and many mechanical parts where water is not present.

CASTO RUBBER, made by Dr. Glenn L. Casto, is compounded from ingredients made from natural gas, coal, wood, and grain. Preliminary tests have shown it to last about 15,000 miles as recapping material on tires of Washington taxicabs. Its inventor claims it would be cheap and easy to make on a large scale.

A tire sandal, made of cotton pile fabric, treated with asphalt emulsion.

FLEXON is the name of another synthetic rubber from oil derivatives, but no further information about it is now available.

Until now we have been listing chemical and mineral synthetic rubbers, but there are almost as many potential rubber substitutes that can be made in whole or part from vegetable matter.

GUAYULE RUBBER comes from a Mexican shrub. Guayule seeds are best planted in beds, and the seedlings later transplanted to fields, about 8,000 to the acre. For two years the plants need careful attention and weeding. After four or five years they are mature and "give from 1,200 to 1,500 pounds of rubber per acre." They grow best in warm, semi-arid areas as in Mexico, Texas, and California. The current shortage of seeds and the slowness of growth must prevent guayule rubber from becoming important as a substitute rubber for several years to come.

KOK-SAGYZ RUBBER comes from a Russian plant related to the dandelion. If 2⅛ pounds of seed are planted per acre in the spring in regions where there is an annual rainfall of at least 20 inches, the fall yield will be about 175 pounds of rubber per acre. Several hundred pounds of this seed was flown from Russia to the United States last May, and is now being experimented with in various parts of the country.

SORGO RUBBER is any kind of rubber in which alcohol from sorgo is used. Normally the process would be to harvest the green stalks of sorgo (sweet sorghum) and send them to the sugar mill to be made into high test molasses, which is later distilled into alcohol. The alcohol can be converted into butadiene, the principal ingredient of Buna-S rubber.

TURPENTINE RUBBER is a loose term for any kind of rubber in which turpentine is an ingredient. The turpentine is produced from the resinous sap of coniferous trees, and is made into dipentene, which can be turned into isoprene, the principal chemical in natural rubber.

PINE RUBBER was developed by Manindra C. Guha from pine tree sap by a secret process. His product, says Guha, can be adapted "to all the uses currently required for army and civilian needs, including tires, clothing, boots, golf balls, and tubing." It would be cheaper than natural rubber, he declares, and the raw material is practically inexhaustible in this country.

CRYPTOSTEGIA RUBBER can be made from the sap of cryptostegia, a tropical woody vine of the milkweed family, found in Latin America. It is reported that no method of economical extraction of the sap has yet been developed.

POINSETTIA RUBBER from poinsettia plants is considered a possibility in Australia. A test there showed that dehydrated poinsettia sap "produced 10 per cent pure rubber."

SUGAR RUBBER can be made from granulated white sugar by oxidizing it with nitric acid, mixing it mechanically with turpentine, and then polymerizing it with hydrochloric acid. When the mixture thickens the acids are neutralized with caustic soda.

SWEET POTATO RUBBER, CANE RUBBER, and PEANUT RUBBER are made by converting the carbohydrates into butadiene and methyl acrylate, and then polymerizing the two to produce "a lastic suitable for water- and oil-proofing raincoats, life rafts, balloon fabrics, and pontoons." This process was developed by Clarence R. Bitting, president of United States Sugar corporation.

MILKWEED RUBBER and GOLDENROD RUBBER have been experimented with, using the coagulated sap to produce a rubberlike material.

In addition to the above, there are rubber substitutes which use such materials as cotton. One is a COTTON-ALCOHOL PLASTIC made principally from ethyl cellulose derived from cotton linters or wood pulp, common salt, and alcohol from fermented farm produce. It is flexible at 70 degrees below zero and is good for insulation, hose, raincoats, footwear, rubber gloves, jar rings, tents, gun covers, etc. It is made by Hercules Powder company.

Another is a TIRE SANDAL made of cotton pile fabric treated with asphalt emulsion. Tests indicate that it will give 2,500 miles of wear at a maximum of 30 miles per hour, and that it will cost slightly more than ordinary recapping. It was introduced by the United States Rubber company.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS By BOB BECKER

THE DOG is not able to talk by means of words, but he can express himself pretty well by barking and growling and the use of his tail. It's helpful to the owner of a dog to have his pet bark at certain times and under certain conditions. For example, all of us like a dog that will make a noise when a stranger approaches the house or sound a warning in the middle of the night when anything out of the ordinary happens around the home. Alert dogs commonly save lives by warning their owners of thieves, fires, and other hazards.

As a rule dogs indulge in these basic types of barking: A bark that serves as a greeting to a member of the family; barking at a stranger nearing the house or door; vehement barking when the stranger reaches the door; the short, very sharp bark often heard just before a dog starts a fight; fence and front yard barking, which is much like the noise made by a dog from a car when it sees another dog; the inquiring, demanding bark and yelp (from the dog that wants attention); and the joyous bark when the dog is happy.

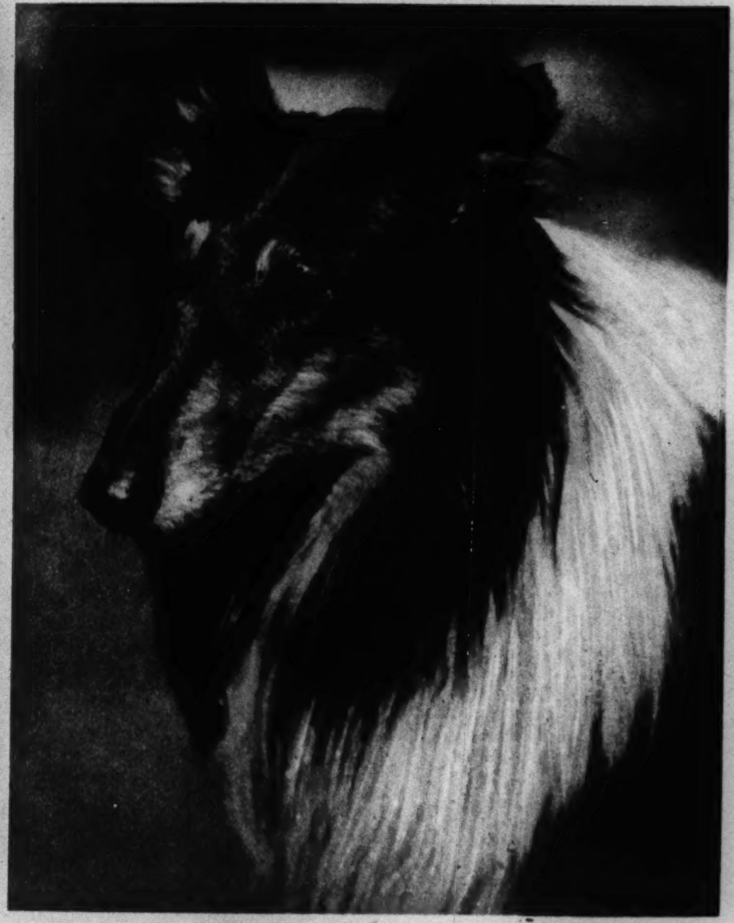
It's very interesting to own a dog that is demonstrative and expressive. We have had fun teaching one of our dogs to "talk back to us" and to speak for certain things. But it's possible to encourage a dog to be too vocal, and before long he is a noisy nuisance if not under control, because he barks at all hours and more from habit than anything else. These noisy pets often are a big problem to owners.

To keep a dog from using his voice on the slightest provocation, and to stop the nervous, high-strung pet that runs around the house barking furiously every time the bell rings, are two common variations of the noisy dog problem.

As a rule the owner starts too late to curb the barking activities of his pet. The time to launch the dog's education, so he will know that he can bark at a stranger like a true watchdog, but must keep quiet at other times, is when the dog is young. Unfortunately, too many owners let their pets become noisier and noisier without interference, and then when the animal has become a confirmed barker they seek some quick magic cure that will make the animal quiet. We wish there was some magic cure like that, but so far we haven't found it.

Tonkahof Rhumba, C. D., Dalmatian, owned by Willy Necker, Wheeling, Ill., has a record of four straight firsts in obedience tests.

Altho she was only 6 months old when she posed for this picture, this young bulldog named Queenie posed like a veteran show dog. She is owned by Gene Lawry, Downers Grove, Ill.



Long a favorite of American dog lovers, the collie is one of the most widely known breeds in this country. This beautiful study of a collie portrays a bench champion named Hertsville Highglow, owned by C. J. Casseleman and Thomas Halpin, Chicago.

Many owners write us that they have tried smacking their pets with a rolled-up newspaper to stop them from barking, but the report is that this disciplinary action fails to do any good. The dog continues to bark too much. This is not surprising, because in nine cases out of ten the excessively noisy dog is a stranger to that secret of dog manners and control—obedience.

We imagine that an untrained excessive barker reasons something like this: He's had his own way just about all the time. He won't come when he's called, because he's never been forced to do that. And when he does come back (after taking all the time he wants) the worst he gets is a scolding or a smack from a newspaper. It's easy to see why this much-loved pet can't be influenced very much by a few whacks when he barks too much. His whole line of thinking is that when he's told to do something he needn't take the command seriously, because he hasn't been taught respect for a command.

We have found in our own dogs that it's easy to teach a trained, controled pet to keep quiet and not bark excessively, because it has learned to heed a command. Our 60-pound hunting dog has the vocal cords to be heard a long distance if she barked like some dogs do. But, being trained in obedience, she stops barking when we say "No" to her. When she became a member of our family circle we spent considerable time teaching her that the warning guard dog bark is permissible, but making a lot of noise at other times is not permitted. So we can leave her in the kennel for hours, and unless some one tries to enter the garage near by or comes in the back yard she never barks. When strangers come she gives a challenging warning bark, which is exactly what she should do. We encourage that, and she has learned that we expect it, but no senseless, disturbing barking is permitted.

It's important to start training the young dog early when it can bark and when it must keep quiet. Teach the dog to be obedient, to come when called, to know the meaning of the word "no." When he barks at a stranger coming to the door, let him know that it's quite all right; take him to the front door with you a few times and make him sit down and keep quiet on your command. Soon the routine is established. The pet barks a warning, understands that is correct, but once it's done, he must cut out the unnecessary noise. This takes time and patience, but it pays dividends.

Obedience is the secret to the behavior of the dog that uses his vocal cords at the right time and for a purpose. Neglect and indulgence commonly develop a pet that is completely out of control.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

The number of color photographers has grown by leaps and bounds since the recent introduction of a new color process which makes color films available for most popular-sized cameras, and especially since amateurs began to realize that it is no more difficult to take good color pictures than it is to make snapshots on black and white film. About the only essential difference is that color film is not suitable for photographing subjects which include both very bright highlights and deep shadows, and that the film is slower than black and white films, so that it cannot be used for snapping fast action.

Two kinds of natural color film are available at the present time. So far as picture taking is concerned, both must be handled in very much the same manner. Kodachrome film is made in rolls only for 35-mm. and bantam size cameras, while the other type, Kodacolor, cannot be had for these camera sizes, but only for the larger amateur cameras, including box cameras.

In Kodachrome the developed film carries a positive image in natural color. You can hold it up against the light or project it to examine the final result. It is also possible to have color prints made on paper or some other base from the positive transparency.

On the other hand, Kodacolor is designed only for making color prints on paper. The film itself shows a color negative after development. In this negative light objects appear dark and vice versa. In addition, the colors themselves are changed, a blue sky showing as yellow and a red roof appearing as green. Only the prints made from Kodacolor film show the subjects in natural color.

Both color films give best results if the subjects are snapped in even, flat illumination. If the light comes from one side, casting deep shadows, detail in these shadows is apt to appear completely black or can be brought out only by longer exposures.

Outdoors both films give best results if the sun is back of the photographer, shining fully on the subject. Where sidelighting is used it is advisable to cast some light into the shadows with the aid of a reflecting object. Kodacolor film is designed for outdoor use and should not be employed for indoor pictures in artificial light. In the case of Kodachrome there is one type for outdoor and another type for indoor use. The reason for this is that the light itself has a definite color which it imparts to all objects. Consequently every color film has to be color-balanced for a certain kind of illumination.

For the same reason pictures taken early in the morning and late in the afternoon tend to have an orange or red overcast. The best time to take color pictures is when the sunlight has seemingly lost its color and appears white.

To get good color reproduction both types of color film have to be exposed correctly. If the exposure is too short the color in the picture will appear darker than natural. If the picture is overexposed the colors will be diluted and too light. It is best to use an exposure meter or to follow closely one of the special exposure guides available for color photography.

Striking color pictures require that your subject itself should be colorful. It is pointless to photograph essentially colorless subjects on color film. On the other hand, you should not pack your pictures indiscriminately with colors. Good taste will tell you just when you have achieved pleasing color harmony.

For outdoor shots the blue sky furnishes a generally pleasing background. When using other backgrounds, outdoors or indoors, be sure that they are well illuminated, or they will appear dark and muddy in color.

Another thing to watch for are color reflections. A red dress can cast a disturbingly strong red glow on the face of the model, and the blue sky itself is the source of unpleasant blue reflections, especially if the picture is taken in the shade. Look at your subject carefully and analyze the colors present before you snap the shutter.

Otherwise there is no difference between taking pictures in black and white and in color. True, it costs more, but the price of color is not prohibitive for most amateur budgets, and the results will justify it.

Yawns make interesting picture subjects, odd as it may seem. The success of your picture depends on the story you are able to put into it—plus at least a minimum of photographic technique. The picture of the yawning little girl is one of those lucky bedtime shots of children that always carry a lot of appeal. There is more of a story to the humorous prize-winning picture of the yawning bride. It is striking because it is so different from the usual pictures taken of brides, yet it is convincing enough to anybody who knows what the rush and the excitement of a wedding day mean.

PERFECT POEMS

The Tribune each Sunday reprints in the Graphic Section a poem selected from the works of all writers whose writing has survived the test of years.

KING HENRY'S SPEECH BEFORE THE BATTLE OF AGINCOURT

From "Henry V.," by WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

EARL OF WESTMORELAND: O, that we now had here
But one ten thousand of those men in England
That do no work today!
KING HENRY: What's he that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair cousin:
If we are mark'd to die, we are enow
To do our country loss; and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more.
By Jove, I am not covetous for gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;
It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires;
But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.
No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:
God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour
As one man more, methinks, would share from me
For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more!
Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,
That he which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart; his passport shall be made
And crowns for convoy put into his purse:
We would not die in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to die with us.
This day is call'd the feast of Crispian:
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a-tiptoe when this day is named,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He that shall live this day, and see old age,
Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbors,
And say, "Tomorrow is Saint Crispian":
Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,
And say, "These wounds I had on Crispin's day."
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,
But he'll remember with advantages
What feats he did that day: then shall our names,
Familiar in his mouth as household words,
Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,
Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.
This story shall the good man teach his son;
And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,
But we in it shall be remembered;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers;
For he today that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition:
And gentlemen in England now abed
Shall think themselves accursed they were not here,
And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

● Windmills are favorite ornaments for gardens and lawns. They should be of good design and have bearings that guarantee smooth, continuous running. Here are four practical models to build.

● Box boards cut up for the small parts of this pleasing design, and old roller-skate bearings used for the sails hub and revolving head, make a windmill inexpensive to build. The height from base to crown is 30-in., the base is 24-in. across, the sail radius is 19-in. Craft Pattern No. 218 shows complete details, some full-sized.

● This nicely proportioned Dutch Mill, with shingled framework, stands 4-ft. high. Its sails have a 30-in. radius. Its top is pivoted to keep sails headed into the wind. Detailed drawings, some full-sized, are on Craft Pattern No. 216.

● Build this fighter plane windmill and assign to it the patrol of your lawn. It is a 15-in. model completely detailed on Craft Pattern No. 217.

● Above. A toy-sized Dutch Mill, 6-in. high. It is a solid model easy to build. Full-sized patterns for parts are shown on Craft Pattern No. 217.

Josephine Flanders, who has staged a dancing comeback to entertain the soldiers.

By ROBERT CROMIE
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Honolulu, T. H.

A FORMER Chicago dancer who used to have star billing in the Chez Paree and Palmer House, as well as in Palm Beach, London, and Paris, now makes daily appearances with her own troupe hereabouts in cane fields or on mountain tops—for the USO.

She is Mrs. William Drew Flanders, whose husband is an engineer. Mrs. Flanders, the former Josephine Buckley, who quit professional dancing when she was married five years ago, was asked last January to make a group of Honolulu girls into chorines—or a reasonable facsimile thereof—to appear at army and navy posts thruout the island in place of nonexistent professional talent.

She did her job so well that the Flags of Freedom revue is the favorite USO show. It's been given before more than 200 audiences ranging from 100 to 7,000 service men, and during the first three months never repeated before the same group. The troupe, now numbering about 12, including three men, travels in jeeps, command cars, or trucks, and is welcomed to each camp like visiting royalty.

One day there may be a regular stage complete with curtain and footlights, the next a portable floor with nothing above but the sky, and the camp dog barking at the heels of the dancers. The girls get gifts and fan mail from admirers, and each has an almost complete collection of officers' insignia.

The Flanderettes, as they are known, include Kuulei and Nalani De Clerq, 14 and 16 years old, respectively; Jackie Tatum and Alyce Louis, 17; Florence Thompson, 21, a former Denverite; Gunda Reid, 22, a social worker by profession, and Sherilee Sheridan, 21. Mrs. Flanders usually dances, as does Valerie Huff, also a former professional.

Mrs. Flanders when she was Josephine Buckley, a favorite with Chicago cafe goers.

Then there is Jimmy Gable, professional comedian, who serves as master of ceremonies, and Corp. Guido Salmaggi, New York opera singer, and Corp. Arthur Keegan, Brooklyn, N. Y., a comedian, the last two made available by the army; Jack Randall, 21, a Pearl Harbor defense worker, who tap dances and does a magic act; Beatrice Ward, the piano player, and Rose Chang, 20, whose specialty is the butterfly harp.

The troupe is one of 15 or 20 kept on the road by the USO, but the girls are easily the prettiest of any show's and they're the only ones who dance American fashion. Mrs. Flanders, who used to be an Abbott dancer, has trained them well enough so that they could fit into any chorus. And she says it's even more fun than it was in the Empire room.

CHILDREN NEED POSTURE HELP, TOO!

The little girl whose balance isn't too good can learn to walk about while remaining in a deep crouch. It will keep her knees limber, loosen up her leg muscles, and improve her co-ordination.

Bending like a slim tree in the breeze. Let her pretend that she's a tall tree and a strong wind is blowing. She swings rhythmically from side to side, stretching from her fingertips to her toes.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

WITH children between the ages of three and seven it isn't the amount, it's the kind of exercise that's important if the child seems to be developing defects of posture and coördination. When small shoulders hunch forward and small spines sway in, corrective exercise is indicated; it's during those early years that correction can be accomplished easily.

One of the beauty specialists has developed special exercises for little girls and boys that will improve their gait and shape their silhouette. They're especially recommended for those whose legs and spines, while not crooked to the point of deformity, are showing signs of waywardness. Some are illustrated; in these, every muscle is held in the correct position and alternately relaxed.

They're to be done daily, supervised by a watchful mother, and the more fun they are, the better!

For the thin child whose shoulders hunch forward: First, she sits up straight as straight can be, with arms stretched high. As her arms stretch up she inhales deeply, and as she lowers them exhales with a loud "sh-h-hh." This will improve her breath control and her chest expansion.

Birds and little girls should be able to stand on one foot without losing balance! First on one and then on the other, without wabbling. It's a good co-ordinator.

At left: Sitting beneath an imaginary tree, she reaches high for an imaginary apple, then stretches forward to deposit it in an imaginary basket in front of her toes. This helps straighten small curving spines.

CODE for COLLEGIANS!

Rush week is always a bit unsettling, to say the least. There are several things we might say which will save some of you from disappointment. First of all, remember that every one you meet is on his best behavior, things are not always what they seem, and all that glitters is not gold. Look things over carefully, keep your head, and join the group whose members you like the most—provided, of course, that they want you. If the most-favored outfit doesn't see fit to ask you, don't be all broken up about it. There are others with whom you can be just as happy.

Fraternity men like to have a square deal from their rushees, too. Keep all your dates until you pledge, and wait a reasonable length of time before pledging. Wear a suit coat. Fraternity men will probably not drink with you during rush week. Don't allow yourself to be persuaded into anything which you don't feel right about. Have a good time while you can, because the great awakening after rush week is often rather rude and sudden, to say the least.

One of the things that usually make a college graduate stand out from the crowd is the social polish you now have the opportunity of acquiring. It shows up most in the small courtesies which every gentleman knows how to perform. Courtesies such as holding open one of our heavy doors, saying thank you when it is done for you, helping someone on with his coat, or speaking to the chaperons at dances. Other marks of gentlemanliness are: Rising when friends enter the room, and treating waiters and others of our all-student working class with courtesy. We could go on and on, but we think you get the drift.

BY WAY OF INTRODUCTION

One of the courses which seniors generally agree has been most helpful to them in their college career is a non-credit, lecture-less, exam-less course in the College of Extra-Curricular Activities. To enroll in this college you merely go out for some extra-curricular position on the athletic field, in a governing body, on the staff of one of the publications or join any of a number of interesting activity groups.

Whether or not you reach the goal, the experience in working toward that goal will be worthwhile.

There's not much we can say to help you over those tough scholastic hurdles. The difficulty is that you have to learn to study. Develop your will power so that you can say no to those who want to boress you when you have to study. Learn your professor as well as his course, and you will soon find out which part of the lecture material is significant and which is irrelevant for note-taking and later exams. One other thing, the best way we know of to save worrying when exams and finals roll around is to prepare your lessons every day. If you make a real habit of having every lesson prepared, you will never have to worry about exams, final or otherwise. Most of us don't do it, but you watch us sweating over them, and you'll take the easier way.

IT'S UP TO YOU

If you're willing to look ahead, you can pick any of four main roads open to you at the beginning of your college career. The first is the road of scholarship—a rough, but satisfying route to some. . . .

Another road is that circular path known as the social whirl. All of us need to take at least a few turns on this road, if only to wear off some of the rough spots. . . . The trouble with this smooth byway is that when you leave you may not have anything to show for your stay here. You might possibly be wasting money, but that's your affair, and we hope it's your cash.

Along the third highway. . . . You will become an organizer, a politician of sorts with a great feeling of power in your ability to get things done. It's a great life, but many weaken.

If you have athletic ability, you may choose an athletic career. If you are looking for fame and adulation along this road, you had better look at the map more closely before you start. It's mostly hard work, the coaches will tell you, but athletes believe the prize of real physical fitness and joy in sport is worth the price.

Our idea of the ideal path thru college is not any one of these, exclusively, but rather a judicious mixture of all of them. We would tell you, if you asked, that a policy of moderation in each of these fields will graduate you from Indiana fit for the task for which it was created to prepare you—the job of being a useful citizen of the United States.

ME AND THE MISSUS TAKE THE AFTERNOON OFF!

I'VE OFTEN THOUGHT I could tell the Missus a thing or two about raising children. My last kittens were mousing at three months . . . her teen-age Sarah still wants every meal put in front of her!

Even then daughter Sarah complains . . . hates greens in all forms. Set up a howl when the Missus suggested a salad plate for the sorority lunch.

For once, the Missus is firm. Not only is it a salad plate, but Sarah has to do the serving, herself. The Missus gets each plate ready and we walk out.

Later . . . it's dinner time. The Missus and I sneak back. And, jumping catfish, Sarah fairly purrs!

"Mother darling, that was a wonderful salad. And it was such fun serving ourselves! The girls simply raved about the salad dressing. They all want the name!"

AT THIS the Missus rallies. "Sarah, for heaven's sake, don't tell them salad dressing. Tell them it was Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise!"

"Why, Mother—I didn't know there was any difference!"

"Neither did I until—at the grocer's—a demonstrator had me taste Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise. And this is what she said:

'Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise is the home kind made with only eggs, added egg yolks, salad oil, vinegar and seasonings—no starchy filler!

'And it's really fresh—made with "FRESH-PRESS" Salad Oil, prepared each day as it's needed. That's why Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise tastes fresher even than home-made.'

"ANOTHER THING that demonstrator told me," the Missus adds, "is that you can vary Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise—make it go farther too—by adding milk or fruit juice. It contains no starchy filler, so it doesn't turn watery. Always tastes just so creamy-rich and delicious!"

PARTY SALAD 'N' SANDWICH PLATE

Salad Mold: Dissolve 1 pkg. lemon Jell-O in 2 cups hot water; add 1 tbs. vinegar and 1/2 tsp. salt. Chill. When it starts to thicken, add 3/4 cup of thinly sliced carrots and 1/4 cup of pimiento cut in pieces. Pour into individual ring molds that have been dipped in cold water. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves 6.

Arrange mold on lettuce or salad greens beside a tomato that has been quartered to within 1/2 inch of bottom and filled with Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise. Serve with a ribbon sandwich spread with a layer each of grated cheese and chopped pimiento mixed with Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise. Garnish with parsley.

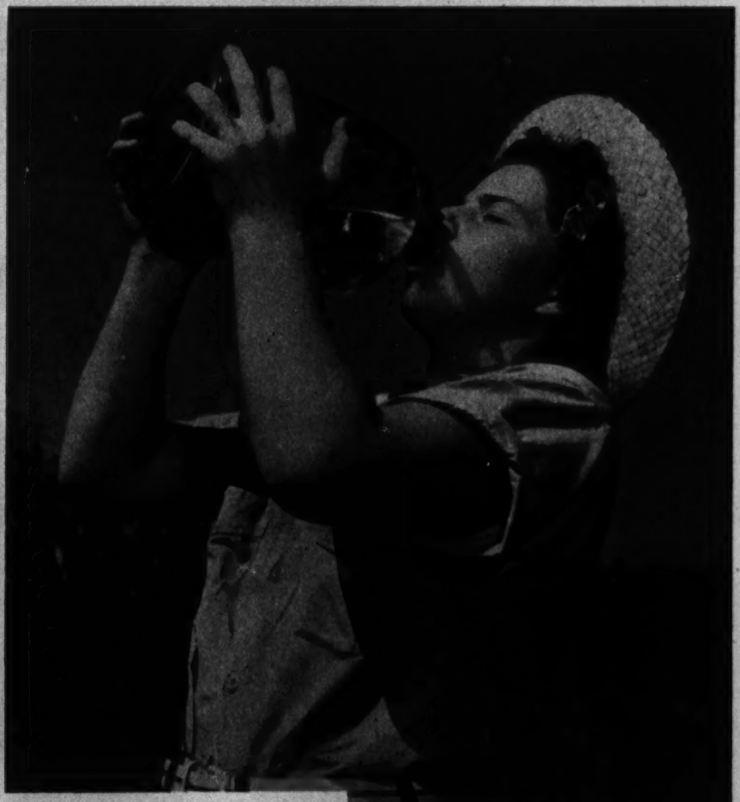
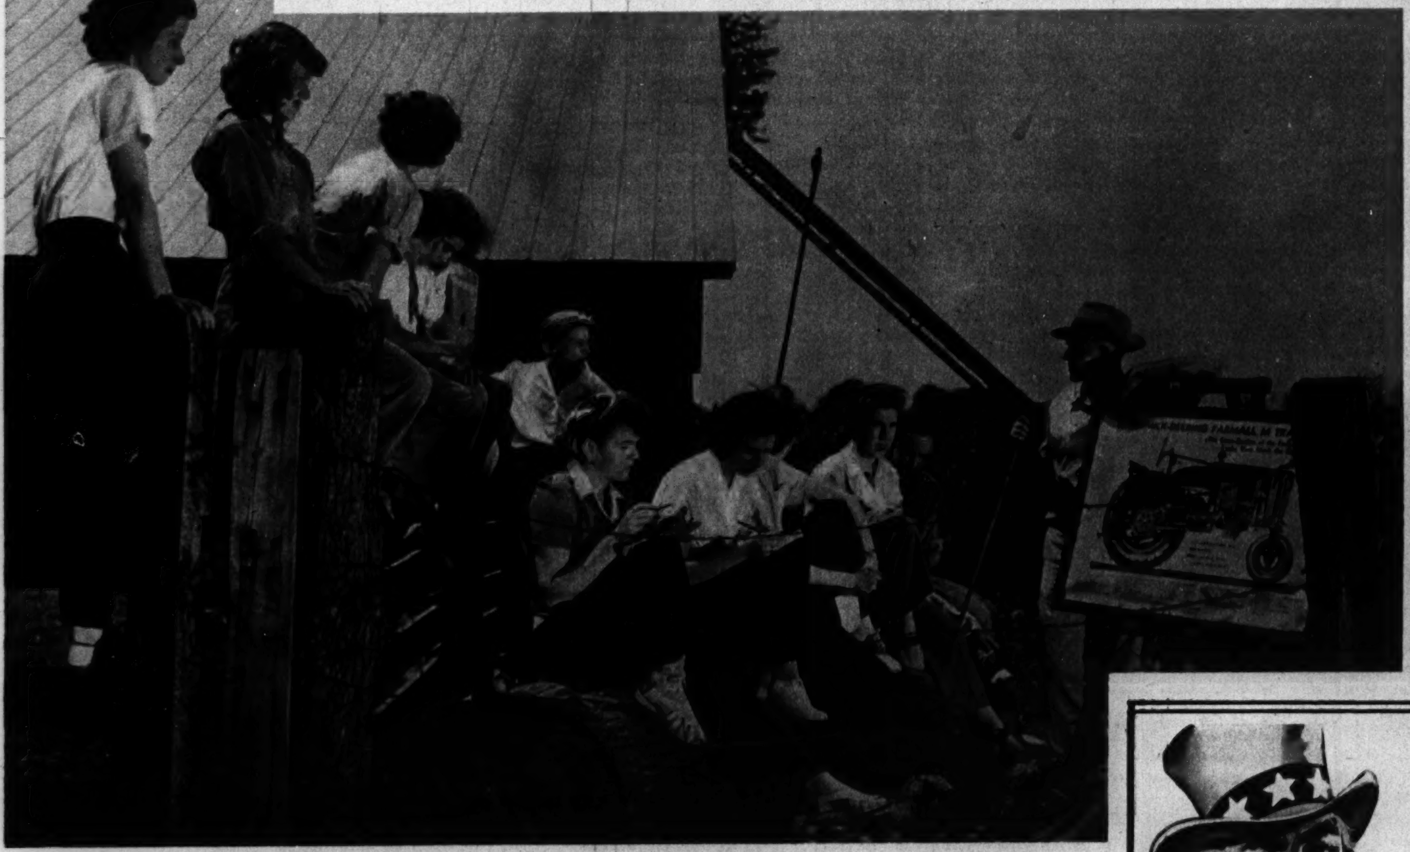
TRACTORETTES

Women and girls train to help solve the farm labor shortage

OFF TO THE FIELD LESSONS on a farm near Burlington, Ia. In this emergency-inspired training program emphasis is placed on safety first. Because loose garments are a hazard around moving machinery, the tractorettes are required to wear slacks or overalls.



REFRESHMENT — Elizabeth Stodgell, a member of the 4-H club and a sophomore in the Morning Sun (Ia.) High school, works all summer on her father's 420 acre farm.



OUTDOOR SCHOOLROOM—Whenever the weather permits, lectures are given in the open on the Roy Murphy place, the first completely mechanized farm in the corn belt. Here the instructor is Bert Niebuhr of Burlington.

Story in Graphic Section.

ANALYSIS—Al Lundstedt analyzes the mechanism of a tractor engine for Jean Bryant, Janet Wiegard, Elizabeth Stodgell, and Marjorie Bryant.

SOLO PERFORMER—Rita Wiemann, 17 years old and weighing 100 pounds, masters the intricacies of a modern juggernaut.

PEN REPAIR MATERIALS GETTING SCARCE . . . MAY SOON BE IMPOSSIBLE TO OBTAIN!

Help your pen escape wartime failure! Use this sensational NEW PROTECTIVE INK!

NEW PARKER QUINK is the only ink containing solv-x.

Eliminates the cause of most pen failures:

1. The solv-x in New Parker Quink dissolves sediment and gummy deposits left by inferior inks. Cleans your pen as it writes!

2. New Parker Quink with solv-x also prevents the damaging rubber rot and corrosion caused by strongly acid writing fluids.

● The pen that breaks down today may be out of commission for a long time. For pen repair materials are running short.

That's why Uncle Sam wants you to safeguard your pen. That, too, is why the protective new ink discovered by Parker is creating such a sensation.

It's the brilliant new Parker Quink, the only ink containing the magic ingredient solv-x!

Pen failures most often start with faulty inks, repair records show. "Right here, then, is where protection for fine pens ought to start," declare Parker scientists.

Solv-x in new Parker Quink eliminates clogging and gumming . . . flushes away the sediment resulting from inferior inks . . . keeps pens safe against the corrosion and rubber rot inevitable with inks that are strongly acid.

Let new Parker Quink with solv-x help protect your pen against wartime failure. Quink is rich and full-bodied. Dries far faster. Excellent for steel pens, too! The Parker Pen Company, Janesville, Wis.

Teenie Weenie Harvest

THE Teenie Weenie garden was a wonderful success. Never had the crops been so plentiful or the vegetables so big.

There were seven tomatoes on the tomato plant, but the Teenie Weenies used only half of one of the big tomatoes, because they ran out of Teenie Weenie jars to preserve it in. It filled 78 two-drop jars and 106 three-drop jars, and the Cook refused to use any more, as he wanted to have some left to put the Teenie Weenie apple butter in.

It took the Teenie Weenies more than two days to dig out the five carrots they wanted to store away for the Winter. They couldn't possibly eat five carrots themselves during the Winter, but they always stored three for the Rhyming Rabbit, who was old and so troubled with rheumatism that it often was difficult for him to find food during the cold, snowy weather.

The little people worked very hard getting the various vegetables out of their garden, preserving them for Winter use and storing them in the Teenie Weenie root cellar, which the little people had built near the shoe house. Teenie Weenies cannot buy food at the stores as big people do, so they are forced to store food to last through the long Winter.

It was extra hard work this year, because all the vegetables were unusually big, especially the potato. It was the largest potato the little people had ever raised, and it took them nearly a week to remove it from the ground and roll it into the root cellar.

Of course it was necessary to cut away the vine before the potato could be dug. This task required half a day with every single Teenie Weenie man working with might and main.

The huge vine was cut off with Teenie Weenie axes. Then the little men dragged it away. Next, they set to work with picks and shovels, digging down to the potatoes. Finally they uncovered one potato, and all the Teenie Weenie eyes nearly popped out of their tiny heads when they saw how big it was.

"LAWSY!" exclaimed Gogo. "Dat tater is as big as our kitchen!"

"We'll have to timber that hole," announced the Old Soldier.

"Allee same, what mean timber?" asked the Chinaman.

"Why, the potato is so big we'll have to dig a great hole around it and put boards around the sides to keep the dirt from falling in on the men who are down in the hole doing the digging," answered the Old Soldier.

As the little men dug down deeper and deeper, stout boards were braced against the sides. They dug so deep they could no longer throw the earth out of the hole. This meant that the dirt had to be put into buckets and pulled up by ropes. At last the earth was cleared away around the potato, and then came the task of raising the huge vegetable. The Old Soldier with the wooden leg is a good engineer, but it taxed his skill to manage such a tremendous task.

Finally, he rigged up a big derrick over the hole, tied a stout string around the potato and attached a heavy Teenie Weenie block and tackle to the string. After a great deal of puffing and grunting, the potato was raised and the Teenie Weenie planks were fixed under it. It was then attached to a Teenie Weenie windlass which slowly pulled it along on rollers, made of bits of old lead pencils, to the root cellar, where it was carefully stored away.

That potato was more than enough to supply the Teenie Weenies for the Winter, or as long as it would keep. Potatoes will soon spoil when the skin is broken, for the inner part of the vegetable is then exposed to the air, but the Teenie Weenies had learned how to take care of that difficult matter.

When the Cook needed potato for a meal, he would cut out a piece about as big as a navy bean, and then he would quickly seal the cut surface with hot wax. In that way the potato would last for a long time.

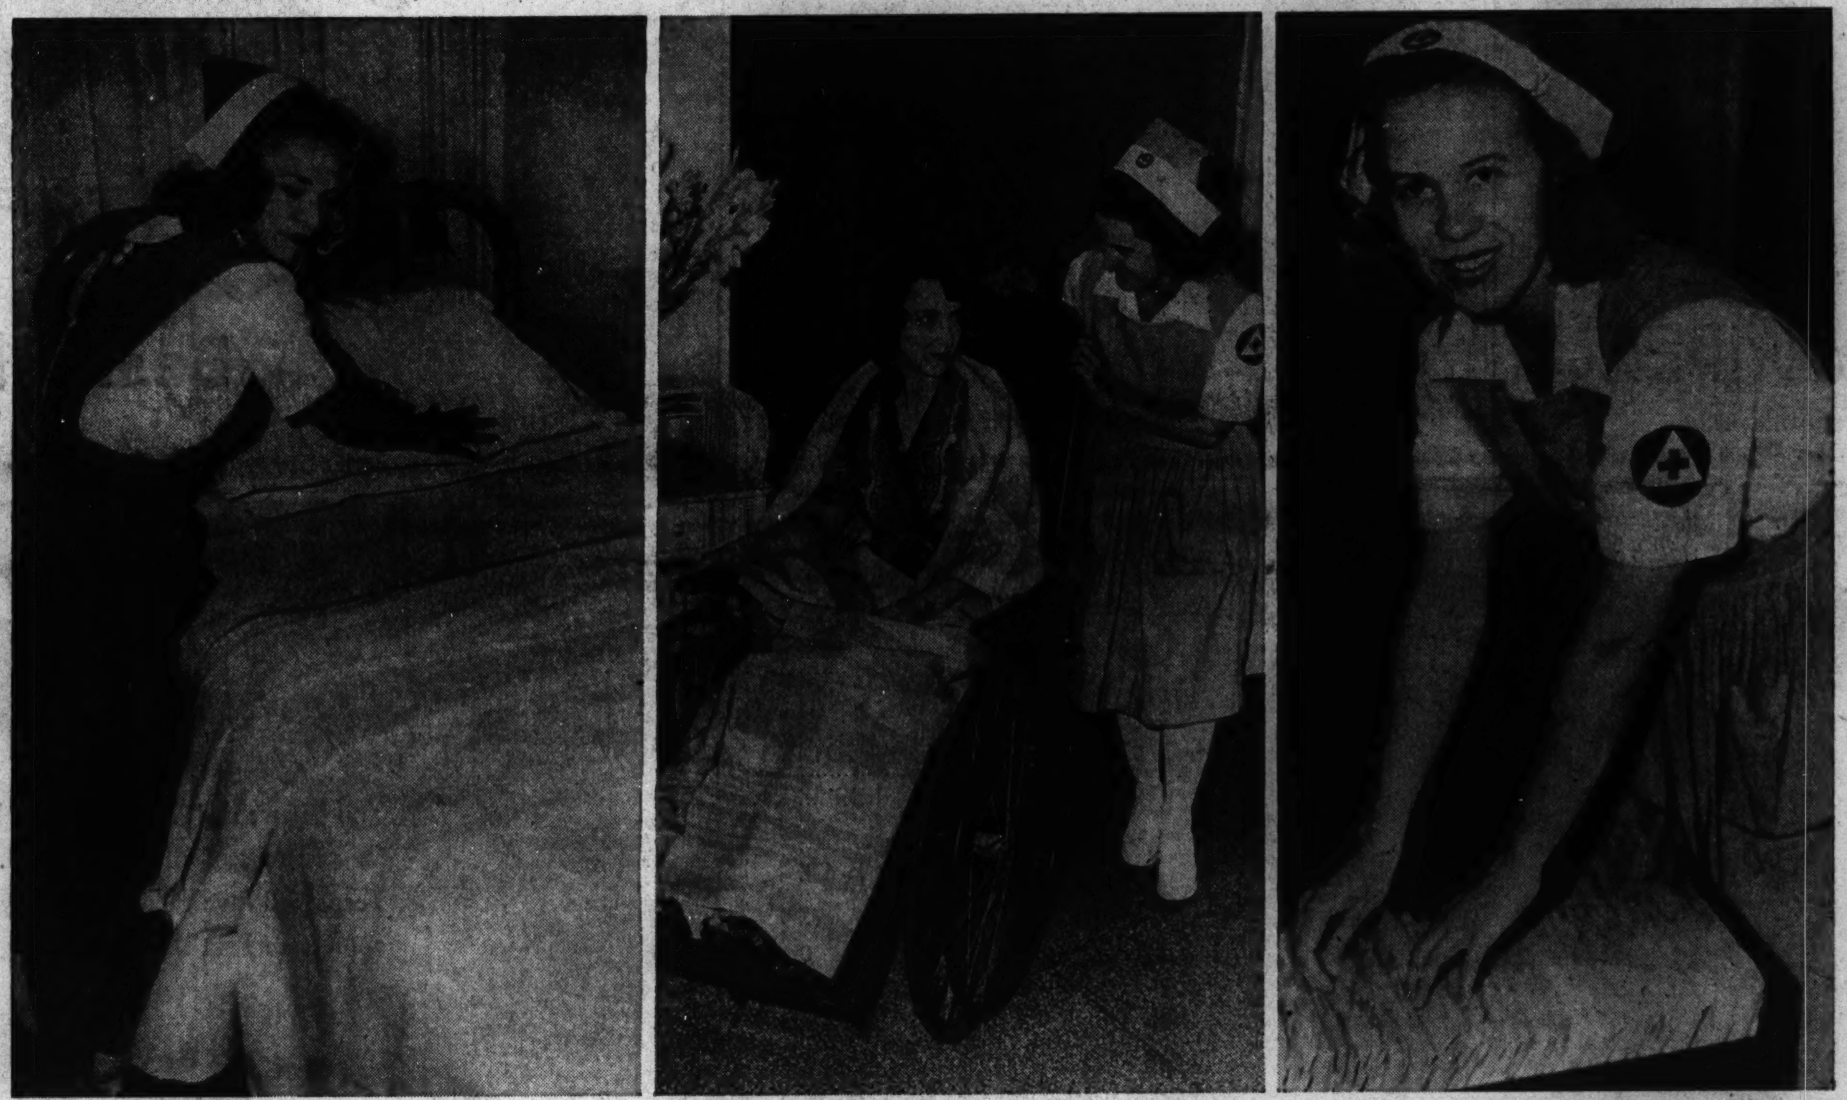
Seven Weeks of Training Prepares Nurses' Aides for Many Hospital Duties

Making a patient's bed, checks on temperatures and arranging a patient's flowers are samples of the many duties north shore women are doing these days at Evanston hospital. Thirty more recruits started their supervised hospital work last week, training to be nurses' aides. After seven weeks of classroom instruction, demonstrations and ward duties these women will be qualified nurses' aides and will volunteer two days a week in hospitals, clinics, and medical agencies in their communities. At the left, Mary, the life size dummy, is the patient while Miss Barbara Leffingwell of Evanston makes a bed. In the center Mrs. Berrien Tarrant of Wilmette knows the psychological effect of a cheerful smile while taking her patient's temperature. Nursing is fun to Mrs. Robert M. Buchanan of Evanston when she can arrange nice bouquets of flowers for her patients. On her sleeve is the Red Cross and civilian defense insignia, the organizations sponsoring the volunteer nurses' aides program,



The addition of nurses' caps to their uiforms indicates these women are full fledged nurses' aides. They have completed their seven weeks of training and are now volunteering two days a week. Others from their group are working in the various north side hospitals, clinics, and medical agencies and will be on call for emergency first aid stations. At the left Miss Edith Applegate of Evanston turns down a bed for a patient. Miss Grace Parks of Glencoe, center, wheels a patient from her room to a nearby sunroom and at the right Miss Charlotte Schafer of Glencoe helps to keep the hospital records in order. These aides do not administer medicine or apply sterile dressings, but they do many of the routine duties which nurses formerly did.

Swell Total of 900 Recruits in City.

Thirty more north shore young women last week joined the ranks of volunteer nurses' aids, swelling the group of more than 900 recruits in Chicago who have pledged their services for the duration of the war. After seven weeks of training in the simple procedures of nursing at Evanston hospital they will donate two or more days each week to assisting in hospital wards, clinics, and OCD emergency medical units on the north side.

Many of the trainees are married. They are all between the ages of 18 and 50 years and most of them have not had any previous training or practice as nurses. Some leave families at home and others are social leaders who are foregoing their garden fêtes, bridge luncheons, and parties. They are all joining forces to help win the war.

Four weeks of classroom instruction is followed by three weeks of practical work in the hospital wards. After that there are oral and written examinations. The successful completion of this 85 hour course merits them the rank of nurses' aids. Their reward is a neat little blue nurse's cap which completes their uniforms of blue drindl jumpers and white blouses. On their sleeves are the Red Cross and civilian defense insignia, the joint sponsors of the nurses' aids training program.

Learn Care of Patient.

The nurses' aids are not allowed to give medicines nor apply sterile dressings but they learn all about the care of a patient and what to do in an emergency. They learn the basic fundamentals of wholesome nutrition, how to feed a patient and make his bed. They are required to take a course in first aid and to study medical ethics, one of the most important preparatory courses in a nurse's training.

Practical in every way, nurse aid recruits at Evanstaon learn by doing. Life size dummies, called Mary and Mrs. Chase, are used in teaching them to make a bed occupied by a patient. They use many other devices in learning other procedures.

Evanston and Wesley Memorial are the only north side hospitals training nurses' aids. After their training the aids may be transferred for service to other hospitals or clinics in or near their communities. Other north side hospitals enlisting the volunteer service are Grant, Henrotin, Passavant, Ravenswood, and St. Francis of Evanston.

Red Cross Nurses in Charge.

Two Red Cross nurses are in charge of the training at Evanston. Mrs. R. E. Naylor is the classroom instructor and Mrs. L. H. Lippincott supervises the work in the hospital wards. After completing their training the aids are asked to volunteer 12 hours of work a week with six hours at a shift.

Evanston hospital has graduated two classes and is now beginning its third. A total of 380 trainees are now in classrooms or under hospital supervision thruout the city. They will increase the total aids in the metropolitan area to more than 1,300.

The volunteer nurses' aid program was started in the first World war and revived again this year when so many registered nurses were sent to care for the American soldiers. OCD division 9 recently asked that 250 recruits volunteer. Every OCD block captain in division 9 was asked by the Chicago headquarters to turn in at least two nominations for nurses' aids from his block.

Interviewed by OCD.

These nominees are interviewed by the local OCD offices. If they meet the requirements there they are referred to the Red Cross headquarters at 616 South Michigan avenue, Chicago, where final acceptance has to be made. Volunteers also may submit their applications at the Red Cross headquarters.

Nurses aids must be citizens of the United States and high school graduates and must pass a physical examintaion.

EVANSTON CLUB FETE TO BENEFIT MISSION IN INDIA

The annual card party for the benefit of the Patna mission in India will be given at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday in the Evanston Woman's clubhouse at Church street and Chicago avenue. The party is sponsored by Mrs. George Ludwig, 7526 North Damen avenue, whose son, the Rev. Robert Ludwig, is head of the missions.

A number of north shore women have been assisting Mrs. Ludwig this summer in arranging for the annual bridge benefit. The committees include: Mrs. Peter McCall, Mrs. Hector Pinsonnault, Mrs. Arthur Johnson, and Mrs. Francis Muench, table prizes; Mrs. Frank Gibbons, Mrs. William Otter, Mrs. Fred Becker, and Mrs. Joseph Kutten, door prizes; Mrs. Harry Bettinghaus, Mrs. Patrick Kirwan, Mrs. Frank Oelerich, Mrs. Frank Thale, and Mrs. Leslie Volege, tickets and reservations.

Others are Mrs. Arthur Boylston, Mrs. Edwin Georger, Mrs. George Beaudin, and Mrs. Irving Porter, white Elephant sale, and Mrs. Arthur Adams, Mrs. George Steele, Mrs. George Bassler, and Mrs. Wallace Moore, refreshments.

Mother, Sons Go 13 Miles to Make a Garden

Mrs. Ruth Eckert, whose address is 2746 North Hoyne avenue, in the Julia Lathrop housing project, recommends a war garden not only for the produce it offers, but almost more important, for the philosophical and physical benefits the gardener obtains.

Mrs. Eckert, a widow with two sons, Edward, 16, and Allen, 11, became a gardener for the first time in her life last spring. Allen had spent the 1941 summer on a farm and talked of little else in the months that followed. When Mr. and Mrs. Austin Rexroat of Melrose park said Mrs. Eckert could have a plot of land, 50 by 100 feet, for a war garden, Allen pitched right in to help and continued to weed and hoe all summer. He and his mother are now harvesting the fruits of their labor in the form of tomatoes, corn, cucumbers, beans, and rutabagas.

Cans 200 Quarts.

Not only are they eating the fresh vegetables which they otherwise would have had to buy but they are storing a full winter's supply of wholesome food. Mrs. Eckert has canned 200 quarts of vegetables and expects to preserve more before her garden is depleted.

Early in the spring Mrs. Eckert, a former nurse, was suffering from ill health and was unable to work and support her family. A summer in the fresh air and working in the soil has made her strong again and able to tackle almost any task.

The garden is 13 miles from the Eckert home. Their mode of transportation is by street car for eight miles and by foot the other five. The produce is brought home in market baskets and on days when the harvest is particularly heavy they almost always get a ride from a neighbor or motorist at least to the street car line.

New Life in Work.

Victory gardening has its just rewards, the mother of two young husky boys, believes. It can spell victory in more ways than one. Its wholesome food builds strong bodies. The sunshine and fresh air to which one is exposed gives a new lift in the mind and spirit. Victory gardening is a new lease on life, Mrs. Eckert says.

SPALDING HIGH MOTHERS OPEN YEAR TOMORROW

The Spalding High school Mothers' club will meet at 1 o'clock Tuesday, in the school at Washington boulevard and Ashland avenue. The school will be in charge of Miss Celestine Igoe, director of high and elementary schools; Miss Alice Donaldson, assistant to the director in charge of academies; and Mrs. Rose Rudolph, assistant to the director and in charge of physiotherapy.

The board of directors includes Miss Igoe, Mrs. Rose Rudolph, Mrs. Samuel Baum, Mrs. R. P. Weichbrod, Mrs. John Kram, Mrs. Thomas Graveneitis, Mrs. Andrew Andresen, and Miss Clara Reimer.

YWCA Names North Siders to Winter Camp Council

Sonia Kramer, 6920 Sheridan road, and Cynthia Olson, 2020 Sherman avenue, Evanston, have been selected to represent the YWCA high school girls on a city-wide winter camp council. They will make plans for the annual summer camp at Camp Sagawu, near Lemont.

LINCOLN SQUARE OCD TO HOLD WAR GARDEN FESTIVAL

Award Prizes at Event Friday at River Park.

Final event in the 1942 war garden program of the Lincoln Square OCD community will be the fall festival beginning at noon Friday and continuing thru the evening in the River park clubhouse, 5100 North Francisco avenue.

Gardeners of the neighborhood will attend in their summer gardening costumes to watch the expert judging of their vegetables, their flowers, and the jars of canned food which came out of their gardens. During the evening they'll join in barn dancing and examine the prize winning produce and canned food.

Service Men Invited.

More than 1,000 persons in Division 6 are expected to attend the festival, according to Mrs. J. P. Sterling, the community war garden chairman. Among them will be army men in school at Leavitt street and Lawrence avenue. Sailors from the Howard street service men's center have been invited.

After the event Mrs. Sterling and her committee plan to distribute the vegetables on display to the Swedish Covenant Old People's home and the Lawrence Hall for Boys.

During a dancing intermission in the evening members of the Chicago WPA Operetta company from the war services program of the Illinois Music project will present specialty numbers ranging from humorous skits to serious music. Twenty singers will be accompanied by a seven piece orchestra.

List Contest Judges.

Judging the canning contest will be Mrs. Alfreda Kukowski of the home service division of the Peoples Gas and Light company. A committee, composed of Rudolph Mohr and Arthur Jackson Jr., junior horticulturists of the park district, and Frank C. Klein, president of the Vegetable Growers of America, will select vegetable and flower winners.

Expected to be in attendance at the festival are George T. Donoghue, director of war gardens in the Chicago metropolitan area; Fred G. Heuchling, secretary of the metropolitan war garden committee; Mrs. Herman C. Lammers, co-chairman of war gardens in Division 6, and Ald. Frank O. Hilburn [47th].

Members of Mrs. Sterling's committee are Nicholas F. Schleiter, Kenneth Large, Fritz Mai, and Mrs. Susan Schmitt.

Miss Holly Husted of Evanston, left, and Miss Schafer are recent graduates of the nurses' aides training program at Evanston hospital. They are wearing the blue and white uniforms of the aides.

DAHLIA GROWERS OPEN WINNETKA SHOW SATURDAY

Specimen Blooms to Vie in 2 Day Exhibit.

Hundreds of single white dahlias, miniature dahlias, a galaxy of large double dahlias in rainbow shades of red and yellow—these will greet the visitors to the eighth annual dahlia show Saturday and next Sunday in the Douglas Smith Memorial gymnasium of Winnetka's Community house.

Sponsored by the American Gardeners association, the show will feature flower arrangements as well as specimens. An estimated 400 gardeners from the north shore will exhibit their dahlias.

Arrangement Classes.

In the arrangement division will be nine classes, including such exhibits as dahlia dining room centerpieces and dahlias in the exhibitor's favorite container. There will be eight classes in the specimen division running from those who have up to 20 varieties to exhibit down to those amateurs with only one variety.

Mrs. O. W. Dynes and Mrs. Paul Magnusen will judge the arrangement classes, while competent judges will be supplied by the Central States Dahlia society to select winners in the specimen classes.

Thomas Simpson of Highland Park is chairman of the show and Henry Carstensen secretary.

Garden Club Aids.

Coöperating with the association are Mrs. Morton D. Cahn, North Shore Garden club; Mrs. Arthur Fathauer, Ravinia Garden club; Mrs. Montague Ferry, Mrs. Alice Miller, Mrs. W. C. Moffat, Mrs. Stephen Gregory Jr. and Mrs. Alva Small, Winnetka Garden club; Mrs. Waldo Gundlach, Mrs. Donald Jones and Mrs. W. Lindsay Suter, Winnetka Weeders; Mrs. John Gary, Lake Forest Garden club; Mrs. Lyle Harper, Winnetka Woman's club; Mrs. Louis E. MEN'S GARDEN CLUB OF HIGHLAND PARK HOLDS HARVEST FETE

One hundred eighty men suburban gardeners on the north shore have had a busy summer tending their gardens the victory way. Fruits of their labor are now on exhibit at the Moraine hotel in Highland Park. The exhibit is the third annual flower show of the Men's Garden club which this year has branched into a harvest festival as well.

The two day war garden show and harvest festival which closes at 5 o'clock tonight is primarily a food show with flowers as a sideline. In addition to the exhibits of the club members approximately 300 Highland Park families, including a group of junior war gardeners, have added their displays of fruits and vegetables.

With emphasis on the national slogan, "Food Will Win the War," the show features an exhibit of canned goods loaned by state institutions which preserve produce from their farms. The exhibit was arranged by Christine B. Pensinger, state home economist. There also is a demonstration of how to can and dry fruits and vegetables. The artistic arrangement of the show was planned by Jens Ericksen and William H. Sabin, commercial artists who garden in their spare time. J. David Dickinson is chairman of the show committee and others working with him are Irving Meyerhoff, C. Eugene Pfister, club president; Dougall Kittermaster, Edson Rice, Mortimer Schamberg, and Alfred C. Houser.

HOPES ARE HIGH AS RACES OPEN ON NORTH SIDE

Seek Safe Majority at Springfield.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Republicans in the north section this week will launch their legislative campaign on what looks to them like a ground swell sweeping on to victory on Nov. 3. They are out to increase their holdings in the senate and house at Springfield to give them practical working majorities.

In 1938 the G. O. P. regained nominal control of the house, 79 to 74. This slight margin was retained in 1940, when a majority also was achieved in the senate, 28 to 23. These leads were not entirely effective after death and illness marred the 1941 session. Further complications were introduced by a few "river ward" Republicans who proved amenable to Democratic pressure when put to the test by roll calls.

Chance for Republicans.

Odd-numbered legislative districts elect senators this year, plus three other districts having vacancies. The break favors Republicans in Cook county, where 13 Democratic senators find their terms expiring, against only three G. O. P. senators. This plenitude of targets encourages the Green administration, which was handicapped in its first legislative session.

Five north section senators wind up their terms, and three of them are Democrats, in the 25th, 29th, and 31st districts. Republican terms expire in the 1st and 7th districts.

There are chances for five house seats to change parties in the north section. Each district elects three representatives. Republicans will try to regain the odd house seat in the 25th and 29th districts, while Democrats take up a similar offensive in the 1st, 6th, and 31st districts.

In the other districts of this section—the 7th and 8th—there are no contests for the house seats. By agreement of local senatorial committees, the nominees also won virtual election in the April primaries. The north section has fewer such "setups" than in former years, however.

Following are previews of the campaigns in the north section:

FIRST DISTRICT

[Parts of Wards 1, 2, and 11.]

Hobart E. Neff, the former Midway footballer, now a securities executive, is the Republican nominee against Lawrence E. Dowd, Democratic choice and defense attorney in "1,001" horse race handbook cases. Neff overthrew the incumbent, nominally a Republican, Sen. Daniel A. Serritella, in the primary when William E. King's 2d ward regulars joined forces with the business men's committee. Few observers will be surprised to encounter a Serritella comeback in some form.

Teams making the house race are Rep. Ernest A. Greene and Edward A. Welters, Republicans, and Rep. Daniel A. Flannigan and Corneal A. Davis, Democrats.

SIXTH DISTRICT

Rep. Alan E. Ashcraft Jr., who is Evanston township Republican committeeman, is teamed with Stanley C. Armstrong of Chicago in the house race. The G. O. P. took two out of three seats in 1940, ending several years of Democratic success, but one winner, Rep. James J. Barbour of Evanston, retired because of ill health.

Republican leaders say that Ashcraft and Armstrong are certain winners unless the vote is divided between them so unevenly that both Democrats get in as a result.

Democratic contenders are Rep. Charles H. Weber and former Rep. George H. Smith, brother of Clayton F. Smith, president of the county board. Weber commonly runs so far ahead of his teammate that the party suffers a net loss—a lesson to the Republicans.

The district senate seat is not at stake this year.

SEVENTH DISTRICT

[Most country townships of Cook county.]

His G. O. P. backers see little chance for the Democrats to upset Sen. Arthur J. Bidwell this year. However, the district's new residents employed in war plants are a new political factor. Bidwell was elected in 1936, ousted in notorious proceedings by the Democratic controled senate, and reëlected in 1938.

Mack D. Falknor of Morton Grove is the Democratic senate entry. He was unopposed in the primary.

There is no house contest.

EIGHTH DISTRICT

[Lake, McHenry, and Boone counties.]

There is no contest over the house seats, and the senate election here is in 1944.

TWENTY-FIFTH DISTRICT

[Wards 34, 35, 39, and 40, parts of Wards 32, 33, 36, 38, 41, 45, 47, and 50.]

Frederick B. Resag is backed for the senate by John T. Dempsey, the youthful chairman of the Cook county Republican committee, who realizes the value of a single addi-

CONTEST AMONG PET DOGS OPENS NEXT SATURDAY

Pedigreed and just plain dogs will be on a par as children gather with their pets in parks thruout the city beginning next Saturday and continuing until a final show and the crowning of a grand champion Saturday afternoon, Sept. 26, at Waveland field in Lincoln park at the end of Addison street. The final show will climax national dog week.

Shows will be held in Green Briar and Welles parks at 4 p. m. Thursday, Sept. 24, under sponsorship of the Chicago Anti-Cruelty society, the park district and local clubs and individual dog enthusiasts.

Robert Finn, Green Briar park supervisor, has charge of show arrangements there. Mrs. G. L. Hicks will be chief judge and H. G. Misener, veterinary, will donate his service. Emanuel Schwartz, Welles park supervisor, will be assisted by Mrs. Janet Henneberry of Glenview, chief judge and C. K. Kahn, veterinarian.

Five awards will be given in each of four classes, with the award winners to be eligible for the final competition. There the grand champion will receive a crown and class champions will get plaques.

The awards will be not for blue blood, but for [1] the best groomed dog, [2] the best trick dog, judged on difficulty of the maneuvers and expertness with which they are executed, [3] best pet combination, considering obedience of dogs and evidence of understanding and friendship between it and its master, and [4] best informed owner.

One hundred questions and answers about dog care are posted at the parks for owners to study.

In the local shows William McNurney of Fox River Grove and the Red Star auxiliary of the Anti-Cruelty society of Chicago will give demonstrations.

CLUB PROGRAMS FIND TOPICS IN CHANGING WORLD

Turn from Home Themes to Troubled Globe.

While men scoffed, women banded together and formed the National Federation of Women's Clubs. That was 52 years ago and the beginning of a new era of feminine independence.

The club programs are still announced as literature, drama and talks but the subject matter is difference. From topics of the home and children to those of world affairs has been the trend.

"We are becoming less feminine and more worldly in our thoughts," says Mrs. Edward A. King, 1901 Farwell avenue, a charter member of the Rogers Park Woman's club, an affiliated group which celebrated its golden anniversary last year. "Clubs have passed the time when women vied for honors on their individual treatises on the care of the home, the merits of English literature or criticism of Chopin's music. Now we try to obtain speakers who are authorities on national and international affairs.

Formed in Stirring Times.

While the government was wrestling with the taril problem and the silver issue in 1891, the Rogers Park Woman's club was formed and became one of many small women's gatherings which were organizing all over the country. The McKinley tariff act had been passed; there was a landslide for the Republicans. Others wanted a graduated income tax, government ownership of public utilities and a return of the government to the "plain people."

The panic of 1893 came. The United States was approaching war with Spain. There was much labor dissension and in Chicago the Pullman Car company strike led to sympathetic strikes in 27 states.

The Rogers Park Woman's club was talking about "Women in the Past and Present," "The Government of Children," "Mothers of Great Men," and "Influence of Climate Upon Character of Men. One meeting was concerned with equal rights but it was followed immediately by a program on folklore.

In 1899, eight years after the club was organized, the Rogers Park women had their first paid speaker. The speaker was a woman who talked on "Why Women Should Study Domestic Science." Other topics that year included Illinois Child Aid society, women's work in hospitals, American lyric poets, and "Henry James' Opinions of Americans."

Vote Against Suffrage.

Shortly after the turn of the century the Rogers Park Woman's club voted on a municipal suffrage petition with 31 in favor and 42 against it. Later, however, in 1909, the club carried a banner in a city-wide suffrage parade. Members were making visits to the Helen Health settlement and launched their departments of home, education, and public welfare.

One of the highlights of the year 1900 was a debate on: "Resolved that charity which merely relieves distress tends to create poverty and is not true philanthropy." In 1902 the club women had three analytical Wagner recitals. A parliamentary law class was held in 1905, and George Ade, Hoosier humorist, was one of the club's guests that year. His visit was followed up with programs on some principles of art criticism and moral training of girls.

While war clouds were gathering over Europe and finally breaking in all their fury, the clubwomen were discussing the work of the Juvenile Protective association, the high cost of living, gardens in the home and English pronunciation. In 1916 they were busy laying the corner stone of their clubhouse at 7077 North Ashland avenue. They also discussed civic problems and "The Immigrant" that year.

Other War Curtails Programs.

Because of war all cultural programs were curtailed in 1917, the year the club celebrated its 25th anniversary. The clubwomen confined their time to Red Cross work, war gardens, and studies on food conservation. They also helped obtain the Rogers Park branch of the Chicago public library.

In 1918 and 1919 when the world was concerned with the Armistice and terms of the treaty the northside clubwomen were busy helping the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs present a pageant of Illinois history in the Auditorium theater of Chicago. They also talked about American morale in France, "the Transplanted Charm of the East," and suffrage progress.

The 1920's was an era of afterwar readjustment. The United States had said no to the League of Nations and joined in the disarmament movement. It was the days of prohibition, gradual decrease in income taxes and the end of the fabulous wages of war days.

The Rogers Park Woman's club was urging its members to register and vote. They began to sit in on sessions of the school board, the city council, and courts, especially the Juvenile court.

"Drama as a Social Force."

Then came 1929. It was hailed in with the usual fanfare and merrymaking. The people were little prepared for the stock market debacle which was to come. One club program was devoted to the international relationship of the United States.

Faint rumblings of a new storm brewing over Europe and the far east could be heard in the 1930s. There was the new Russian five year plan which the club studied in 1933. This was coupled with such subjects as the "Holy Land of Today."

Later in the decade Spain was in the throes of a civil war. Japan was waging war on China, Italy was invading Ethiopia, and Hitler was gaining followers in German. In 1935 the Rogers Park Woman's club heard a talk on "Keeping Ahead of the Headlines," and another address on "What We Can Learn from Dictatorship." This was followed a year later by a talk on "A Newspaperman Looks at Japan."

The club has heard many authorities in the last few years. With many of the club member's husbands and sons in the armed forces their attention is being focused more and more on world affairs. They are hearing lectures on everything from the woman's place in war to the problems of inflation and price ceilings. Among the important speakers this year will be Maj. Alexander De Seversky, author of "Victory Thru Airpower," and Gen. Riley of the Riley Bucks in the Rainbow division of the first World war.

The pendulum may swing back after the war, but at present literature, drama, and music are only a supplement to lectures which make up the principal portion of the Rogers Park Woman's club programs.

THERE'S PLENTY OF WORK AHEAD FOR SOCIAL AIDS

First Group Now Ready to Help Charities.

No uniforms or buttons will distinguish home front workers reporting for service to the Volunteer bureau of the Council of Social Agencies, says Mrs. Maryan A. Leary, bureau director. Hard work will be their lot, and from that will come their compensation—knowledge that they are helping their fellow Chicagoans.

Aim of the newly organized bureau is to train and place volunteer workers in social agencies hard pressed because of the war for additional staff members and for funds.

Last Friday more than 100 volunteers, including many north side men and women, became eligible for placement at the end of a three day indoctrination period at bureau headquarters, 219 South La Salle street. A similar class will receive training during the first week in October.

Duties Are Many.

Helping in defense nurseries or child care centers—teaching dancing, swimming, crafts, and household arts to teen age children, and nutrition to their mothers—working in the libraries or offices of community centers—these are among the essential tasks graduates of the course will perform.

Already seven agencies on the north and northwest sides of Chicago have placed their bids for workers. Emerson house, 645 North Wood street, a neighborhood center, needs library assistants, aids for the nursery school, and leaders for its educational classes and clubs.

Miss Florence K. Weld, head resident of the house, states her need for more workers is urgent. "In the past we have had only two or three children of working mothers who must be cared for all day. Now there are 25, and the number increases every week."

Need to Increase.

She points out that in addition to expanding the nursery school, the center must soon provide care for children of kindergarten age who return from public school at noon.

The Chicago Commons, 955 Grand avenue, echoes this same need. Its director, Miss Lea D. Taylor, says that without volunteers it would be impossible for the Commons to serve the number of children seeking entrance. She adds that possessing a variety of skills is important. Particularly is the ability for telling stories well an invaluable asset for a volunteer to bring to the work.

Mrs. Kathryn De Puy, head of the North Avenue Day nursery, 2023 Pierce avenue, reports that there, too, they are experiencing the same difficulties.

From Olivet institute, 1441 Cleveland avenue, comes a request for all types of workers. Robert S. Harvey, director, needs clerical help, case workers, club leaders, day nursery aids, group activity leaders, and receptionists.

Salvation Army Plea.

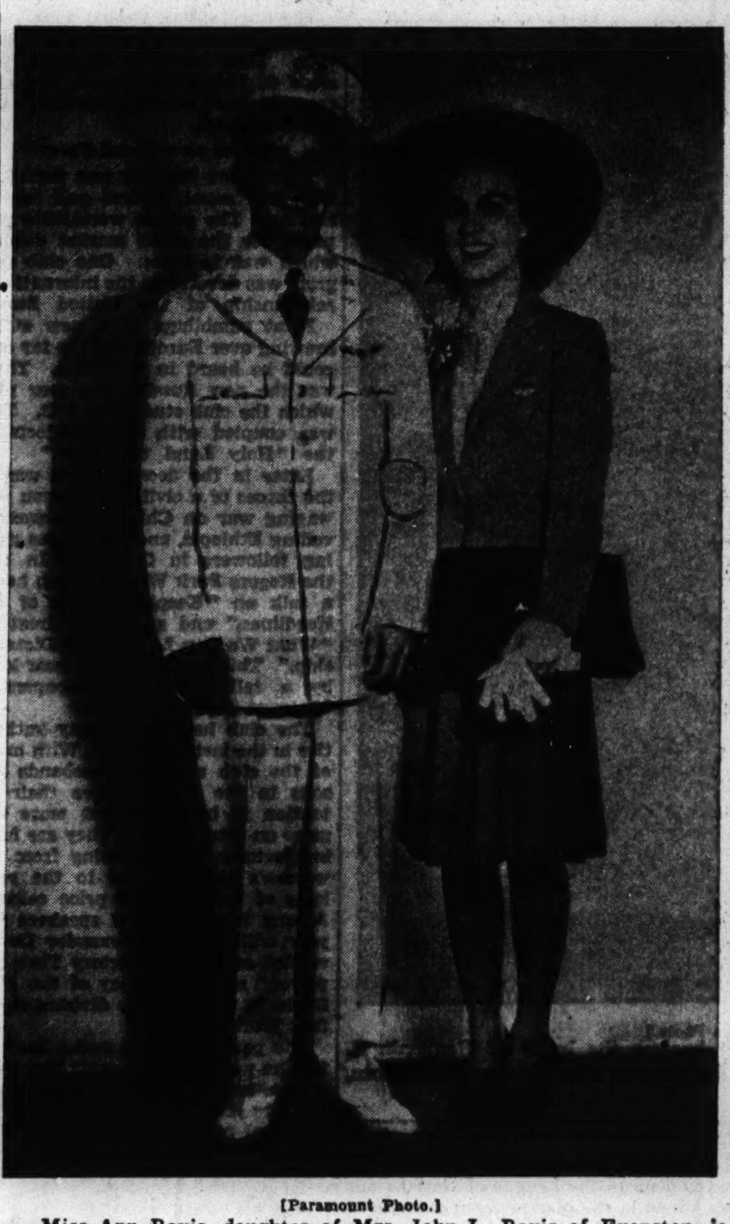
The Salvation Army free dispensary can use "as many hospital and clinical aids as you can send us," writes Miss Goldie Pugh, director. Located at 713 North State street, it offers general medical, surgical, and dental work to all Chicagoans unable to pay for these essential services. Army's Family Service with headquarters in the same building needs case work aids, clerical workers, and persons skillful in repairing toys to be distributed during the Christmas season.

Application for assistance also has been made by the Margaret Etter Creche community center at 2116 West Chicago avenue. Day nursery aids and club leaders are its greatest needs.

Working in coöperation with the Council of Social Agencies on the Volunteer bureau are the Office of Civilian Defense, the Chicago Recreation commission, and the WPA.

Chairman of the advisory committee of the bureau is Mrs. William M. Collins Jr., 2644 North Lake View avenue. Members of bureau committees are Mrs. Dorothy Brown, 1255 North State street; Miss Mary Murphy, 1001 North Dearborn; Mrs. John Lewis, Evanston; Mrs. Frances Logan, Wilmette, and Miss Elizabeth Alexander, 37 East Schiller street.

Married in Albuquerque



[Paramount Photo.]

Miss Ann Bovis, daughter of Mrs. John L. Bovis of Evanston, is the bride of Lieut. Roy Perry Northern Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Northern of Lebanon, Tenn. The couple was married in the rectory of the Immaculate Conception church in Albuquerque, N. M., near where Lieut. Northern recently received his wings in the army air corps.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 14

It is time to complete lawn making if the young grass is to survive the severe winter weather without injury. First consideration should be given the soil; it should be in good tilth, filled with humus and food, well drained, and thoroly prepared. Most city yards lack humus. If a new lawn is to be made buy manure, if possible, and spread a layer over the ground before spading. If manure is not to be had buy a bag or two of shredded cattle manure and use it in the same manner.

Break up the soil while spading. Rake the surface thoroly. Buy high grade seed mixture and sow at the rate of a pound to about 250 square feet. A fairly heavy roller can roll in the soil, but this can be done after the grass has developed an inch or more.

Tuesday, Sept. 15

Growing perennial flowering plants in shade is dependent on the kind selected. Here are a few that are recommended when the shade is not too dense: Beebalm, Virginia bluebell, sedum, plantain lily, meadowrue, lily-of-the-valley, forget-me-not, ferns [plant more ferns, for they make a lovely effect], columbine, bugle, goutweed, monkshood, daylily, and foxglove, which is grown as a perennial, but is really a biennial.

Wednesday, Sept. 16

It is time to lift and pot all plants that are intended for indoor culture. An early frost is predicted, but in any case such plants as the poinsettia should be removed indoors before cooler nights come. Give them full sunlight and never permit the soil to dry out.

Lift some of the smaller annuals that are showing buds, pot them, and they will give flowers in the window for a long time. Geranium cuttings should be made when the stems are firm, not soft. They root easily in coarse sand or sandy soil, and are shifted into pots as they become root bound. Geraniums flower best in rather small pots.

Plants that have been flowering in outdoor beds during the summer will not flower during the winter. Buy started plants for winter blooming. Give full light. Keep dry.

Thursday, Sept. 17

Transplanting can begin about the end of the month. Shrubs should not be planted so dense they interfere with views from windows, or be so tall they cover the windows. A few choice kinds are: Japanese barberry [good for nesting places], dogwoods, Japanese oleasters, shrubby St. Johnswort, Tartarian honeysuckle, matrimony vine, snowberry, weigelia, and the viburnums.

Some of the lower growing tree forms furnish food for many birds, such as the hawthorns, flowering crab, mulberry, sumacs, redcedar, and others of equal importance. Save the leaves and start a compost heap. Start collecting mulching material for later use.

Friday, Sept. 18

Start paperwhite narcissus bulbs in soil or water and pebbles for early flowering. Madonna lilies can be planted now. Oriental poppies should be planted. They are available at supply houses.

Sow a few rows of radishes in the coldframe and enjoy them before freezing weather. Both radishes and lettuce like a mellow, rich soil. Do not water radishes too lavishly or they will split.

Considerable humus can be added to garden vegetable soil by sowing rye this fall and spading it under in early spring. It will be 4 inches high before severe weather. Harvest squash and pumpkins when thoroly ripened. Keep in a warm place.

Saturday, Sept. 19

Do not delay with trimming hedges for the last time. Stone fruits are best transplanted in spring. Give all newly planted trees plenty of water. Evergreens should never be allowed to suffer from a lack of moisture.

Apply some fertilizer to chrysanthemum plants when the buds show. A few plants dug and potted will flower and can be removed to the house for display. Select only those with good form and not too large. Water well after potting.

[Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.]

SHOWER STALL NOW HAS WALLS OF FIBER BOARD

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

If you are remodeling to provide additional living quarters in your home or building a low cost defense home, there are interesting shower cabinets available. Their walls are made of tempered hard pressed fiber board instead of steel, and their receptors of steam cured concrete.

These are the same type of shower cabinets that are being used in army barracks and in naval training stations, and they are a tribute to the production miracles taking place all around us, and the use of substitute materials to save on critical war materials.

Early last February manufacturers of shower cabinets were summoned to Washington and asked to submit a shower unit with nonmetallic walls and precast receptor, a cabinet so constructed that there would be no more than 25 pounds of steel in its manufacture [against some 200 pounds of steel, and more, used in prewar models] since steel for shower cabinet walls, would not be available in the near future.

No More Metal Walls.

This proved no serious problem, since ingenious models for such cabinets already had been assembled.

Since that time these models have been put on the market, and their use now is mandatory.

These shower cabinet fiber board walls are finished inside and out with high temperature waterproof baked enamel. Even their shower heads and valve handles are made of plastic or iron instead of brass and the only steel found in them is in the back corner joints, the door frame, and the receptor flange.

Another development in the shower cabinet line is a metal conserving prefabricated shower enclosure of tempered structural glass.

No Metal But Screws.

These units are prefabricated at the factory, with all holes drilled and ready to install. No metal is required except the 16 screws supplied by the manufacturer. Space is saved in a house by such an installation, and plumbing, too.

The panels are solid, structural glass, some four times tougher than ordinary glass of equal thickness. They are easy to clean, impervious to water or chemicals, and they are available in eight colors.

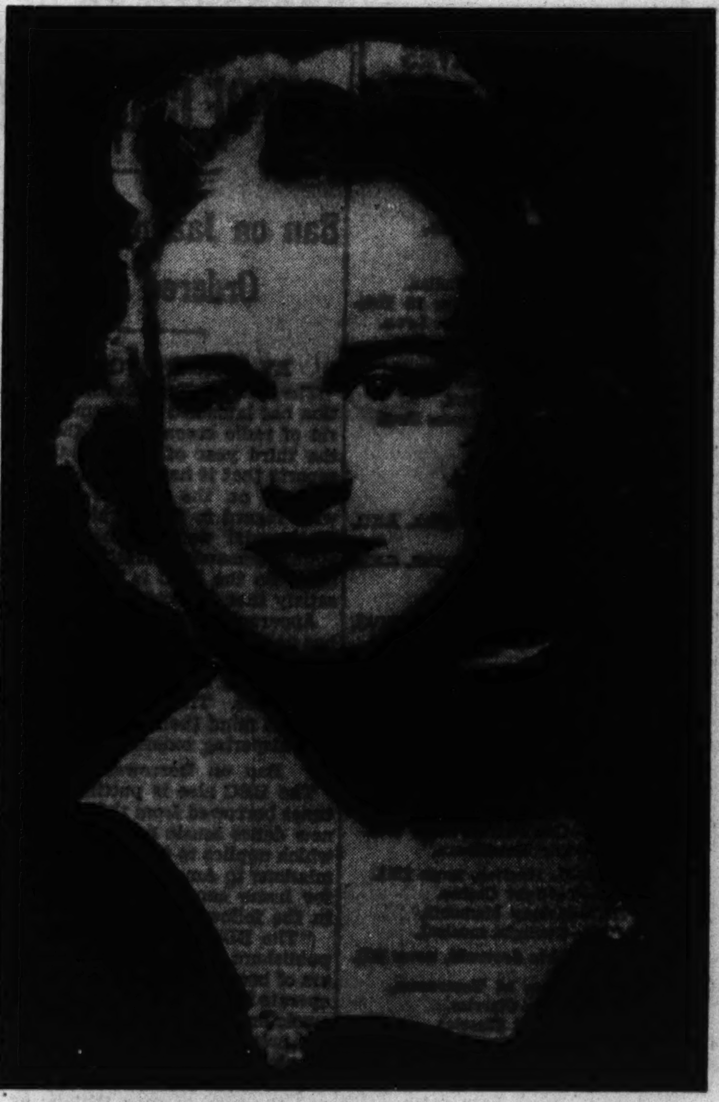
DEWEY TO PICK ANNAPOLIS MEN BY EXAMINATION

Congressman Charles S. Dewey [R.] of the 9th district announced last week that he would hold competitive examinations on Oct. 3 for two principals and three alternates to the Annapolis naval academy whom the navy department has asked him to appoint. The tests will be under civil service auspices.

Candidates must be not less than 17 nor more than 21 years old by April 1, 1943. They must be citizens of good moral character and must be legal residents of the 9th congressional district. This district includes most of the north side west of Racine avenue, between the Chicago river and Irving Park road.

Applications should be made to Congressman Dewey, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. They must be postmarked not later than midnight, Sept. 23.

Plans Wedding to Evanstonian



Miss Doris Miller of Kenosha, Wis., will be married this month to Richard E. Lininger of Evanston. She is the daughter of Henry F. Miller of Kenosha.

175 TO ATTEND WILMETTE'S NEW HARPER SCHOOL

Modern Building Will Open Tomorrow.

Tomorrow approximately 175 Wilmette children will pass between huge portico pillars and enter the circular foyer of the new J. R. Harper school to become its first pupils.

The one story, modified colonial building of red brick is located on Dartmouth street between Thornwood and Elmwood avenues in the suburb. It will accommodate a large number of children who formerly attended the less centrally located Highcrest school which will not be utilized this year. Classes will be held from the kindergarten level thru sixth grade.

Built on a five acre tract, the school building is surrounded by playground space. Two wings stretch out from the central foyer—one to the south reserved for the lower grades, the other to the north for the upper grades. Clusters of three windows combined with indirect lighting insure an abundance of reading light in every classroom.

Serve Hot Lunches.

Inside, opening off from the foyer, are a large library, a small auditorium for plays and meetings, a gymnasium, a dining room which will serve hot lunches during the school year and the office suites.

Lower grade classrooms have workrooms built into their studyrooms. A community workroom will serve members of the fourth, fifth, and sixth grades. The kindergarten boasts of a real, wood burning fireplace and built-in window seats.

Mrs. Oldendorf Is Principal.

Mrs. Dorothy Oldendorf, former principal of Highcrest school, will head the new school named for J. Robb Harper, Wilmette superintendent of schools, who retired last June after 34 years of service.

Dr. Millard D. Bell has assumed his duties as superintendent succeeding Mr. Harper. Dr. Bell comes from Ladue, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis, where he was superintendent of schools. He did his undergraduate collegiate work and earned his master's degree in Nebraska. From there he went to Teachers college, Columbia university, where he received a doctorate in school administration.

Formal dedication of the school will take place at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Sept. 27.

Rushing Chairman

Miss Dorothy Smithson, who will be a senior this fall at DePauw university, Greencastle, Ind., has been appointed north shore rushing chairman for Alpha chapter, Alpha Chi Omega social sorority. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart B. Smithson, 820 Sheridan road, Evanston.

SEE HARD FIGHT IN 2 NORTH SIDE CONGRESS AREAS

Dewey and Church Must Put on Steam.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Republicans may capture one new congressional district in north side territory in the Nov. 3 election, but must fight to retain two Cook county districts they now hold, observers said last week.

The Democratic district that appears to be headed back for the G. O. P. fold is the 1st, home of the great bulk of the city's colored population, and which extends northward to the Chicago river to embrace most of downtown Chicago.

The areas now held by Republicans but threatened by strong Democratic challengers are the 9th district, which encompasses the near north side, and the 10th, which skirts the north shore above Irving Park road, taking in all of Lake county also.

Aided by Brooks Fight.

Republican hopes in the 1st, on the rise for the last several years, were greatly bolstered last week by house acceptance of the senate's soldier vote bill. This measure contained an amendment, proposed and vigorously championed by Sen. Wayland Brooks, whereby voters in the service are no longer required to pay state poll taxes for the right of franchise.

Eight southern states have laws permitting only poll tax payers to vote, laws which help keep Negroes from the polls. By the terms of the Brooks amendment, the first successful attempt to abrogate the poll tax provision in 65 years, Negroes as well as whites in the nation's military and naval service can ballot without paying the state imposts.

Negro leaders in the 1st were jubilant over house acceptance of the bill carrying the amendment which had been approved by the senate several days earlier. Former State Sen. William E. King, Republican congressional nominee from the district, said the success of the Brooks amendment would bring enough colored G. O. P. votes to insure defeat of the Democratic nominee, former Ald. William L. Dawson, in November.

Walker Challenges Dewey.

In the 9th district Charles S. Dewey, who recaptured the district for the Republicans two years ago in his second try against the late Congressman James McAndrews, this year is faced with a Democrat who not only has the full backing of the strong city hall machine, but, unlike McAndrews, is a vigorous personal campaigner. He is Irwin N. Walker, an attorney who resigned as vice president of the Chicago board of education to accept his draft for the 9th district Democratic spot.

McAndrews was the first Democrat to represent the 9th since Lynden Evans cracked the G. O. P. wall in 1910. Fred Britton retired Evans in 1912 and held the seat until McAndrews toppled him from it in 1932, by a margin of 8,286 votes in a total of 65,612.

In 1934 McAndrews was elected over Bertha Baur, 60,307 to 41,587. Two years later Dewey stepped in and pared the Democratic plurality to 4,552 in a total of 83,576 votes. In 1940 Dewey unseated McAndrews by a vote of 56,806 to 49,816.

Hot Fight in 10th District.

In the 10tth district former Congressman Ralph E. Church of Evanston, who snatched the G. O. P. nomination from Congressman George A. Paddock in the April primary, is being hotly pursued by a young and political wise Democrat from Lake county, Corporation Counsel Jack Bairstow of Waukegan.

Church, who had wavered before the primary deadline between the 10th district spot and the post of United States senator, decided at the last moment to run for his old job in spite of the fact that Congressman Paddock had virtually unanimous organized party sanction. He beat Paddock, 40,642 to 34,241.

Bairstow, who has been campaigning actively all summer, has sought to keep open the rift between Church and members of his party who disapproved of Paddock's retirement. He has challenged Church to debate congressional issues in the district, which the former congressman has either declined or ignored.

Those who profess to know say that Bairstow has only the slimmest chance of victory provided Church makes the same sort of fight that has characterized his previous congressional campaigns.

It was recalled that in 1932 Church, running as an independent after James Simpson Jr. had won the G. O. P. nomination, polled so many Republican votes that Simpson was able to beat the Democrat, Charles H. Weber, by only 1,222 votes, the smallest G. O. P. margin in the history of the district.

Makes New Home in Washington

[Toloff photo.]

Andrice Jean Fleming, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew E. Fleming of Evanston, recently became the bride of Dr. William Manly Michaels of Washington, D. C. They were married in Howes Memorial chapel in Evanston and are now making their home in Washington. Both attended Northwestern university. Dr. Michaels is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Manly Michaels, also of the eastern city.

tional senate seat to his party. Every effort will be made to win.

Sen. Frank J. Huckin Jr., the Democratic incumbent, won 5 to 3 in the primary over the total vote of four opponents who lacked approval of the regular organization.

The G. O. P. entries in the house race are Rep. Elroy C. Sandquist and Eugene L. Nusser, 34th ward committeeman. The Democrats now have two of the three seats, and will try to hold them with Rep. Stanley R. Kosinski and Jacob A. Mueller, 68 year old county pay roller.

TWENTY-NINTH DISTRICT

Sen. William J. Connors, Democratic 42d ward committeeman, is opposed by William C. Boyden, who won the Republican nomination in a tangled primary contest. This battle may develop some interesting angles.

The G. O. P. also hopes to get back the odd house seat it has missed for years. Rep. Robert M. Woodward is teamed with Charles W. Vail Jr., against the veteran Democratic incumbents, Representatives Arthur J. Quinn and Edward P. O'Grady.

THIRTY-FIRST DISTRICT

Here the unusually bitter fight for the Republican senate nomination leaves Emerson C. Whitney, 48th ward G. O. P. committeeman, with an opponent who lacks senate experience. He is Milton D. Smith, assistant corporation counsel for Chicago, who won in the primary with little trouble. Sen. Harold G. Ward, Mayor Kelly's legislative spokesman, has been elevated to the Superior court.

Republicans hold two of the three house seats. These incumbents, George A. Williston and Edward P. Saltiel, are running against Rep. Pierce L. Shannon and James J. O'Toole, a former representative.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The British Broadcasting corporation has launched a movement to get rid of radio crooners. At the end of the third year of the war the BBC reports that it has noted a change in attitude on the part of the public with regard to the warblers of oversentimental songs. The public, it states, demands something more robust. So the BBC is undertaking to satisfy that demand.

Apparently the British campaign has no reference to Rudy Vallee, Morton Downey, and Bing Crosby, all of whom have been called crooners by Americans. The British apparently have in mind their own special types of whispering tenors.

Ban on Borrowed Tunes.

The BBC also is putting a ban on tunes borrowed from the classics. The new dance music policy of the BBC, which applies to the short wave transmissions to America as well as music for home consumption, is set forth in the following statement:

"The BBC has recently invited all publishers of dance music and leaders of broadcasting dance bands to co-operate in a new move to bring dance music broadcasts into better tune with the present spirit of Britain and her people. In effect, the idea is to rid the air of the oversentimental crooner and the kind of song that he or she sings.

"The step does not reflect any change in attitude on the part of the BBC, nor is it a high-handed attempt to dictate public taste. For many years now the BBC has maintained and exercised its right of censorship on behalf of the vast and varied public it exists to serve.

"Where the present move differs from former censorship is that a ban is now placed not on particular items of music but on a particular style of music and on a particular type of singer.

"It is a change of attitude on the part of the public that has brought this about. It is not for the BBC to discriminate between one kind of music and another. The aim has always been to offer the best in every kind—Beethoven for those who like Beethoven, crooners for those who prefer crooners.

Sempiternal Sob Disliked.

"But from its infinite number of contacts in homes, camps, barracks, and factories all over Britain it has learned beyond all doubt that the 1942 public as a whole finds the *sempiternal sob of the crooner almost as distasteful and distressing as, say, flippant blasphemy or an indecent innuendo. At the end of the third year of an increasingly strenuous war the public is demanding something more virile, more robust.

"So bleating crooners are out from now on—possibly, as some will hope, forever. So is the sort of song they sing.

"To music publishers the broadcasting of a popular song usually brings greatly increased business. It would be unfair were they to suffer for lack of the same immediate opportunities as the BBC enjoys for noting any wide change in public taste. Already the banning of individual songs has meant a business loss to some of them. In informing them of the new policy, therefore, the BBC cordially invites them, when considering new songs, to submit to the BBC any doubtful cases.

"The borderline between sentiment and sentimentality is a difficult path to tread, and there may be occasional errors of judgment. But the BBC is confident of public support for its intention to keep, for the present, well to the right of the line."

*Sempiternal is defined in the dictionary as "unending" or "everlasting."

DEFENSE CORPS TO GET INSIGNIA IN IRVING PARK

2,000 Taking Part in Rally Today.

Several thousand rural area civilian defense workers will take their oaths of service Wednesday night at the Maine Township High school. Details page 5.

During a program packed with band playing, baton twirling, navy drill teams and speeches, some 2,000 men and women from the Irving Park community who have been studying how to be air raid wardens or first aid helpers will receive their insignia in a mass graduation this afternoon in Lane Technical High school stadium, Addison street and Western avenue.

The program—from 1:30 to 5 o'clock—will fit in with the plans of the United States treasury to make the month of September a "Salute to Our Heroes Month." The executive committee of the Office of Civilian Defense will devote a large part of the graduation program to the sale of war stamps and bonds. Prizes with high monetary value will be auctioned off to the highest bidder in war bonds. Celebrities from motion picture and radio who will appear on the program will autograph souvenir programs for all bond purchasers.

Cash Not Necessary.

Earl H. Waterman, war bond chairman, says it will not be necessary to take enough cash to purchase the bond. Volunteer workers from banks and other treasury agencies will be on hand to take applications and a small deposit will seal the bargain.

Stanley Dunin and M. V. Squarcy, program chairmen, announce that the Army Air Force technical school band will make its first public appearance in Chicago at the stadium. Speed Chandler, an army aviator, will fly over the stadium to welcome the arrival of the unit. Sven W. Carlson, chief boatswain's mate of the United States Naval reserve and a member of the civilian defense executive staff in Irving Park, has arranged for a navy drill team and a mass induction of navy recruits at the ceremony.

Completing the navy part of the show will be a color guard and a talk by Jerry Pearlman, a first class fireman of company 28, whose services have been obtained thru the courtesy of the Chicago Service Men's center. The coast guard also will be represented by a trio known as the Coast Guard Cutters who have been singing thruout the middlewest.

Mayor to Speak.

Ten minute talks will be given by Mayor Kelly, and Norman Collins, and Don McKiernan of the United States treasury.

Participating bands will be from the Gladstone and Cornwall posts of the American Legion, from Schurz and Alvernia High schools and from Commonwealth Edison post of the Legion. Ina Mae Jones will direct the all-girl baton twirling unit with approximately 50 members.

Joseph Boosel, commander of the Irving Park Office of Civilian Defense, asks all personnel in the organization to check at the office to determine if they are included on the graduation list.

Mother Wants 30 Shirts in Ironing Again

Mrs. Carl E. Lindberg, 4143 North Long avenue, always expected that some day her family would leave home. She never thought, however, that it would happen so fast. She never dreamed that in the space of 14 months the seven room house, where five sons and a daughter once played the piano and three saxophones, filled the ashtrays and rooted for their baseball teams in front of the radio, would suddenly become silent.

The eldest in the family is the daughter, Mrs. Ivar Lofgren, who left home four years ago to set up housekeeping a few blocks down the street. It was the war that took all the boys.

Only one of the five sons is not in the army. He is Harold, 32 years old, who had a bad case of bronchial pneumonia a few years ago and was rejected for army service. Harold left home, however, to work for the government in a civilian capacity at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Harry in California.

Harold was the first one to leave. Then Harry, 25, was sent to San Diego and then stationed at Fort MacArthur, Cal. He left home June 4, 1941.

E. Bryant Lindberg, 22, was next to go as a private in the signal corps at Orlando, Fla. He left Feb. 4. Eugene, 20 years old, the youngest enlisted in the navy on July 20 and is stationed at the Great Lakes Training school. Lawrence Lindberg, 30 years old, went into the army on Aug. 28. He hasn't been stationed yet. The last his mother heard from Lawrence was a phone call from Rockford.

Mrs. Lindberg went to the store to buy a service flag. None of those for sale had enough stars, so Mrs. Lindberg bought some material and sewed a few more on to represent all her sons.

Father Also Helps.

Even Mr. Lindberg is helping win the war. He's a tool and die maker on war contracts. "He doesn't say much about the boys all being gone," says Mrs. Lindberg. "The house is quiet, tho. No four or five different breakfasts to get ready. No big dinners nor once a week washes with 30 shirts to iron."

"But I'd rather have all the housework again," says Mrs. Lindberg, "and have my boys back."

"They all look good, tho, when they come home," she says. "I guess they're treated right."

When the boys come home on a furlough the Lindberg kitchen hums with activity. The boys put in their order in advance. Eugene's menu called for roast chicken, with the breast meat browned and buttery, dressing, and dark brown gravy. Bryant ordered baked potatoes and thick Swiss steak. Before Lawrence left in August he called for barbecued spareribs and baked potatoes.

Recalls Last War.

During the last war Mrs. Lindberg had three small sons. "I used to look at them in thanksgiving that they were too young to fight," she said. "I never dreamed the day would come when all my family would be away at war."

When they had to go Mrs. Lindberg made the best of it. She sent all the boys' suits out to the cleaners and has them hanging in mothproof bags. The boys' sister writes them letters once a week, and to save time makes five carbon copies. Mrs. Lindberg washes only every other week now. She has cut down her amounts in cooking to terms of two chops, two potatoes. Cookies and cakes must be shared with her two young grandsons or it would be a waste of time to bake them.

"Maybe I'll join the Navy Mothers club," says Mrs. Lindberg. "Maybe I'll join the Red Cross. Anyhow for the first time in my life I have time to go out of my home to meetings. It seems very odd. I wonder how I'll like it."

ROCKFORD PAIR OBSERVES 71ST WEDDING DATE

Mr. and Mrs. Dana R. Wyant, 1508 Rockton avenue, Rockford, recently celebrated their 71st wedding anniversary. They were married in Leslie, Mich., then moved to Harvard, where they resided for 30 years, and then settled in Rockford. Two daughters, Edith B. Wyant and Mrs. Alice Burrows, share their home with them. They have two granddaughters and six great-granddaughters. At the time of the Chicago fire Mr. Wyant went with the Harvard Volunteer Fire company to help fight it. Mr. Wyant is 92 years old and Mrs. Wyant 91. Hundreds of messages of congratulations poured in on the Wyants as they celebrated their unusually long married life together.

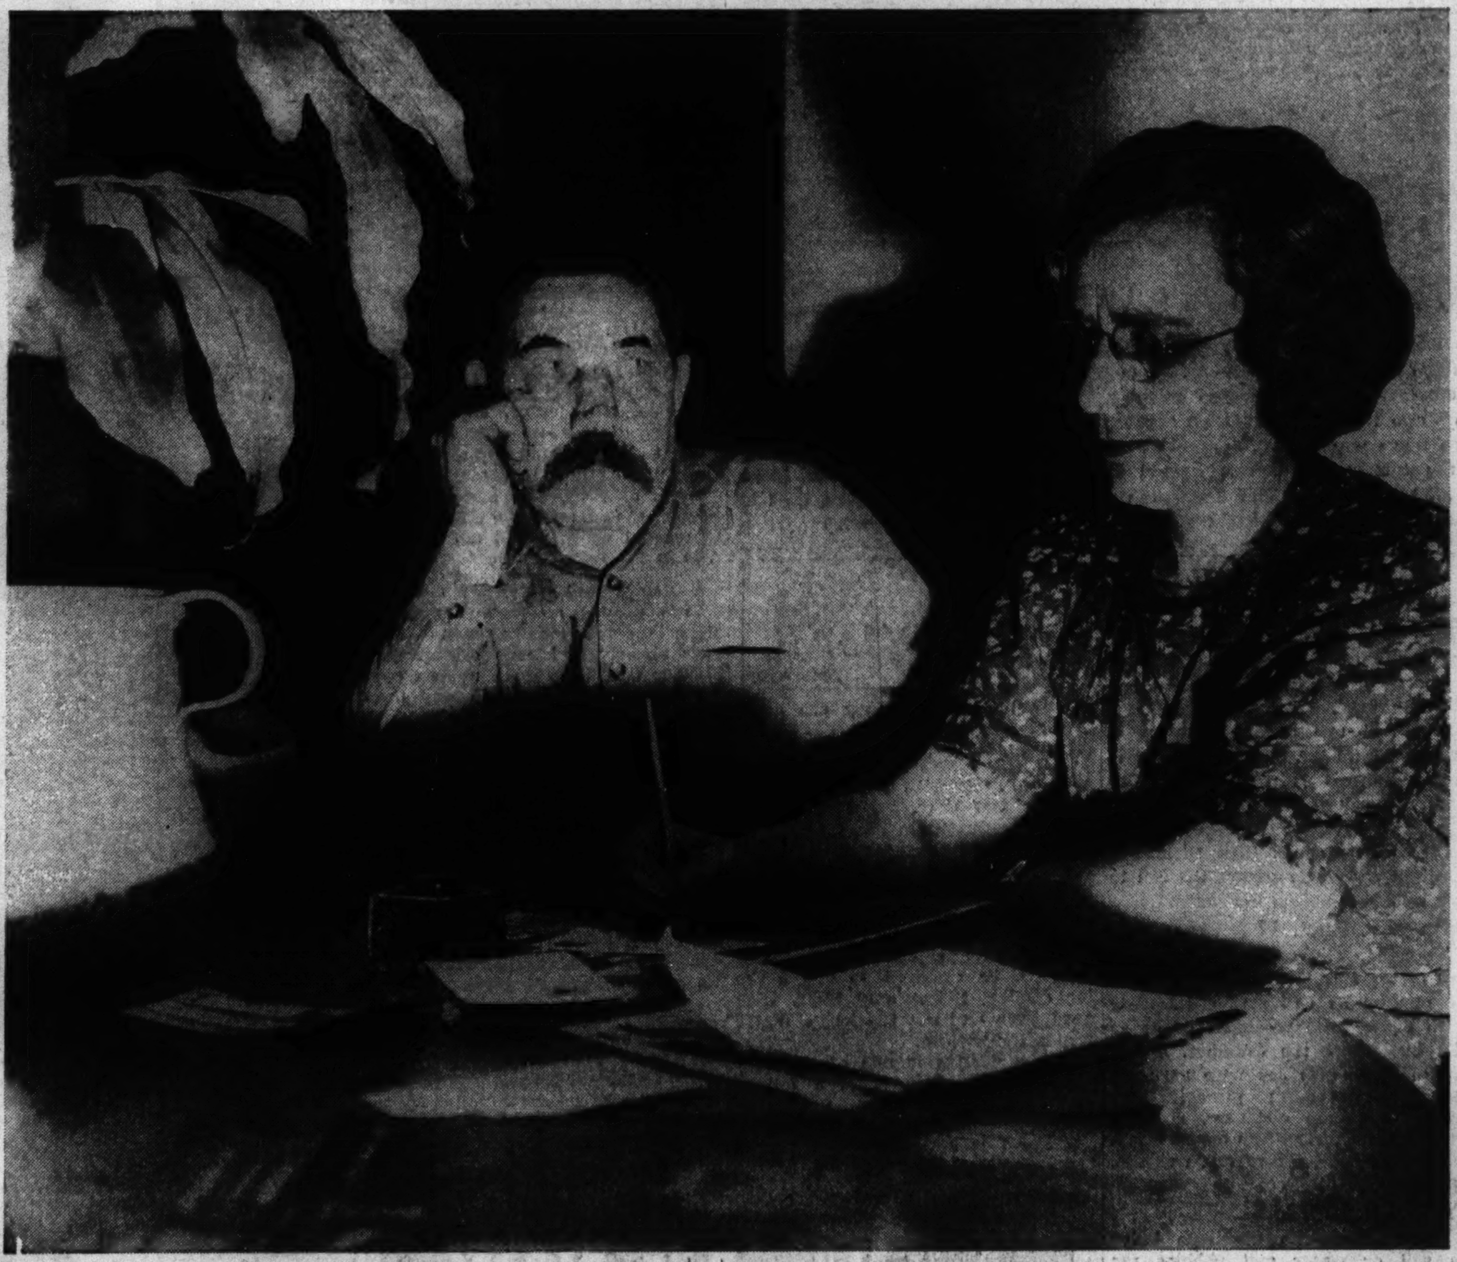
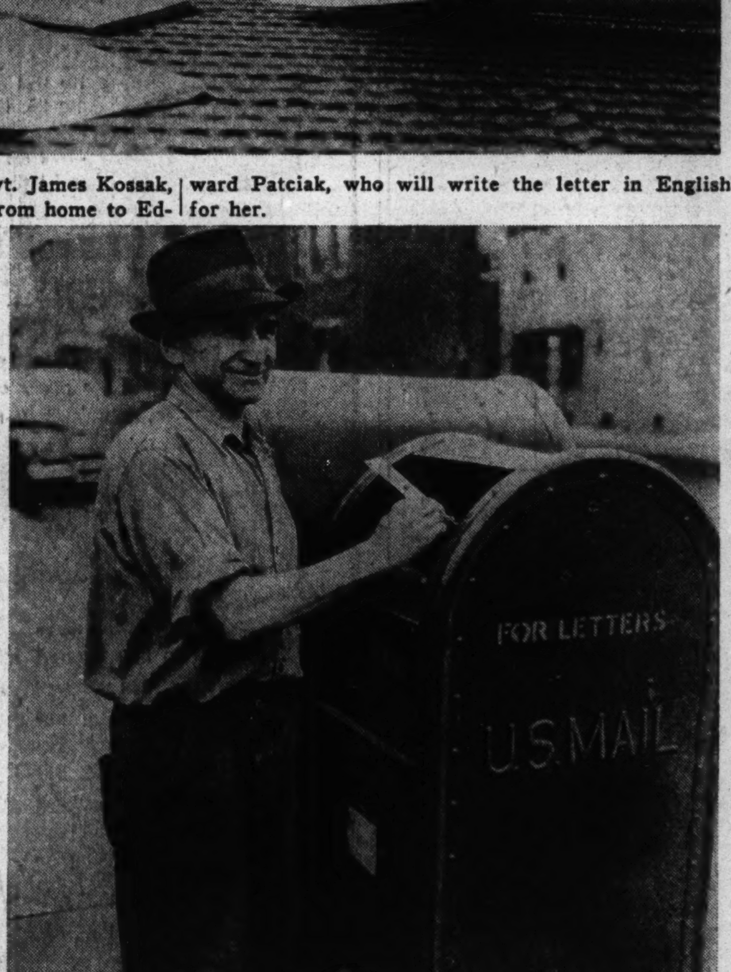
His sunflower reaches into the stratosphere, jovially says E. C. Meyers, 2827 North Mozart street, of the 12 foot 5½ inch stalk in his back yard, which shot skyward this summer.

Sending News from Home to Soldier Sons



The people who fight the wars sometimes run into complications. The Polish mothers and fathers who live and work in the neighborhood of Milwaukee avenue can think best in their native language and can talk only in Polish about things that are close to their hearts. Their sons fighting on battlefields around the world have been taught to think and read in English. To answer the problem a letter writing service has been started at Northwestern university settlement, Augusta boulevard and Noble street. Scribes capable of taking dictation in foreign languages and transcribing them into English are at work several evenings a week at the settlement. Frank Mroczyk whose son, Pvt. Joseph Mroczyk is in New Caledonia, is dictating his letter to Mrs. Ida McIntire. [TRIBUNE Photos by Julius Gantter.]

Mrs. Mary Kossak whose son, Pvt. James Kossak, is in Australia, is telling the news from home to Edward Patciak, who will write the letter in English for her.



Joseph Chwaszczewski has his completed letter in his hand ready to mail it to a son who may be wondering how his folks back home are getting along.

Millennium! This Township Levies No Tax

Men and women whose homes and farms are in Schaumburg township, made up of rolling terrain and orchard edged fields in the northwesterly corner of Cook county, are asked to invest their money in war bonds. The town board is asking them to. But here is a town board so aware that a man's pocketbook has a bottom that it is cutting corners on township expenses so there will be no tax levy in 1942.

The population of Schaumburg township is 840. Ninety per cent are farmers and almost all are of German descent. Fred W. Pfingsten, a farmer, is township supervisor and is also civilian defense coördinator. Louis Redecker, also a farmer, is town clerk. Frank Sporleder is highway commissioner and all three are lifelong residents of their community.

Believe in Economy.

"We have been very careful in our expenditures this year," says Supervisor Pfingsten, "and we believe that by strict economy next year our balances will be sufficient for our actual needs. We hope to set an example for other units of local government. We will ask Schaumburg residents to buy war stamps and bonds with the money they would otherwise pay for township taxes."

Supervisor Pfingsten explains that two policies are largely responsible for the unusual situation of cash balances. First, no relief money is paid out until the supervisor has exerted every effort to find employment for the applicant. Second, no road and bridge work is done for the benefit of private property, no matter who owns it.

The war has come close to Schaumburg township with 14 of the young men off to war and the daughters and sisters taking up farm burdens and harvesting the crops. "Help on a dairy farm is mighty hard to get," says Supervisor Pfingsten.

Have Relief Balance.

So economically was the relief situation handled in Schaumburg township that there is still $1,805 left over in the treasury from the relief levy of 1933. There is still $2,000 in the highway fund and $1,200 in the township fund. Last year the township spent $778 and the highway costs were $1,044, leaving more in the treasury than was taken out.

This economy corner of Cook county where more stays in the treasury than goes out is east of Elgin. Route 53 is its east boundary and Barrington road bounds the township on the west. It stretches north from the Du Page county line to Algonquin road.

Town meetings of the old fashioned variety are held once a year in Lengle hall at Schaumburg Center, the place where the farmers congregate on Saturday night. Expenses of government are light. The men who hold political office do their work in their own homes and every one in the township can drop in any time to talk things over with these men who keep the books.

Kiwanis lodge at the YMCA camp on Hastings lake, Milburn, Ill., last July was just a plan that Gunner C. Jensen, 4950 Elston avenue, a club member, carried around in his head. Today it is a trim green and white structure on the lake shore.

Built on the west side of the lake for the Irving Park YMCA campers by the Northwest Kiwanis Club of Chicago, the handicraft station is a "Wednesday effort" of the Kiwanians. From 8 to 10 northwest side men reported at the site on four different Wednesdays, and several men contributed additional Sunday work.

Half the materials and all the labor were furnished by the Northwest Kiwanis club. The YMCA camp paid for the other half of the materials, and will furnish the tables and benches needed next summer when the handicraft lodge will be used for the first time.

Offer Gas Defense Course to Hanson Park Wardens

A gas defense training course for Hanson Park civilian defense workers will be held from 7 to 9 o'clock tomorrow evening and Wednesday evening in St. Stanislaus parish hall, 2316 North Lorel avenue. Dennis Sherwin is Hanson Park commander.

HOPES ARE HIGH IN NORTHWEST SIDE CONTESTS

Seek Safe Majority at Springfield.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

The Republican drive for a practical majority in the state legislature, which starts this week, will be aimed chiefly at senate seats in the northwest section of Chicagoland.

Altho there are 153 house members and only 51 senators, this northwest area offers few chances for house seats to change parties. That is because only two of the eight legislative districts of the area offer house contests on Nov. 3. In the others, the candidates were virtually elected in the primary under the "setup" system.

With an edge of 79 to 74 in the house, the G. O. P. will attempt to gain house seats in the 23d district, which includes Oak Park, and in the 25th, largest Illinois district, which takes in most of the northwest side.

See G. O. P. Opportunities.

However, the senate campaign offers better opportunities to the Republicans—on paper, at least. In the northwest section, the Democrats are risking senate seats in four districts while the Republicans have seats at stake in two. In two other districts there is no senate election because they are even numbered; this is the year for odd number districts to elect senators.

Last session, with its new state administration, the G. O. P. found itself handicapped by its slight majorities in the legislature. Several members were amenable to Democratic pressure, so that the resulting scores were too close for Republican comfort. The G. O. P. lead in the senate was 28 to 23.

Alert from their 1941 experience at Springfield, the Republican leaders are stirring up the organization to persuade voters to give them a wider working margin in the general assembly. Otherwise important measures of the state's wartime administration will be threatened with defeat at the 1943 session, leaders say.

Following is a preview of the legislative campaign by districts in the northwest section.

SEVENTH DISTRICT

[Most country townships of Cook county.]

His G. O. P. backers see little chance this year for the Democrats to upset Sen. Arthur J. Bidwill. However, the district's new residents working in war plants are a new political factor. Bidwill was elected by a narrow margin in 1936, ousted after four months in notorious contest proceedings before the Democratic controled senate, and reëlected in 1938.

Mack D. Falknor of Morton Grove is the Democratic senate entry. He was unopposed in the primary. There is no house contest.

EIGHTH DISTRICT

[Lake, McHenry, and Boone counties.]

Senate election in 1944. No house contest.

FOURTEENTH DISTRICT

[Kane and Kendall counties.]

Senate election in 1944. No house contest.

TWENTY-FIRST DISTRICT

[Parts of Wards 26, 28, 30, and 37.]

Eugene C. O'Reilly, veteran attorney, is carrying the Republican standard thru the battle for the senate seat in this home district of P. A. Nash, the Democratic county chairman. O'Reilly knows that it will be an uphill fight. Norman C. Barry is the choice of the Democratic organization, having defeated Sen. George M. Maypole in a relatively costly primary after Maypole displeased Nash.

This is the only district in Illinois where the house candidates had no opposition either in the primary or in the election.

TWENTY-THIRD DISTRICT

[Oak Park, Ward 31 in Chicago, also parts of Wards 26, 30, 32, 36, and 37.]

Sen. Thomas E. Keane, Democrat ending his second four year term, is up against Oscar C. [Ches] Johnson, 1500 North Central avenue. Johnson ran for the senate in 1930 and 1934 in the adjoining 25th district. In 1936—another bad Republican year—he was nominated for Municipal court bailiff.

Here Republicans also have a chance to gain a house seat. Rep. William G. Thon of Oak Park, who has served 24 years as a Republican, is again teamed with Daniel A. Roberts, 31st ward committeeman. The Democrats renominated Representatives Arthur M. Kaindl and Stanley A. Halick.

TWENTY-FIFTH DISTRICT

[Wards 34, 35, 39, and 40, parts of Wards 32, 33, 36, 38, 41, 45, 47, and 50.]

Not only the 600,000 population, but the action promised for the fall campaign, makes this the most important district in Illinois. There are contests for both senate and house seats.

Frederick B. Resag is backed for Five Sons Now Helping Nation Toward Victory

(Story on page 1.)

Monday, Sept. 14

It is time to complete lawn making if the young grass is to survive the severe winter weather without injury. First consideration should be given the soil; it should be in good tilth, filled with humus and food, well drained, and thoroly prepared. Most city yards lack humus. If a new lawn is to be made buy manure, if possible, and spread a layer over the ground before spading. If manure is not to be had buy a bag or two of shredded cattle manure and use it in the same manner.

Tuesday, Sept. 15

Growing perennial flowering plants in shade is dependent on the kind selected. Here are a few that are recommended when the shade is not too dense: Beebalm, Virginia bluebell, sedum, plantain lily, meadowrue, lily-of-the-valley, forget-me-not, ferns [plant more ferns, for they make a lovely effect], columbine, bugle, goutweed, monkshood, daylily, and foxglove, which is grown as a perennial, but is really a biennial.

Wednesday, Sept. 16

It is time to lift and pot all plants that are intended for indoor culture. An early frost is predicted, but in any case such plants as the poinsettia should be removed indoors before cooler nights come. Give them full sunlight and never permit the soil to dry out.

Thursday, Sept. 17

Transplanting can begin about the end of the month. Shrubs should not be planted so dense they interfere with views from windows, or be so tall they cover the windows. A few choice kinds are: Japanese barberry [good for nesting places], dogwoods, Japanese oleasters, shrubby St. Johnswort, Tartarian honeysuckle, matrimony vine, snowberry, weigelia, and the viburnums.

Friday, Sept. 18

Start paperwhite narcissus bulbs in soil or water and pebbles for early flowering. Madonna lilies can be planted now. Oriental poppies should be planted. They are available at supply houses.

Saturday, Sept. 19

Do not delay with trimming hedges for the last time. Stone fruits are best transplanted in spring. Give all newly planted trees plenty of water. Evergreens should never be allowed to suffer from a lack of moisture.

Apply some fertilizer to chrysanthemum plants when the buds show. A few plants dug and potted will flower and can be removed to the house for display. Select only those with good form and not too large. Water well after potting.

The aspidistra is one of the best plants for dry air. It is a foliage plant. Do not overwater begonias or the stems will rot.

SHOWER STALL NOW HAS WALLS OF FIBER BOARD

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

If you are remodeling to provide additional living quarters in your home or building a low cost defense home, there are interesting shower cabinets available. Their walls are made of tempered hard pressed fiber board instead of steel, and their receptors of steam cured concrete.

These are the same type of shower cabinets that are being used in army barracks and in naval training stations, and they are a tribute to the production miracles taking place all around us, and the use of substitute materials to save on critical war materials.

Early last February manufacturers of shower cabinets were summoned to Washington and asked to submit a shower unit with nonmetallic walls and precast receptor, a cabinet so constructed that there would be no more than 25 pounds of steel in its manufacture [against some 200 pounds of steel, and more, used in prewar models] since steel for shower cabinet walls, would not be available in the near future.

No More Metal Walls.

This proved no serious problem, since ingenious models for such cabinets already had been assembled.

Since that time these models have been put on the market, and their use now is mandatory.

These shower cabinet fiber board walls are finished inside and out with high temperature waterproof baked enamel. Even their shower heads and valve handles are made of plastic or iron instead of brass and the only steel found in them is in the back corner joints, the door frame, and the receptor flange.

Another development in the shower cabinet line is a metal conserving prefabricated shower enclosure of tempered structural glass.

No Metal But Screws.

These units are prefabricated at the factory, with all holes drilled and ready to install. No metal is required except the 16 screws supplied by the manufacturer. Space is saved in a house by such an installation, and plumbing, too.

PAT IS HELPING TO WHIP THE AXIS WITH HER BATON

Also Twirls Way Into Soldiers' Hearts.

Pat Earle can't serve the country in the armed forces. She's only a girl, a pretty one and just 16. But Pat's name is written more often in connection with the war effort than perhaps any other girl in her community, because she twirls a baton.

Pat Earle.

Pat has had only seven lessons in baton twirling. Four years ago, a neighbor boy showed her some twirling tricks with a broomstick weighted down with an ash tray. Today, Pat twirls her baton at USO programs, at the Chicago Service Men's center, in patriotic parades, bond sale programs, and at the treasury corner in the Sears building. She averages three programs a week, never says no to a request, and doesn't get paid a cent except occasionally some one pays her transportation.

Visits Disabled Vets.

She twirled her baton at the Mel Tierney post, American Legion program in Park Ridge when $63,000 worth of bonds were sold in one evening. She entertains the soldiers of another war at Hines hospital whenever she's called.

The living room of the Earle home at 6852 Oriole avenue bears the telltale marks of the baton twirling daughter of Mrs. Hazel Earle. First all the lights in the living room chandelier were broken, then the whole chandelier came down. Mrs. Earle is patient, because Pat has to practice in the living room, near the phonograph. However, for high tricks she goes out into the back yard. Once in a while Pat misses when she's rehearsing and the heavy iron baton comes down on her head. The other night she didn't know what to do about sleeping. The bump on one side of her head hurt when she hit the pillow and the other side of her head was done up in curlers so she would look neat at the next day's program.

Sister Makes Uniforms.

Pat never turns down a request. She is accompanied to all the programs and escorted home by her mother. Her white uniforms, with gold lining, gold braid and buttons, are designed and made by a sister, Mrs. Helen Wilmes. Pat can perform with any band or orchestra.

Seven years ago Pat started her music career as a fife player in the Edison Park Drum and Bugle corps. Four years ago she started her baton twirling with the broomstick and since has received four medals, an Intercorps medal, an All-Star Twirling club medal, a Chicago Park district medal, and an American Legion convention medal.

Shortage of Batons.

One of the things plaguing Pat and all baton twirlers during wartime is the shortage of the metal batons. Pat broke one of hers the other day. Her mother asked the plumber where they could get it fixed and he suggested a metal worker in Park Ridge. The baton had to be shortened, because there was no material to fix the broken edge. If it breaks again the baton will be too short to use.

Last Valentine's day Pat had her picture in the paper for appearing on a patriotic program. The next week a great deal of mail was received at the Earle home, because soldiers all over Chicago had written to pretty Pat. Mrs. Earle looked over the letters and said: "They are the nicest, friendliest letters I have ever read." that could have offended Pat.
that could have oended Pat.

She sat down and answered them all, writing nice, sisterly letters, wishing the boys the very best. "It was the least I could do when they're doing so much," said Pat.

Engagement Told

Miss Selma Kirschenbaum, daughter of Maurice Kirschenbaum, 3414 Medill avenue, is engaged to Jerome H. Herskovitz, son of Mrs. Ethel Herskovitz, 2805 North Sawyer avenue. Mr. Herskovitz is now attending the United States signal corps school in Chicago. No date has been set for the wedding.

FLORAL EXHIBIT IN PORTAGE PARK WILL AID YANKS

Wishing Well Feature of Show Today.

An old fashioned wishing well complete with moss covered bucket will be a feature of the fall flower show to be held today by the Portage Park Garden club in the Portage park gymnasium, Berteau and Central avenues. The wishing well has a dual rôle—a bit of old New England for a modern midwestern garden, and a collection plate for the Chicago service men's center. Each visitor to the garden show will be asked to make a wish and seal it with a coin dropped in the well.

A smaller wishing well was built for the spring Portage Park garden show which netted $11.60 for the service men. The Portage Park club is one of a number of Chicago area garden clubs which keeps the service men's center supplied with plants and flowers.

Display from War Gardens.

The war garden display of vegetables grown by members and friends will be arranged at the show by Miss Attilia Sporel, Mrs. L. L. Henneman, and Mrs. Faira Bowsher. Specimen flowers and potted plants submitted will be placed in the show by Mrs. Centa Roth and Mrs. James Nugent.

Mrs. Anna Volsch will be in charge of dish, bowl, vase, and basket arrangements. She will be assisted by Mrs. Louise Priebe, Mrs. James Nugent, and Mrs. Gertrude Apnmmore.

A committee of men have been appointed to decorate the fieldhouse with corn stalks and gourds. Louis Priebe is chairman assisted by Paul Kunow, E. G. Groble, Fred Mueller, Paul Mueller, Berny Larson, and James Nugent.

War Stamps as Awards.

Mrs. Pearl Ott is in charge of the listing of entry tags to be given for the various displays. All entries must be on the floor by 11 o'clock. One entry may be exhibited in each class. Awards for the highest number of points will be $5 in war stamps.

Ribbons and certificates of award will be given in the junior exhibits, of which Miss Jeannette Bowsher is in charge. Mrs. W. C. Brown is chairman of the luncheon to be served at noon. Assisting her are Mrs. Louis Rakow, Mrs. Paul Mueller, Mrs. Fred Mueller, Mrs. James Nugent, and Mrs. Berny Larson.

Judges for the show are Mrs. E. A. Julius, Mrs. Walter Hollensteiner, and Mrs. David Claesson. The president of the club is Mrs. Edward Immel, who announces that doors will be open to the public at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and will close at 9 o'clock.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

IT was back in 1892 that Fred M. Hughes started to work for the Illinois Bell Telephone company. Fred was 10 years old, and the company was known as the Chicago Telephone company. Then came the year of the Chicago World's fair, and Fred served as an A. T. D. messenger. He now is a private branch exchange repair man at the Monroe office.

William J. Hughes.

Fred M. Hughes.

Fred Hughes' 50 years of service were honored at a dinner held at the Svithiod club, 624 Wrightwood avenue, on Sept. 4. He received a diamond pin from the company, and his fellow workers presented him with a portable radio set. Mr. Hughes, who will continue with the firm until he reaches the automatic retirement age of 65, lives in Elmwood Park at 7933 Birchdale street.

That is not all, however; the story continues. Fred's brother, William J. Hughes, 1523 North Long street, has been with the Illinois Bell Telephone company for 49 years, and will celebrate his 50th anniversary next year. He is a stockman at the joint warehouse, 23d and Rockwell streets.

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD KRUMSIEG, 4519 North Richmond street, will have been married 50 years on Tuesday. Today they are celebrating the occasion with a family dinner in Peoria. So that their friends may help mark the event with them, they will return to Chicago this week and hold open house next Sunday at their home.

Peoria holds memories for both Mr. and Mrs. Krumsieg. It was there that they were married, at the Christ Lutheran church; it was there that Mr. Krumsieg taught school for several years, and it is there that they will return to live after Oct. 1. Two daughters, Mrs. Edna Harms and Mrs. George Folkers, live in Peoria, but the older folks will establish their own home.

Mr. Krumsieg taught in Lutheran schools after the family moved to Chicago years ago. Eventually he went into the loan and insurance business with his brother.

One son, Raymond G., resides at 3836 North Troy street, and a daughter, Mrs. Lenora Rubin, in Shelbyville, Ill. There are 13 grandchildren.

NORWOOD PARK PTA FORMS RAID SHELTER SYSTEM

25 Homes Are Accessible to Children.

"This is the shelter home. I like our block mother," a youngster said recently to her small companion as they walked by a Norwood Park home with a red and white sticker in the window.

Thruout Norwood Park children are becoming conscious of the stickers which designate a shelter or open house for them during an air raid. The project was started more than a month ago by the Norwood Park Parent-Teacher association and has spread to 25 homes. Before the project is completed the association plans to have an open house and block mother in every block.

The homes, altho organized to take care of children in an emergency air raid, are always open for the neighborhood youngsters. There are no specifications or qualifications set down except that each home must be supplied with several days' food, toys to entertain the children, and first aid equipment and fire fighting apparatus. Either the block mother or some other person must be there all the time.

Contains Emergency Equipment.

The first block mother was Mrs. Donald J. Donohue, 5965 North West Circle avenue, association president. Her shelter room, which has been a model for all the others, is the recreation room in the basement of her home. Shelves formerly filled with books now contain cans of food. A lower shelf has been given over to first aid equipment. Toys for children of different ages are scattered about, and tucked away in an obscure corner is a bucket of sand, a hose, and water to use in case of fire.

Members of the organization volunteered their services and supplies are provided by them or thru the help of the children's mothers in the block.

"We hope we don't have to use these shelters in an emergency," Mrs. Donohue stated. "But in case there is an emergency and children can't get to their homes or find them inaccessible, they can go to any of the open houses with the red and white sticker in the window."

Mothers Enthusiastic.

Mothers are enthusiastic about the plan, according to Mrs. Donohue, and so far none has refused to be a block mother or open her house for a shelter.

Norwood Park is the first community in the Chicago area to start the project. The community's civilian defense office is coöperating by making a map of all the blocks in the neighborhood. Mrs. Donohue expects to have a complete organization of every block shortly after school begins. Assisting her is Mrs. William Miller, who, as PTA civilian service chairman, is head of the block mothers.

Religious Meetings.

The Park Ridge Gospel church will conduct a religious campaign from Sept. 2. to Sept. 27 in the South Park fieldhouse, according to the Rev. Donald E. Hoke, pastor. Services will be held every evening at 7:45 o'clock, and the Rev. Billy Graham will be the main speaker.

BRITISH RADIO PROPOSES TO GET RID OF CROONERS

Ban on Jazzing Classics Ordered Also.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The British Broadcasting corporation has launched a movement to get rid of radio crooners. At the end of the third year of the war the BBC reports that it has noted a change in attitude on the part of the public with regard to the warblers of oversentimental songs. The public, it states, demands something more robust. So the BBC is undertaking to satisfy that demand.

Apparently the British campaign has no reference to Rudy Vallee, Morton Downey, and Bing Crosby, all of whom have been called crooners by Americans. The British apparently have in mind their own special types of whispering tenors.

Ban on Borrowed Tunes.

The BBC also is putting a ban on tunes borrowed from the classics. The new dance music policy of the BBC, which applies to the short wave transmissions to America as well as music for home consumption, is set forth in the following statement:

"The BBC has recently invited all publishers of dance music and leaders of broadcasting dance bands to cooperate in a new move to bring dance music broadcasts into better tune with the present spirit of Britain and her people. In effect, the idea is to rid the air of the oversentimental crooner and the kind of song that he or she sings.

"The step does not reflect any change in attitude on the part of the BBC, nor is it a high-handed attempt to dictate public taste. For many years now the BBC has maintained and exercised its right of censorship on behalf of the vast and varied public it exists to serve. Most people will agree that this censorship has not been noticeably heavy-handed and that nowhere has it been more lenient than in the matter of dance band broadcasts. But it would probably surprise many to learn just how many dance numbers have been excluded from the air for one very good reason or another during the last 12 months.

"Where the present move differs from former censorship is that a ban is now placed not on particular items of music but on a particular style of music and on a particular type of singer.

"It is a change of attitude on the part of the public that has brought this about. It is not for the BBC to discriminate between one kind of music and another. The aim has always been to offer the best in every kind—Beethoven for those who like Beethoven, crooners for those who prefer crooners.

Sempiternal Sob Disliked.

"But from its infinite number of contacts in homes, camps, barracks, and factories all over Britain it has learned beyond all doubt that the 1942 public as a whole finds the *sempiternal sob of the crooner almost as distasteful and distressing as, say, flippant blasphemy or an indecent innuendo. At the end of the third year of an increasingly strenuous war the public is demanding something more virile, more robust. The BBC, as the servant of the public, must act in the public interest.

"So bleating crooners are out from now on—possibly, as some will hope, forever. So is the sort of song they sing. Both have been quietly discouraged for a long time. Now there is to be a positive ban.

"And while changes are being made, here is another that also promises to be in full accord with public desire. In future no dance numbers will be accepted for broadcasting, either with or without lyrics, which are based on any tunes borrowed from standard classical works usually heard in the concert hall or opera house.

"To music publishers the broadcasting of a popular song usually brings greatly increased business. It would be unfair were they to suffer for lack of the same immediate opportunities as the BBC enjoys for noting any wide change in public taste. Already the banning of individual songs has meant a business loss to some of them. In informing them of the new policy, therefore, the BBC cordially invites them, when considering new songs, to submit to the BBC any doubtful cases.

*Sempiternal is defined in the dictionary as "unending" or "everlasting."

"The borderline between sentiment and sentimentality is a difficult path to tread, and there may be occasional errors of judgment. But the BBC is confident of public support for its intention to keep, for the present, well to the right of the line."

'STARS OF TOMORROW' SERIES TO OPEN OVER W-G-N THIS EVENING

Mauri Cliffer.

The first of the new entertainment series, "Stars of Tomorrow," will be broadcast on W-G-N from 8 to 8:30 o'clock tonight, with six amateurs, chosen from more than 250 who auditioned at W-G-N last week, participating.

Appearing on the program will be Eloise Kupfer of Milwaukee, singer and of movie stars; Norman Shickedanz, baritone, who will sing "I Love Life"; William Benes, violin virtuoso, who will play "Estrellita"; Shirley Ross Rice, soprano, who will sing Gershwin's "Summer Time"; Mickey Scharf, comedian, and Jean Moss, who will sing "Miss You."

The six amateurs will be awarded defense stamp boutonnieres for appearing on the program, and the three voted best will be awarded wrist watches. All of the first prize winners on the first nine programs will participate on the tenth program and the winner will be awarded a $500 war bond.

Master of ceremonies on "Stars of Tomorrow" will be Mauri Cliffer, Chicago comedian. Originating in W-G-N's main audience studio, the program will be produced by Jack LaFrandre. Auditions for the program are to be held every Thursday evening at W-G-N.

FIRST NIGHTER TO AIR WESTERN ROMANCE TODAY

Bret Morrison.

A western romance titled "Cowboy Blues" will be the starring vehicle for Les Tremayne and Barbara Luddy on the "First Nighter" program to be heard from 7 to 7:30 tonight on W-G-N. Mutual broadcasts the show at 5 p. m.

The plot of the story, written especially for "First Nighter" by Addison Simmons, concerns two girls who decide to hasten the nuptials with two bashful cowboys but only succeed in frightening them away. The antics of the chase finally result in a double wedding.

Musical background for the drama will be supplied by Eric Sagerquist and his First Nighter orchestra. Bret Morrison will portray the rôle of Mr. First Nighter, host to the theater party at the Little Theater Off Times Square.

SOLDIERS FROM CHICAGOLAND ON CAMP PROGRAM

Six soldiers from the middle west will broadcast messages to their families and friends at home on W-G-N's "Camp Wolters Calling" to be aired at 10 a. m. next Saturday.

The program is transcribed at Camp Wolters, Texas. The soldiers who will be heard: Pvt. Richard G. Gleue, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Gleue of Le Roy, Kas.; Pvt. Joe C. McCrea, son of Mrs. Josie McCrea, 417 Wadsworth, Collinsville, Ill.; Corp. Donald K. Williams and Pvt. Ronald E. Williams, sons of Mrs. Freda L. Lewis, 900 Beach street, Lansing, Mich.; Pvt. Raymond W. Beck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Beck, North Topeka, Kas., and Pvt. Milton F. Horsley, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Horsley, Wessington Springs, S. D.

SIBELIUS SUITE TO BE AIRED BY CBS ORCHESTRA

Music by Roussel, Cherubini, Sibelius, and Bach will highlight the program of the Columbia symphony, directed by Bernard Herrmann, to be aired over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today.

Roussel and Sibelius, the bulk of whose work was written in the present century, are represented respectively by "Le Festin de l' Araignee" [Banquet of the Spider] and the "Swanwhite" suite.

Roussel, a Frenchman who started as a sailor and did much of his composing while at sea, wrote his "Festin de l'Araignee" as a ballet shortly before the outbreak of the first World war.

The suite by the Finnish master was composed as incidental music for a play by Strindberg. The suite is divided into six sections—"The Peacock," "The Harp," "The Maiden with the Rose," "Listen, the Robin Sings," "Swanwhite and the Prince," and Song of Praise."

MORELAND GOES OUT FOR VOTES TO UNSEAT SCHUETZ

Sees Victory in Seventh District Race.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Northwestern Chicagoland was the quietest sector in the picture last week so far as the congressional election campaigns were concerned. Activity thru most of this area was confined principally to laying the groundwork for the later fights that are bound to come, particularly in the large 7th district, which includes most of the northwest side of Chicago and adjacent Cook county suburbs.

Here former Ald. James C. Moreland is coming to grips for the fifth time with Congressman Leonard W. Schuetz, and there were predictions that the Republican challenger is at last on the eve of victory.

Whittles Down Lead.

Schuetz has been losing ground steadily in the last few years. Moreland, a shrewd campaigner, has stepped up his long labors to muster maximum G. O. P. strength for the election test. He reported last week that Republican unity in the district is at a new peak.

Moreland first appeared against Schuetz in the 1930 election, when Schuetz was elected for his first term by a margin of 20,681 votes in a total of 202,863. Two years later M. A. Michaelson became the G. O. P. nominee, and Schuetz beat him by 55,645 out of a total of 327,819.

In 1934 the Republicans nominated Raymond J. Peacock, who lost the election to Schuetz by 81,579 of the 290,284 votes polled by both parties.

Moreland tried the second time in 1936, when the district's total vote reached a new high of 420,716, as did Schuetz' plurality of 90,080. Since then Moreland has whittled away constantly at his opponent's lead.

Only 8,368 Votes Ahead.

In 1938 the total vote dropped to 354,819, with Moreland trailing by 30,681. Two years ago the total jumped back up to 449,954, but this time a big G. O. P. trend, caused as much by a growing dissatisfaction with the Schuetz indifference as by the tireless work of Moreland, cut the Democrats' lead to a mere 8,368 votes.

In the last two years criticism of the incumbent by his constituents has gathered volume. The Moreland camp holds that with a normal turnout of Republican voters in November, the 7th will return to the G. O. P. fold by a decisive margin.

In the 8th district it appeared likely that full city hall strength is behind City Treasurer Thomas S. Gordon, picked as the congressional candidate because the Democratic incumbent, Leo Kocialkowski, had offended labor circles which wield important voting influence in the district.

This would mean that only a major upset would see the election of Mrs. Rena E. Pikiel, the G. O. P. nominee, for the machine Democrats hold tight rein in the 8th.

In the 10th, which takes in a small part of the northwest side, most of the early oratory is coming from the Democratic nominee, Corporation Counsel Jack Bairstow of Waukegan. The Republican candidate, former Congressman Ralph E. Church, is expected to follow his old custom of commuter campaigning, greeting voters personally as they board or leave Chicago bound suburban trains.

The Democrats have indicated by their early efforts that they see in Bairstow one of the most potent challengers to the Republicans, who have kept the district ever since it was carved out of the 1901 reapportionment. In 1912 a Progressive Republican [Bull Moose], C. M. Thomson, nosed out Congressman George E. Foss, but otherwise only regular Republicans have represented the 10th without interruption.

VFW Auxiliary Arranging Party for Service Men

The auxiliary of the Chicago Flagship, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold a dinner dance in tribute to 50 men from the Chicago Service Men's center Saturday evening in the Paul Revere clubhouse, 2507 Irving Park road. Mrs. Joseph H. Donahue and Miss Marguerite O'Shea are co-chairmen, assisted by Mrs. Jean Shoard, Mrs. Lillian Krier, Miss Jennie Cohen, Mrs. Nina Posselt, and Mrs. Jessica Goldsmith.

Youths Launch Arlington Heights Cadet Squadron

Thirteen youths from Arlington Heights last week made application to become army air cadets in a movement to create their own air squadron.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Robert W. Jacobs, 19, and William H. Oas, 21, both of Arlington Heights, wanted to become air cadets. So did some of their friends.

Why couldn't the young men in Arlington Heights and vicinity form their own air squadron in the U. S. army air forces, Robert and William asked themselves. The two flying enthusiasts began to talk enlistment to all the boys they met in drug stores, along the street, in offices, parks. Last week 11 youths went with Robert and William to the office of Maj. Floyd M. Showalter, president of the examining board, Chicago area, for aviation cadets, to fill out application blanks.

These 13 lads are the forerunners of a 60 man squadron. Civic groups in the neighborhood have joined the movement. The major's office, too, praised the boys and their plan.

the senate by John T. Dempsey, the youthful chairman of the Cook county Republican central committee. Their friendship is a factor, as is Dempsey's realization of the value of a single additional place in the senate to his party.

Sen. Frank J. Huckin Jr., the Democratic incumbent, won 5 to 3 in the primary over the total vote of four opponents. He is the regular Democratic organization man.

The G. O. P. entries in the house race are Rep. Elroy C. Sandquist and Eugene L. Nusser, 34th ward committeemen. The Democrats now have two of the three seats, held by Representatives Stanley R. Kosinski and Raymond T. O'Keefe. The machine denied Rep. O'Keefe his place and he made a gallant but unsuccessful fight in the primary. Nominated in his place was Jacob A. Mueller, 68 years old, an employé of the county treasurer.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DISTRICT

[Parts of Wards 26, 28, 32, and 33.]

John Turchany, Republican who has long been active in the Division Street YMCA, is very active in his fight for the seat occupied by Sen. Stanley J. Mondala. Turchany has a signboard atop his automobile. Resembling a blimp, this sign states that the candidate is concerned about jobs for the men who return from war: "Keep 'em flying today. Keep 'em working tomorrow."

Mondala was elected in 1940 to fill a death vacancy. He is an engineer and former professional football player. The district has long been Democratic. Confident, the Democrats are seeking a clean sweep of all three house seats.

FORTY-FIRST DISTRICT

[Du Page and Will counties.]

Sen. Richard J. Barr, Republican who has established a national record by his 40 years' service in the senate, has no intention of stopping now. His opponent is Otto J. Hruby of Hinsdale, who was the only person to file in the Democratic primary. There is no house contest.

One hundred questions and answers about dog care are posted at the parks for owners to study. In the preliminaries they will be asked 25 of these questions at random.

Collie to Perform.

In the local shows William McNurney of Fox River Grove and the Red Star auxiliary of the Anti-Cruelty society of Chicago will give demonstrations. McNurney will show his collie, Locha Ber Ladbuch, said to be one of the few collies with a utility rating from the American Kennel club.

The Red Star group, of which Sally Kiemele, 6515 South Keeler avenue, is president, will demonstrate care of dogs in air raid or other war emergencies.

Charles Koerner, 2451 South La Salle street, is principal handler for the Companion Shepherd Dog club, which will give an exhibition of the uses of dogs as guards and retrievers in wartime at the final judging.

TURNS OVER FOUR ROOMS OF HOME TO TOWN LIBRARY

Itasca Woman Keeps a Kindergarten, Too.

Itasca, a village with a population of only 1,000, has a library of 9,000 books and enough souvenirs saved from pioneer days to start a museum. This is because one resident, Mrs. L. A. McKenzie, insists on it even if she has to do all the work herself.

From 1920 to 1930 Itasca's population stood at 594. When Mrs. McKenzie, a former school teacher, moved to Itasca in 1910 the village had 250 population, no library, no woman's club, no literary society. Mr. McKenzie came to town as agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad depot and held the job for a quarter of a century when he retired. If the McKenzie's hadn't moved to town, Itasca today might not have a library, a woman's club, relics of its pioneer days, nor a kindergarten.

Physician Town Founder.

Dr. Elijah J. Smith was the first person to start Itasca history and Mrs. McKenzie has continued the chapters. Dr. Smith, a physician in ill health and seeking a better climate, rode into the northwest prairies on horseback from New Jersey one day in 1841, liked the place and went back to fetch his bride.

The next exciting chapter begins with the arrival of the McKenzies in 1910. For a while Mrs. McKenzie was busy rearing her children and doing substitute teaching thru the county. She became a personal friend of Mrs. Frank Smith, the last surviving member of the founder's family. In 1923 Mrs. Smith sold the McKenzies the old Smith home with its hand carved pillars.

Old Home Kept the Same.

Mrs. McKenzie has preserved the old house. The same iron pump stands in the spacious front yard and the same carved ballisters lead up the front stairway.

At first Mrs. McKenzie helped with the study club at the Presbyterian church. When the World War broke on the serenity of the village, she organized a Red Cross unit and was chairman of the Council of Defense for Addison township. In 1924 she founded the Itasca Woman's club with the help of interested neighbors and served as president for eight years.

Three years later the young club started a major project, a dream that Mrs. McKenzie had since she moved to town. The club founded a library in a tiny real estate office in the center of town. But the depression came and the project lagged.

Takes Books to Home.

When all hope was gone Mrs. McKenzie acted. She bundled up the books and moved them all—card catalog and everything—right into her own living room. She gives over four rooms of her home to the library which has now grown to 9,000 books and she gives her every afternoon and two evenings a week as librarian. She pays for the heat, the light and the upkeep.

Since the old house has 14 rooms and Mrs. McKenzie still had mornings left over, she acted promptly when someone complained that Itasca had no kindergarten. Her years of teaching experience fit her for the job of founding a private kindergarten in her rambling home.

Mrs. McKenzie's unusual devotion to her home town is not without honor. In 1929 she was presented a certificate by the Illinois Federation of Woman's club department of education "in recognition of her unselfish service."

Adopts Itasca's Homeless Library

Mrs. L. A. McKenzie of Itasca has insisted that her village have culture. In the depths of the depression when the library founded by the woman's club which she founded went begging from lack of funds, Mrs. McKenzie moved the library, lock, stock, and barrel, into her home and has served the village ever since as its unpaid librarian. She founded a kindergarten and has done enough research into the history of Itasca to start a museum.

G. O. P. SEEKS MORE ASSEMBLY SEATS

G. O. P. VICTORY SEEN IN NEGRO CONGRESS VOTE

Turncoat Politics of Dawson Cited.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Because it always takes its politics seriously, but more particularly this year because party sentiment is in a state of change, the little 1st district, stronghold of Chicago's colored vote, set the pace in the early congressional campaigning last week.

G. O. P. leaders report a rising tide of votes they are confident will elect the first Republican representative for the district since Oscar De Priest fell before Arthur W. Mitchell in 1934. Mitchell was the first Democrat to represent the district since 1902, when Martin Emerich nosed out Martin B. Madden. Two years later Madden was elected to the first of 12 consecutive terms.

Traditionally G. O. P.

Several factors contribute to this Republican revival. One is the fact that the colored voter is traditionally of G. O. P. leaning. Another is the fact that the patronage starved Republicans in the district took new heart from the drubbing their revamped organization gave the bipartisan Dan Serritella forces in this year's primary.

Hobart E. Neff was the man who took the G. O. P. nomination for state senator away from Serritella. He did this largely with the help of the Business Men's committee. In his camp were such men as Bernard S. Black, state lodging house inspector and 1st ward leader for the committee, and former State Sen. William E. King, the congressional nominee this year. King is a beneficiary of the growing power of this combination.

A third factor is the revulsion that has followed the party switch made recently by William L. Dawson, the Democratic nominee this year who carried the G. O. P. banner against Mitchell in the 1938 election. Dawson presumably was rewarded by the Democrats for the good work he did in their behalf when he was nominally a Republican.

Criticize Dawson Shift.

Colored voters who criticize Dawson declare that only a man of strong convictions is worthy of representing them in the national congress.

King, who lost to Mitchell by only 3,943 votes in 1940, has predicted he will defeat Dawson by a decisive margin this year. He and his followers say they expect to wipe out the usual Democratic margin in the 1st ward on Nov. 3, and to pick up more than enough to win in the 2d, home ward of both candidates.

Something new has been added to the campaign in the 3d district—a vigor usually shown only by candidates for local office, where Fred E. Busbey, Republican, is putting up a lively fight against the Democratic incumbent, Edward A. Kelly.

Busbey Out Campaigning.

Taking advantage of the fact that G. O. P. forces in his district are showing the greatest unity in several years, Busbey is bolstering organization effort with a personal campaign that has kept him busy thruout the summer in the southern and southwestern country towns.

Busbey, an orator of no mean sort, has the experience of 21 years on the lecture platform, principally as Americanism worker for the American Legion. He is past state director of Americanism for the Legion.

One evidence of the growing G. O. P. unity in the 3d district is provided by the enthusiasm behind the Republican Round Table meetings in the 17th ward, almost wholly contained within the 3d. These open forum meetings, which quickly outgrew their starting place, are now held in the Rowantrees hotel at 8 o'clock each Monday evening. The chairman is Waldemar J. Roehler, G. O. P. congressional nominee in 1940.

Gets Big Reception.

Busbey was given a rousing reception in a recent appearance as guest speaker, as was Thomas J. Downs, Republican nominee in the 2d congressional district. Tomorrow Chauncey W. McCormick, civic leader, will address the meeting on "the local importance and world-wide significance of a Republican victory in Illinois."

Things were relatively quiet last week in the 2d and 4th districts, where Democratic nominees slated by the city hall in place of the incumbents are favored to win in November.

In the 2d, Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], a veteran of the city council, is supplanting Congressman Raymond S. McKeough, Democratic nominee for United States senator. His G. O. P. opponent is Thomas J. Downs, who first rose to political prominence as head of the Illinois Young Republican organization.

In 4th District.

In the 4th, where Congressman Harry P. Beam is retiring to run for the Municipal court bench, full city hall machine support is behind Martin Gorski, a master in chancery. Arthur Joseph Rutshaw, a former state representative, was called from political retirement to carry the G. O. P. colors.

The 6th district, which takes in a big area of the southwest side, is developing a lively fight between former Congressman Thomas J. O'Brien, who is ending his term as Cook county sheriff, and Raymond E. Trafelet of Berwyn,

Only the Fifth Grade Lacks a Venegas Child

BY JEANNE McCARTHY.

Eight of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Venegas' 13 children were in attendance last week when classes began at the Hamline elementary school, 48th and Bishop streets. There is one of the family in each grade, except fifth. Daniel, 16, and Gloria, 14, are in eighth. Both expect to graduate in February. Bertha is 13, and in seventh grade; Ofelia, 12, in sixth; Mina, 11, in fourth; Raul, 9, in third; William, 8, in second, and Hortense, 6, in first. Hortense answers more enthusiastically to the name of "Tangy."

Henry, Jr., 22, is the eldest in the family. He's married ,and lives within hand-shaking distance of his family. A narrow gangway separates the two residences. The Venegas family lives at 1417 West 47th street, and Henry, Jr., lives next door. Both live on the second floor. He works downstairs for the Dependable Beef company. "He's always on time for lunch," Bertha said.

Frankie Is Youngest.

Aurelius is 19, and a steel worker in South Chicago. He works at the South Works of Carnegie Illinois Steel corporation. Alfonso, 18, a graduate of Tilden, is just between jobs. The youngest of the family is Frankie, who had his second birthday last week. Arnold, 4, is the second youngest.

The Venegas family occupies an eight room flat. The rooms are large, and there's an abundance of beds, but even so the two davenports in the front of the house are pressed into use when night falls.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Venegas are employed in the stockyards. Mrs. Venegas cuts sausages by night; her husband works by day. "They see each other on Sundays," Gloria said.

Mrs. Venegas started working a few months ago when she wearied of sitting around the house. "She said there wasn't enough to do," Gloria said. Now that school's started, their grandmother has come to stay with the younger children.

Cooking Plus Music.

Gloria and Bertha have been in charge of the kitchen since their mother went to work. They're experienced cooks, because their mother taugh them years ago. They usually take turns on the job, and it's worked out fine. When Gloria hasn't wanted to cook, Bertha has. Bertha usually accompanies her work with singing. The family says she's very good. Her school thinks so, too, because she's had the lead in a number of operettas.

The children drink great quantities of milk, and eat an abundance of toritillas and frijoles. Tortillas—both the parents were born in Mexico—are the Mexican equivalent of bread, and frijoles, a bean concoction. When there are tortillas for lunch—and this is as often as it's possible—they usually serve 120 of them, and they are all consumed. Two pounds of pinto beans usually supplied the family for one meal.

There's always a great many people in the Venegas home, because the neighbors drop their children off when they have to visit the children's clinic, or do an errand. They know they'll always find someone at home at the Venegas.

Most Are Musical.

They all clean the house together. They send the laundry out, except for the colored clothes. They wash there in the washing machine in the bathroom. A number of the children are very musical, and for a time they took piano lessons at the University of Chicago settlement. When one took a lesson, the rest of the family trooped over to sit and watch admiringly. This gradually stopped, tho, as the novelty of the lessons wore off. An added stimulus was the music teacher's suggestion that it would be better if the student came alone.

Six of them started music, but when they didn't all progress rapidly, Mrs. Venegas narrowed the field. Right now, the girls are busy learning to sew on the sewing machine. Mrs. Venegas is quite expert, and Gloria, Bertha, Ofelia, and Mina are learning, too. Curfew rings at 9 o'clock, and Mr. Venegas enforces it.

10,935 REGISTER IN WILL COUNTY FOR NOV. 3 VOTE

Sign 1,100 at Peotone Fair Branch Office.

The establishment of a traveling branch registration office in Will county last week made 1,100 more county residents eligible to vote in the Nov. 3 election. During the week, nearly 4,000 persons registered as required by the permanent registration act, in effect this year for the first time in many parts of the state. To date, there are 10,935 persons of a possible 75,000 registered to vote in Will county. The 4,000 increase represents the largest registration in recent weeks in the county.

Office Set Up at Fair.

The 1,100 were registered at the Peotone fair, where the county clerk, Joseph H. Hartley, set up a branch office. This was the first branch established in Will county since Attorney General George F. Barrett ruled their establishment legal. A branch was set up yesterday at Wheatland, where the annual Wheatland plowing match was held. An additional thousand registrants were expected. They are coming into the clerk's office now at the rate of 500 per day.

In Kankakee county, better than two-thirds of the entire voting population has been registered. Of Kankakee's possible 30,000 voters, 20,600 are eligible to vote. One branch office will be set up this week in Bonfield, where a county clerk's deputy will register voters in the general store between 1 and 9 o'clock.

All Stations Open Saturday.

The first general registration day is Saturday, when all precinct voting stations will be open to register residents. The establishment of other branch offices will be dependent upon the results of Saturday's registration. The final registration day will be Tuesday, Oct. 6. Branch offices were set up in Kankakee immediately after the attorney general decreed it legal.

TAKE INITIATIVE IN SOUTHWEST DISTRICT RACES

Present Margin Over Democrats Is Slim.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Republicans are taking the offensive in the state legislative campaign starting this week in southwest districts where Democrats now hold the edge. The Democrats have more to lose in this series of contests than the Republicans.

A few votes separate the two parties in the Illinois house of representatives. In 1938 the Republicans recaptured nominal control, 79 to 74, but it meant little because several "paper Republicans" went along with the Democrats who still wielded the patronage.

Last election—1940—the G. O. P. repeated the score of 79 to 74, but also took the governorship and several other state offices. Backed by power, the small margin was fairly reliable at first but as the session wore on was nearly wiped out by death and illness.

G. O. P. Wants More Margin.

Alert from these experiences, the Republican leaders are now stirring up the organization to get busy and persuade voters to give them a more workable margin in the house, and in the senate, too, while they're at it. Otherwise the Green administration's wartime measures will be hamstrung in the 1943 session, leaders say.

Last year's session showed the 28 to 23 G. O. P. lead in the senate to be unsatisfactory, partly because the margin included a couple of Republicans whose party regularity was a sight to see, if you could wait long enough to see it.

In addition to the 26 odd numbered districts thruout the state, senate seats for three even numbered districts where there are vacancies will be filled Nov. 3. This total of 29 seats is now occupied by 15 Republicans and 14 Democrats. However, G. O. P. leaders profess to believe that the Republican seats are generally more "solid" than most Democratic seats.

Democrats Risk More Seats.

In Cook county, there are 13 Democratic seats at stake and only three Republican seats to fight about. On its face, this shows that the Democrats must risk greater losses here than the G. O. P.

On the southwest side four of the six senate seats to be filled Nov. 3 are held by Democrats. The Republicans are going to try mighty hard to get at least one or two of the Democratic seats. Even one would be considered a valuable gain by the Green administration.

All 153 house seats in Illinois are filled each election, altho about half are settled for in the primary, under the "setup" system. A district's senatorial committees—one for either party—can decide to nominate only three candidates for three house seats; thus the voters have no choice in the November balloting.

Five "Setup" Districts.

In the southwest section, five of the eight districts have thus for all practical purposes filled their house seats in advance of Nov. 3. Voters can mark for or against the 15 "setup" candidates, but it will not affect the outcome.

Two of these "setup" districts had contests last election. They are the 14th district [Kane and Kendall counties] and the 41st district [Will and Du Page counties].

One of the contest districts, the 3d [parts of wards 1, 2, 4, and 11], has been a "setup" for many years heretofore. However, this time the Democrats have determined to go after the odd house seat, which they relinquished to the G. O. P. for reasons of their own when they had the votes to get it.

THIRD DISTRICT

Democrats are trying to protect their senate seat in this old time Republican territory. It was held by William A. Wallace, who was dumped by his Democratic sponsors in the primary. The organization choice, Christopher C. Wimbish, is opposed by Benjamin G. Clanton, the Republican standard bearer. Some reports say the G. O. P. has the best fall crop of prospects in years in this area.

The veteran Democratic house member, Rep. George Garry Noonan, has been given a teammate, Fred J. Smith, a court clerk. Determined to hold on to the two G. O. P. house seats are the present possesosrs, Representatives Charles J. Jenkins and Dudley S. Martin.

FOURTH DISTRICT

[Ward 14 and parts of wards 2, 3, 11, 12, 13, and 15.]

Senatorship not up this year. House candidates as good as elected in a "setup."

SEVENTH DISTRICT

[Most country townships in Cook county.]

There is little chance of the Democrats upsetting Sen. Arthur J. Bid-

MORE ASSEMBLY SEATS IS GOAL OF REPUBLICANS

Southwest District Races Start in Earnest.

will this year, his G. O. P. backers believe, altho the new district residents who work in the war plants are an unknown factor. Bidwill was elected by a narrow margin in 1936 and served four months before the Democratic majortiy in the senate ousted him and seated his opponent. He was reëlected in 1938.

Mack D. Falknor of Morton Grove is the Democratic senate entry.

NINTH DISTRICT

Andrew Toman, veteran employé of Armour & Co., is the Republican primary choice to tackle the tough assignment of getting the seat held by Sen. Richard J. Daley. Young Daley has rapidly become one of the leaders in the legislature and in Democratic councils; he took part in the recent conference to draft their state platform.

There is no contest for the three house seats.

ELEVENTH DISTRICT

[Wards 16 and 18 and parts of wards 3, 13, 15, 17, and 19.]

Republicans are hopeful of getting this district back to their side. Sen. John M. Lee, Democrat who is chief deputy sheriff, is opposed by Arthur T. Weatherwax.

THIRTEENTH DISTRICT

[Wards 7, 8, 9, and 10. parts of wards 6, 17, and 10; also that part of Calumet township outside of Chicago.]

Walker Butler, former assistant state's attorney, is girding himself to tackle Sen. Francis J. Loughran on behalf of the Republicans.

Speaker Elmer J. Schnackenberg of the Illinois house of representatives is a Republican candidate from this district. Ragnar G. Nelson is paired with him to try to get the odd house seat away from the Democrats. Incumbents of the opposition are Representatives Adam S. Mioduski and John G. Ryan.

FORTY-FIRST DISTRICT

[Du Page and Will countries.]

Ripe and mellow, Sen. Richard J. Barr of Joliet, has been Republican spokesman for this district in the upper house for 40 years and has no intention of giving up the privilege now. His Democratic opponent is Otto J. Hruby of Hinsdale.

Film Star Aids Bond Sale

5,000 to Attend 132d Anniversary Fete.

The 132d anniversary of Mexico's declaration of independence from Spain will be celebrated Tuesday evening in song and speech at the Ashland auditorium, Van Buren street and Ashland boulevard. Five thousand Mexicans from southwest Chicago's packing house district, the west side, South Chicago, Indiana Harbor, and other Mexican colonies in metropolitan Chicago are expected to attend.

This year's celebration will have a new significance as it marks the first time that Mexico and the United States have been allied in war. The collaboration between the two countries for the common cause will be stressed by speakers. Carlos Palacios Roji, Mexican consul of Chicago, and Joseph H. Spear, executive director of the Pan-American council, will speak.

At 11 o'clock a colorful demonstration will be staged as the Mexicans shout "Viva Mexico, viva la independencia, y viven los heroes!" as their ancestors did in 1810, when Father Hidalgo launched the rebellion against Spanish domination.

A program of entertainment will intersperse the addresses. Onit will be several southwest residents, Estelle and Olga Plaza, Ignacio Ramirez, Diego Rosa, Manuelita Moralez, and others. The Durango trio and Belen Ortega of Mexico will entertain also. Dancing will follow the program.

The Comite Patriotico Oficial is the sponsoring committee. Luis Acosta is president of the group and chairman of the celebration. Members of Mexican societies thruout the area are working with him.

1. QUALITY MATERIALS
The kind of shingles Hines recommends weigh 240 lbs. to the 100 sq. ft. We know that in lighter weight roofings you get too much slate—and not enough asphalt and felt to give the roof lasting qualities.

2. QUALITY WORKMANSHIP!
Hines makes no profit on labor. You deal directly with the men who work on the job, and thus get the most for your money. Hines is interested in the sale of quality material only, and in providing work for our many contractor customers whom we know as reliable, conscientious men.

Use HINES Budget Plan
It only costs a little more each month to buy a good roof which will give years of satisfactory service. Terms can be arranged on Hines-FHA Budget Plan to suit your convenience. You can always depend on Hines quality materials! Why be satisfied with less!

BRITISH RADIO PROPOSES TO GET RID OF CROONERS

Ban on Jazzing Classics Ordered Also.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The British Broadcasting corporation has launched a movement to get rid of radio crooners. At the end of the third year of the war the BBC reports that it has noted a change in attitude on the part of the public with regard to the warblers of oversentimental songs. The public, it states, demands something more robust. So the BBC is undertaking to satisfy that demand.

Apparently the British campaign has no reference to Rudy Vallee, Morton Downey, and Bing Crosby, all of whom have been called crooners by Americans. The British apparently have in mind their own special types of whispering tenors.

Ban on Borrowed Tunes.

The BBC also is putting a ban on tunes borrowed from the classics. The new dance music policy of the BBC, which applies to the short wave transmissions to America as well as music for home consumption, is set forth in the following statement:

"The BBC has recently invited all publishers of dance music and leaders of broadcasting dance bands to cooperate in a new move to bring dance music broadcasts into better tune with the present spirit of Britain and her people. In effect, the idea is to rid the air of the oversentimental crooner and the kind of song that he or she sings.

"The step does not reflect any change in attitude on the part of the BBC, nor is it a high-handed attempt to dictate public taste. For many years now the BBC has maintained and exercised its right of censorship on behalf of the vast and varied public it exists to serve.

Particular Style Disliked.

"Where the present move differs from former censorship is that a ban is now placed not on particular items of music but on a particular style of music and on a particular type of singer.

"It is a change of attitude on the part of the public that has brought this about. It is not for the BBC to discriminate between one kind of music and another. The aim has always been to offer the best in every kind—Beethoven for those who like Beethoven, crooners for those who prefer crooners.

"The borderline between sentiment and sentimentality is a difficult path to tread, and there may be occasional errors of judgment. But the BBC is confident of public support for its intention to keep, for the present, well to the right of the line."

SHOWER STALL NOW HAS WALLS OF FIBER BOARD

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

If you are remodeling to provide additional living quarters in your home or building a low cost defense home, there are interesting shower cabinets available. Their walls are made of tempered hard pressed fiber board instead of steel, and their receptors of steam cured concrete.

These are the same type of shower cabinets that are being used in army barracks and in naval training stations, and they are a tribute to the production miracles taking place all around us, and the use of substitute materials to save on critical war materials.

Early last February manufacturers of shower cabinets were summoned to Washington and asked to submit a shower unit with nonmetallic walls and precast receptor, a cabinet so constructed that there would be no more than 25 pounds of steel in its manufacture [against some 200 pounds of steel, and more, used in prewar models] since steel for shower cabinet walls, would not be available in the near future.

No More Metal Walls.

This proved no serious problem, since ingenious models for such cabinets already had been assembled.

Since that time these models have been put on the market, and their use now is mandatory.

These shower cabinet fiber board walls are finished inside and out with high temperature waterproof baked enamel. Even their shower heads and valve handles are made of plastic or iron instead of brass and the only steel found in them is in the back corner joints, the door frame, and the receptor flange.

Another development in the shower cabinet line is a metal conserving prefabricated shower enclosure of tempered structural glass.

No Metal But Screws.

These units are prefabricated at the factory, with all holes drilled and ready to install. No metal is required except the 16 screws supplied by the manufacturer. Space is saved in a house by such an installation, and plumbing, too.

The panels are solid, structural glass, some four times tougher than ordinary glass of equal thickness. They are easy to clean, impervious to water or chemicals, and they are available in eight colors.

FIRST NIGHTER TO AIR WESTERN ROMANCE TODAY

A western romance titled "Cowboy Blues" will be the starring vehicle for Les Tremayne and Barbara Luddy on the "First Nighter" program to be heard from 7 to 7:30 tonight on W-G-N. Mutual broadcasts the show at 5 p. m.

Bret Morrison.

The plot of the story, written especially for "First Nighter" by Addison Simmons, concerns two girls who decide to hasten the nuptials with two bashful cowboys but only succeed in frightening them away. The antics of the chase finally result in a double wedding.

Musical background for the drama will be supplied by Eric Sagerquist and his First Nighter orchestra. Bret Morrison will portray the rôle of Mr. First Nighter, host to the theater party at the Little Theater Off Times Square.

PORCUPINE CLUB TO HOLD OUTING AT FARM TODAY

The annual outing of the Porcupine club, now celebrating its 30th year, will be held today at Reusnow's farm, 127th street and 56th avenue, west of Blue Island. The outing, which will begin in the morning, is being directed by Paul F. Sander, assisted by Dr. M. D. Medlin, president. Music and song will be provided by the Joliet "Rock Pilers." The games will be directed by J. W. Bristol and William Fisher Jr. They will be assisted by John Kandron, John Sonneveld, Leslie V. Beck, Carl L. Goetz, Harold Schmid, and Dr. Max Wilneff. William Cummings is in charge of publicity. The organization is a social club composed of south side business men.

Married in Foster Park Church

[H. Du Bois Photo.]

In a recent ceremony at Foster Park Baptist church, Miss Helen Rae Conway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Conway, 6933 South Green street, became the bride of Robert J. Fiat, son of Mrs. Clara Fiat Kenny, 7519 Yale avenue.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 14

It is time to complete lawn making if the young grass is to survive the severe winter weather without injury. First consideration should be given the soil; it should be in good tilth, filled with humus and food, well drained, and thoroly prepared. Most city yards lack humus. If a new lawn is to be made buy manure, if possible, and spread a layer over the ground before spading. If manure is not to be had buy a bag or two of shredded cattle manure and use it in the same manner.

Tuesday, Sept. 15

Growing perennial flowering plants in shade is dependent on the kind selected. Here are a few that are recommended when the shade is not too dense: Beebalm, Virginia bluebell, sedum, plantain lily, meadowrue, lily-of-the-valley, forget-me-not, ferns [plant more ferns, for they make a lovely effect], columbine, bugle, goutweed, monkshood, daylily, and foxglove, which is grown as a perennial, but is really a biennial.

Wednesday, Sept. 16

It is time to lift and pot all plants that are intended for indoor culture. An early frost is predicted, but in any case such plants as the poinsettia should be removed indoors before cooler nights come. Give them full sunlight and never permit the soil to dry out.

Thursday, Sept. 17

Transplanting can begin about the end of the month. Shrubs should not be planted so dense they interfere with views from windows, or be so tall they cover the windows. A few choice kinds are: Japanese barberry [good for nesting places], dogwoods, Japanese oleasters, shrubby St. Johnswort, Tartarian honeysuckle, matrimony vine, snowberry, weigelia, and the viburnums.

Some of the lower growing tree forms furnish food for many birds, such as the hawthorns, flowering crab, mulberry, sumacs, redcedar, and others of equal importance. Save the leaves and start a compost heap. Start collecting mulching material for later use.

Friday, Sept. 18

Start paperwhite narcissus bulbs in soil or water and pebbles for early flowering. Madonna lilies can be planted now. Oriental poppies should be planted. They are available at supply houses.

Sow a few rows of radishes in the coldframe and enjoy them before freezing weather. Both radishes and lettuce like a mellow, rich soil. Do not water radishes too lavishly or they will split.

Considerable humus can be added to garden vegetable soil by sowing rye this fall and spading it under in early spring. It will be 4 inches high before severe weather. Harvest squash and pumpkins when thoroly ripened. Keep in a warm place.

Saturday, Sept. 19

Do not delay with trimming hedges for the last time. Stone fruits are best transplanted in spring. Give all newly planted trees plenty of water. Evergreens should never be allowed to suffer from a lack of moisture.

'STARS OF TOMORROW' SERIES TO OPEN OVER W-G-N THIS EVENING

The first of the new entertainment series, "Stars of Tomorrow," will be broadcast on W-G-N from 8 to 8:30 o'clock tonight, with six amateurs, chosen from more than 250 who auditioned at W-G-N last week, participating.

Mauri Cliffer.

Appearing on the program will be Eloise Kupfer of Milwaukee, singer and of movie stars; Norman Shickedanz, baritone, who will sing "I Love Life,"; William Benes, violin virtuoso, who will play "Estrellita"; Shirley Ross Rice, soprano, who will sing Gershwin's "Summer Time"; Mickey Scharf, comedian, and Jean Moss, who will sing "Miss You."

The six amateurs will be awarded defense stamp boutonnieres for appearing on the program, and the three voted best will be awarded wrist watches. All of the first prize winners on the first nine programs will participate on the tenth program and the winner will be awarded a $500 war bond.

Master of ceremonies on "Stars of Tomorrow" will be Mauri Cliffer, Chicago comedian. Originating in W-G-N's main audience studio, the program will be produced by Jack LaFrandre. Auditions for the program are to be held every Thursday evening at W-G-N.

CONTEST AMONG PET DOGS OPENS NEXT SATURDAY

Pedigree Means Nothing in Annual Event.

Pedigreed and just plain dogs will be on a par as children gather with their pets in parks thruout the city beginning next Saturday and continuing until a final show and the crowning of a grand champion Saturday afternoon, Sept. 26, at Waveland field in Lincoln park at the end of Addison street. The final show will climax national dog week.

Local preliminary contests will be held at Ridge park next Friday and at Palmer park Sept. 23.

J. L. Springer is park and show supervisor at Ridge park. John Sweeney of Blue Island will be chief judge and V. M. Hensler, veterinarian.

E. S. Richter is supervisor at Palmer park, where Mrs. W. Kenneth Korten and R. C. Henre will be judges. Cornelius Vanderwarf, Chicago Heights, will be veterinarian.

Plan 20 Awards.

Five awards will be given in each of four classes, with the award winners to be eligible for the final competition. There the grand champion will receive a crown and class champions will get plaques.

The awards will be not for blue blood, but for [1] the best groomed dog, [2] the best trick dog, judged on difficulty of the maneuvers and expertness with which they are executed, [3] best pet combination, considering obedience of dogs and evidence of understanding and friendship between it and its master, and [4] best informed owner.

One hundred questions and answers about dog care are posted at the parks for owners to study. In the preliminaries they will be asked 25 of these questions at random.

Collie to Perform.

In the local shows William McNurney of Fox River Grove and the Red Star auxiliary of the Anti-Cruelty society of Chicago will give demonstrations. McNurney will show his collie, Locha Ber Ladbuch, said to be one of the few collies with a utility rating from the American Kennel club.

The Red Star group, of which Sally Kiemele, 6515 South Keeler avenue, is president, will demonstrate care of dogs in air raid or other war emergencies.

Charles Koerner, 2451 South La Salle street, is principal handler for the Companion Shepherd Dog club, which will give an exhibition of the uses of dogs as guards and retrievers in wartime at the final judging.

'Have a Heart' Tag Day Aids Southwest Groups

Three southwest organizations will be among those benefitting from the annual "Have a Heart" tag day tomorrow, sponsored by the Chicago Federated Charities and the Chicago Associated Charities. These are the Morgan Park Home for Dependent Children, the Little Company of Mary hospital children's ward, and the Protestant Child's Haven. Their taggers will be headed by Mrs. Frank M. Fulton, Mrs. Ruby Planthaber, and Mrs. L. L. Clark, respectively.

START ALL OUT LEGISLATIVE BATTLE

G. O. P. VICTORY SEEN IN NEGRO CONGRESS VOTE

Turncoat Politics of Dawson Cited.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Because it always takes its politics seriously, but more particularly this year because party sentiment is in a state of change, the little 1st district, stronghold of Chicago's colored vote, set the pace in the early congressional campaigning last week.

G. O. P. leaders report a rising tide of votes they are confident will elect the first Republican representative for the district since Oscar De Priest fell before Arthur W. Mitchell in 1934. Mitchell was the first Democrat to represent the district since 1902, when Martin Emerich nosed out Martin B. Madden. Two years later Madden was elected to the first of 12 consecutive terms.

Traditionally G. O. P.

Several factors contribute to this Republican revival. One is the fact that the colored voter is traditionally of G. O. P. leaning. Another is the fact that the patronage starved Republicans in the district took new heart from the drubbing their revamped organization gave the bipartisan Dan Serritella forces in this year's primary.

Hobart E. Neff was the man who took the G. O. P. nomination for state senator away from Serritella. He did this largely with the help of the Business Men's committee. In his camp were such men as Bernard S. Black, state lodging house inspector and 1st ward leader for the committee, and former State Sen. William E. King, the congressional nominee this year. King is a beneficiary of the growing power of this combination.

A third factor is the revulsion that has followed the party switch made recently by William L. Dawson, the Democratic nominee this year who carried the G. O. P. banner against Mitchell in the 1938 election. Dawson presumably was rewarded by the Democrats for the good work he did in their behalf when he was nominally a Republican.

Criticize Dawson Shift.

Colored voters who criticize Dawson declare that only a man of strong convictions is worthy of representing them in the national congress.

King, who lost to Mitchell by only 3,943 votes in 1940, has predicted he will defeat Dawson by a decisive margin this year. He and his followers say they expect to wipe out the usual Democratic margin in the 1st ward on Nov. 3, and to pick up more than enough to win in the 2d, home ward of both candidates.

Something new has been added to the campaign in the 3d district—a vigor usually shown only by candidates for local office, where Fred E. Busbey, Republican, is putting up a lively fight against the Democratic incumbent, Edward A. Kelly.

Busbey Out Campaigning.

Taking advantage of the fact that G. O. P. forces in his district are showing the greatest unity in several years, Busbey is bolstering organization effort with a personal campaign that has kept him busy thruout the summer in the southern and southwestern country towns.

Busbey, an orator of no mean sort, has the experience of 21 years on the lecture platform, principally as Americanism worker for the American Legion. He is past state director of Americanism for the Legion.

One evidence of the growing G. O. P. unity in the 3d district is provided by the enthusiasm behind the Republican Round Table meetings in the 17th ward, almost wholly contained within the 3d. These open forum meetings, which quickly outgrew their starting place, are now held in the Rowantrees hotel at 8 o'clock each Monday evening. The chairman is Waldemar J. Roehler, G. O. P. congressional nominee in 1940.

Gets Big Reception.

Busbey was given a rousing reception in a recent appearance as guest speaker, as was Thomas J. Downs, Republican nominee in the 2d congressional district. Tomorrow Chauncey W. McCormick, civic leader, will address the meeting on "the local importance and world-wide significance of a Republican victory in Illinois."

Things were relatively quiet last week in the 2d and 4th districts, where Democratic nominees slated by the city hall in place of the incumbents are favored to win in November.

In the 2d, Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], a veteran of the city council, is supplanting Congressman Raymond S. McKeough, Democratic nominee for United States senator. His G. O. P. opponent is Thomas J. Downs, who first rose to political prominence as [illegible] the Illinois Young Republican organization.

In 4th District.

In the 4th, where Congressman Harry P. Beam is retiring to run for the Municipal court bench, full city hall machine support is behind Marvin Gorski, a master in chancery. Arthur Joseph Rutshaw, a former state representative, was called from political retirement to carry the G. O. P. colors.

The 6th district, which takes in a big area of the southwest side, is developing a lively fight between former Congressman Thomas J. O'Brien, who is ending his term as Cook county sheriff, and Raymond E. Trafelet of Berwyn.

Stress War at Woodlawn Library

The defense center of Woodlawn library is becoming a more and more popular place. Information about war training and war jobs is posted on the bulletin board. Information concerning nutrition is also distributed at the center. Two Woodlawn residents, Mrs. Emily Kelly and Dr. J. M. Sachs, inspect the bulletin board under the guidance of Miss Esther Belous, young adults and vocational advisor at the library. Mrs. J. C. Becker, foreground, discusses a book problem with Miss Dorothy Frankel, readers' advisor. Miss Frankel and Miss Belous have charge of the center. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

NAME WINNERS IN WOODLAWN HOME CONTEST

Dinner Ends Annual Garden Event.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin D. Mead, 1428 East 66th place, last night received a $25 war bond from the Woodlawn Property Owners' league for having the best all-round home and grounds in the fifth annual lawn and garden contest of the league. The contest ended last night with a banquet at International house, 1414 East 59th street.

Second award went to Mr. and Mrs. Orrin O. B. Garner of 6510 Ingleside avenue. Their prize was 50 feet of garden hose. Both the Meads and the Garners received garden encyclopedias. Judging of Woodlawn homes, gardens, and grounds began Aug. 15. Judging was done by the park district.

Janitors Are Guests.

Prizes, which were awarded at the banquet, were donated by merchants and business houses over the nation. The prizes were principally merchandise which pertained to gardening, including plants, seed, fertilizer, subscriptions to garden magazines, and merchandise certificates. Twenty-five janitors from the community who were judged to have the best lawns and gardens were guests at the banquet.

The fifth annual lawn and garden festival, of which the banquet was the finale, began in the afternoon with an exhibit by local and out of town merchants, seed houses, and nurserymen. A gardeners' forum, conducted by Frank K. Balthis, chief horticulturist of the park district, began at 4 o'clock. F. L. Eldridge of the Swift fertilizer works discussed soil conservation.

Movies of Winners.

In the evening color movies were shown of prize winning gardens and lawns. This was followed by a short takl by Neil H. Jacoby, secretary of the University of Chicago. The dinner was closed with community singing led by Dr. W. E. Bradburn, pastor of Woodlawn Methodist church. Dancing followed the banquet. The contest area was bounded by the Midway, Stony Island avenue, 67th street, and Cottage Grove avenue.

The chamber of commerce drive is designed to supplement war bond and stamp campaigns already functioning in the colored community. So far there has been no appeal directly to the business men and business groups.

Plan Bond Rallies.

The chamber of commerce plans a four point program to promote bond sales: to increase the number of merchants and shopkeepers who urge their customers to take change in defense stamps; to hold a series of war bond rallies, the first of which will be held at Du Sable High school in October; to extend the 10 per cent pay roll savings plan; and to provide speakers to press the sale of war bonds and stamps.

S. B. Fuller, chamber of commerce president, pointed out that the treasury department 10 per cent pay roll savings plan has principally been concerned with businesses which have large numbers of employés. The chamber of commerce plans to contact the small businesses and plants in its community in regard to this method of sale of war bonds and stamps. There are approximately 6,000 small businesses in the area, he reported. The organization also plans to work thru church groups. They will contact ministers and lay leaders and will provide speakers where asked for meetings.

Members of Committee.

Roosevelt Phillips heads the committee which is making plans for the drive. Members of this committee are: Marjorie Stewart Joyner, co-chairman; Mr. Fuller, J. J. Robinson, Callie Broxton, Bishop W. Smith, S. L. Moore, O. C. Buckner, Henry C. Taylor, Katherine King, William L. Little, Walter Abernathy, C. G. Price, and L. M. Quinn.

Fuller, who is general director of the drive as president of the body, is also a member of the advisory committee to the treasury department bond sales department. He is 37 years old and recently received the Robert S. Abbott Memorial award, given by the Chicago Defender, for outstanding achievement in business. Fuller, who operates a food and cosmetics manufacturing plant, was penniless when he came to Chicago in 1928 from Memphis, Tenn.

The anniversary of Mexican independence will be celebrated in speech, song, and dance. Colorful costumes, like the one worn by Miss Maria Luisa Garibay of the South Chicago Community center, will add to the pageantry of the festival.

1,500 Receive Shop Training at Dunbar High

When schools opened last week, nearly 1,500 high school age pupils enrolled at Dunbar vocational school, 4401 St. Lawrence avenue.

High school students were new in the building which hitherto has been used for vocational training of elementary age pupils. The change was made this year to meet a need for practical trade training for residents of the area, Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, said.

Most of the students are colored because the school is near the center of the city's Negro population. Enrollment, however, is not restricted as to race. It is designated as a vocational branch of Wendell Phillips High school, of which Maudelle B. Brousfield is principal.

Grade Pupils Go Elsewhere.

Elementary pupils who formerly attended Dunbar were sent to other elementary schools offering regular courses.

Students were enrolled and are attending classes temporarily in the main building, while at the rear workmen hurry to complete three new brick structures to house a machine shop, aviation shop, and automobile shop. Each measures 112 by 40 feet. They are expected to be ready in about two weeks.

Three double size portable frame buildings, measuring 25 by 75 feet, and three single unit portable structures have been set at the rear of the school also to house a sheet metal shop, a foundry, electric and radio shop, mechanical drawing room, printing shop, and a shoe rebuilding shop, each in a separate building. Two classroom buildings will be used for study of mathematics and science as related to shop courses.

Portables for Duration.

The portables and the three brick structures, all designed as temporary buildings, are to serve for the duration of the war. Then a new vocational building to serve the same area is to be erected at State and 51st streets, where the city school board already owns land. The war prevented the new building now. Priorities were obtained for the three smaller brick buildings, however.

THERE'S FIGHT FOR EVERY SEAT IN SOUTH AREA

Democrats Drop Old Bipartisan Trades.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Legislative campaigning on the south side starting this week presents more contests than in any election within memory. This results from the fact that the Democrats, having lost control in Springfield, are scrambling to pick up additional house seats in districts where they formerly defaulted to the Republicans.

A few votes in the house of representatives is all that normally separates the majority and minority parties. In 1938 the Republicans recaptured the edge, 79 to 74, but it meant little because several "paper Republicans" went along with the Democrats who still wielded the patronage club.

Last election, in 1940, the G. O. P. repeated the score of 79 to 74 for the Springfield house. By also taking over the governorship and several other state offices, they made this margin fairly reliable but as the 1941 session wore on the majority was nearly wiped out by death and illness.

Seek Bigger Margin.

Alert from these experiences, the Republican leaders are now stirring up the organization to get busy and persuade voters to give them a more workable margin in the house—and in the senate, too, while they're at it. Otherwise the Green administration's wartime measures will be threatened with defeat in the 1943 session, party leaders say.

Last year's session showed the 28 to 23 G. O. P. lead in the senate to be unsatisfactory also, partly because the margin included a couple of Republicans whose party loyalty was a sight to see, if you could wait long enough to see it.

Thruout the state, voters on Nov. 3 will fill senate seats in the 26 odd numbered districts, plus three in even-numbered districts where vacancies have occurred. This total of 29 seats is now occupied by 15 Republicans and 14 Democrats. G. O. P. leaders profess to believe, however, that the Republican seats at issue are generally more "solid" than most Democratic seats. In Cook county, there are 13 Democratic but only three Republican seats to fight about. On its face this shows that Democrats must risk greater losses here than the G. O. P.

On the south side, three Democratic senate seats are in the balance and only one Republican—and that occupied by Sen. Daniel A. Serritella, who was defeated in the April primary by Hobart E. Neff, a stocky young former football player.

A Fight All the Way.

For the first time there are house contests in all four south side districts—the 1st, 3rd, 5th, and 13th. In the 1st and 3d districts for many years the Democrats have chosen to nominate only one candidate in each district, leaving the other two seats in each for the Republicans. This friendly practice was maintained even during the recent years when the New Deal ran wild, upsetting traditional Republicanism and offering the Democrats easy terms for getting two out of three seats.

Now the Democrats cannot afford such generosity, linked tho it was with bi-partisanship.

[Parts of wards 1, 2, and 11.]

Hobart E. Neff, the former Midway footballer, now a securities executive, 37 years old, is the Republican nominee against Lawrence E. Dowd, Democratic choice and defending attorney in "1,000 and 1" handbook cases. Altho Serritella is 1st ward committeeman, Neff has an organization in this ward started by the Business Men's committee, here led by Bernard S. Black.

The teams making the race for three house seats are Rep. Earnest A. Greene and Edward A. Welters, Republicans, and Rep. Daniel A. Flannigan and Corneal A. Davis, Democrats. In the primary Welters beat out Rep. Arthur T. Broche, colleague of Serritella.

THIRD DISTRICT

Democrats are trying to protect their senate seat in this traditionally G. O. P. district. It was held by William A. Wallace, who was dumped by the Democratic machine in the primary and failed in his try against the organization choice, Christopher C. Wimbish. Wimbish is opposed by Benjamin G. Clanton, the Republican standard bearer.

The veteran Democratic house member, Rep. George Garry Noonan, has been given a teammate, Fred J. Smith, a court clerk. Determined to hold on to the two G. O. P. house seats are the present possessors, Rep. Charles J. Jenkins and Dudley S. Martin.

FIFTH DISTRICT

George D. Mills, an energetic former University of Chicago honor student, was chosen by Republican

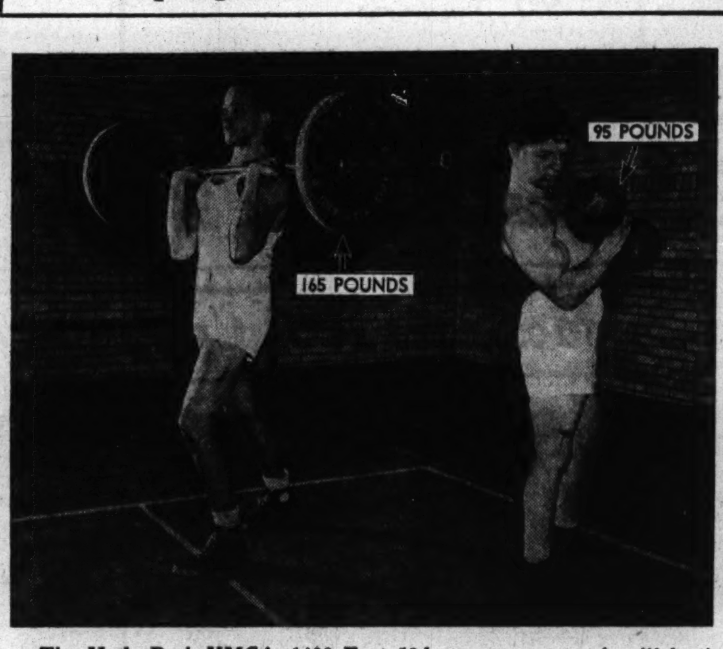
Keeping Fit for Army Service



The Hyde Park YMCA, 1400 East 53d street, next week will begin a concentrated physical fitness program for its members with special emphasis on those who soon will enter military service. Two Hyde Park residents, Jack Guerry, left, of the sales department of a meat firm, and Leo Steirs, hardware store operator, keep fit by weight lifting and barbell exercise. The weight in Guerry's arms is 165 pounds, while the bell used by Steirs weighs 95 pounds.

HYDE PARK YMCA OPENS RIGOROUS FITNESS CLASSES

Older Boys Get Army, Navy Exercises.

War activity, either on the home front or the battle field, calls for healthy bodies. To meet this need the Hyde Park YMCA, 1400 East 53d street, will open its fall physical fitness activities program tomorrow. Emphasis will be on developmental and conditioning programs for both sexes and all age groups, Fred J. Sprowles, physical education director, announced.

Exercises stressed by the army, navy, and air forces will be incorporated in the programs for men 16 years old and older. Calisthenics and conditioning classes will be held 10 times weekly. Individual progress in strength, endurance, agility, power, and organic vigor will be measured regularly by a recently developed series of fitness tests.

Stress Combative Sports.

Combative and bodily contact sports, such as wrestling, boxing, fencing, and judo, will make up the greater part of the program. Judo classes will be taught by Nelson Burton and Irvin Cahn, certified instructors of the Chicago Judo club. Boxing will be coached by Alfred Cruz, Costa Rican athlete, a student at George Williams college. Co-ed fencing classes will be directed by Irving Quale, fencing master.

Body building and conditioning programs will be given in gymnastics, weightlifting, and swimming. For those already in good condition there will be a choice of basketball, squash rackets, bandminton, handball, volleyball, and water sports.

700 Boys in Program.

A diversified program of athletics, hobbies, and recreational activities will be given to more than 700 boys who are 8 years old and older. Every boy will attend gym and swimming classes at least twice a week. In the gym the program will consist of marching, calisthenics, gymnastics, relays, and mass games.

In the pool the national YMCA swimming tests will be administered by Cody Moffat, senior student in physical education at George Williams college. Special courses in boxing, wrestling, tumbling, life saving, and basketball will be held each Saturday afternoon.

A special six week football coaching school for boys 10 to 14 years old will be held in Jackson park, beginning Saturday. Classes in riflery, photography, airplane building, and handicraft will be offered. These classes will be supervised by Gerry Grunz, boy's work secretatry, assisted by Clyde Seeley.

Classes for Housewives.

Housewives will not be neglected. They will have special morning classes Tuesdays and Fridays in calisthenics, swimming, and badminton. A series of fitness and posture tests will be given to determine the needs of individual members. This part of the program is under direction of Miss Alma J. Wylie, assisted by Miss Dorothy Ann Kidd.

SHOWER STALL NOW HAS WALLS OF FIBER BOARD

BY LOUISE BARGELT

If you are remodeling to provide additional living quarters in your home or building a low cost defense home, there are interesting shower cabinets available. Their walls are made of tempered hard pressed fiber board instead of steel, and their receptors of steam cured concrete.

These are the same type of shower cabinets that are being used in army barracks and in naval training stations, and they are a tribute to the production miracles taking place all around us, and the use of substitute materials to save on critical war materials.

Early last February manufacturers of shower cabinets were summoned to Washington and asked to submit a shower unit with nonmetallic walls and precast receptor, a cabinet so constructed that there would be no more than 25 pounds of steel in its manufacture [against some 200 pounds of steel, and more, used in prewar models] since steel for shower cabinet walls, would not be available in the near future.

No More Metal Walls.

This proved no serious problem, since ingenious models for such cabinets already had been assembled.

Since that time these models have been put on the market, and their use now is mandatory.

These shower cabinet fiber board walls are finished inside and out with high temperature waterproof baked enamel. Even their shower heads and valve handles are made of plastic or iron instead of brass and the only steel found in them is in the back corner joints, the door frame, and the receptor flange.

Another development in the shower cabinet line is a metal conserving prefabricated shower enclosure of tempered structural glass.

No Metal But Screws.

These units are prefabricated at the factory, with all holes drilled and ready to install. No metal is required except the 16 screws supplied by the manufacturer. Space is saved in a house by such an installation, and plumbing, too.

The panels are solid, structural glass, some four times tougher than ordinary glass of equal thickness. They are easy to clean, impervious to water or chemicals, and they are available in eight colors.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In a recent account of the graduation of Negro recruits from Great Lakes Training station the address of Edward Winston, 32, thru error was given as 6901 Indiana avenue. The address should read 6109 Indiana avenue.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Sept. 14

It is time to complete lawn making if the young grass is to survive the severe winter weather without injury. First consideration should be given the soil; it should be in good tilth, filled with humus and food, well drained, and thoroly prepared. Most city yards lack humus. If a new lawn is to be made buy manure, if possible, and spread a layer over the ground before spading. If manure is not to be had buy a bag or two of shredded cattle manure and use it in the same manner.

Tuesday, Sept. 15

Growing perennial flowering plants in shade is dependent on the kind selected. Here are a few that are recommended when the shade is not too dense: Beebalm, Virginia bluebell, sedum, plantain lily, meadowrue, lily-of-the-valley, forget-me-not, ferns [plant more ferns, for they make a lovely effect], columbine, bugle, goutweed, monkshood, daylily, and foxglove, which is grown as a perennial, but is really a biennial.

Wednesday, Sept. 16

It is time to lift and pot all plants that are intended for indoor culture. An early frost is predicted, but in any case such plants as the poinsettia should be removed indoors before cooler nights come. Give them full sunlight and never permit the soil to dry out.

Thursday, Sept. 17

Transplanting can begin about the end of the month. Shrubs should not be planted so dense they interfere with views from windows, or be so tall they cover the windows. A few choice kinds are: Japanese barberry [good for nesting places], dogwoods, Japanese oleasters, shrubby St. Johnswort, Tartarian honeysuckle, matrimony vine, snowberry, weigelia, and the viburnums.

Some of the lower growing tree forms furnish food for many birds, such as the hawthorns, flowering crab, mulberry, sumacs, redcedar, and others of equal importance. Save the leaves and start a compost heap. Start collecting mulching material for later use.

Friday, Sept. 18

Start paperwhite narcissus bulbs in soil or water and pebbles for early flowering. Madonna lilies can be planted now. Oriental poppies should be planted. They are available at supply houses.

Sow a few rows of radishes in the coldframe and enjoy them before freezing weather. Both radishes and lettuce like a mellow, rich soil. Do not water radishes too lavishly or they will split.

Considerable humus can be added to garden vegetable soil by sowing rye this fall and spading it under in early spring. It will be 4 inches high before severe weather. Harvest squash and pumpkins when thoroly ripened. Keep in a warm place.

Saturday, Sept. 19

Do not delay with trimming hedges for the last time. Stone fruits are best transplanted in spring. Give all newly planted trees plenty of water. Evergreens should never be allowed to suffer from a lack of moisture.

The 132d anniversary of Mexico's declaration of independence from Spain will be celebrated Tuesday evening in song and speech at the Ashland auditorium, Van Buren street and Ashland boulevard. Five thousand Mexicans from southwest Chicago's packing house district, the west side, South Chicago, Indiana Harbor, and other Mexican colonies in metropolitan Chicago are expected to attend.

This year's celebration will have a new significance as it marks the first time that Mexico and the United States have been allied in war. The collaboration between the two countries for the common cause will be stressed by speakers. Carlos Palacios Roji, Mexican consul of Chicago, and Joseph H. Spear, executive director of the Pan-American council, will speak.

At 11 o'clock a colorful demonstration will be staged as the Mexicans shout "Viva Mexico, viva la independencia, y viven los heroes!" as their ancestors did in 1810, when Father Hidalgo launched the rebellion against Spanish domination.

A program of entertainment will intersperse the addresses. Onit will be several southwest residents, Estelle and Olga Plaza, Ignacio Ramirez, Diego Rosa, Manuelita Moralez, and others. The Durango trio and Belen Ortega of Mexico will entertain also. Dancing will follow the program.

LIBRARY ROOMS SERVE AS CENTER FOR HOME FRONT

Woodlawn Branch Is a Busy Place.

The war has forced culture to take a back seat at the Woodlawn branch library, 6247 Kimbark avenue. Long a center for community study, the library is now used principally by groups studying how they may assist in the war effort on the home front rather than studying for personal pleasure.

Miss Bernadine McLaughlin, librarian, has established the rule that in making out the schedule for use of the library's meeting rooms civilian defense and Red Cross classes have priority. This has meant that many of the activities of a cultural nature which have been sponsored by the library are discontinued for the duration.

Concerts, Book Reviews Stay.

Only two parts of the library's "extracurricular" cultural program have survived the war: the recorded concerts and the book reviews. However, these phases of the former program have been limited to one meeting each during the week. Groups of the community formerly met at the library for forums and discussions of current events, art, music, and literature. Educational films were shown.

Groups of this kind have been replaced by classes dealing with the war and with living in war. There are, for example, classes in first aid, home nursing, home management, and nutrition, concerning subjects ranging from treatment of air raid victims to how to bake a cake with the use of a minimum amount of sugar. There are clothing clinics at which the housewife may be informed how to conserve clothing on hand and how to make and buy clothes properly. These classes and information outlets are offered with the coöperation of the civilian defense organization of Woodlawn.

Many in Citizenship Class.

Library workers have noted an increase in the number attending the citizenship classes, begun some time ago. Organizational meetings for OCD workers are held at the library. The sum of this activity means that the meeting rooms of the library, with the exception of Sunday, are in use morning, afternoon, and evening. In fact, there are two regular meeting rooms in the library, but the staff has managed to have four meetings simultaneously by transformation of other rooms of the building.

Before war was declared the library had established a "defense center," distributing information about industrial training and job opportunities. It does not function as an employment agency but acts as a clearing house for industrial information. Schools which give war training and the names and telephone numbers of industries which are in need of trained men are posted on the bulletin board in the center, from which men, and women, too, get leads for employment. Advice also is given concerning what books should be read if the war worker desires to brush up on information concerning his job.

voters in the primary to wrest the senatorship away from Sen. John B. Geary, son of Joseph P. Geary, 4th ward Democratic committeeman.

Here the G. O. P. has Rep. Noble W. Lee, associate dean of the John Marshall Law school, and Rep. William J. Warfield in the house race. Nelson was nominated with him by Republicans to try for the second house seat out of three. The Democrats running again are Reps. Adam S. Midouski and John G. Ryan, organization choices.

BRITISH RADIO PROPOSES TO GET RID OF CROONERS

Ban on Jazzing Classics Ordered Also.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The British Broadcasting corporation has launched a movement to get rid of radio crooners. At the end of the third year of the war the BBC reports that it has noted a change in attitude on the part of the public with regard to the warblers of oversentimental songs. The public, it states, demands something more robust. So the BBC is undertaking to satisfy that demand.

Apparently the British campaign has no reference to Rudy Vallee, Morton Downey, and Bing Crosby, all of whom have been called crooners by Americans. The British apparently have in mind their own special types of whispering tenors.

Ban on Borrowed Tunes.

The BBC also is putting a ban on tunes borrowed from the classics. The new dance music policy of the BBC, which applies to the short wave transmissions to America as well as music for home consumption, is set forth in the following statement:

"The BBC has recently invited all publishers of dance music and leaders of broadcasting dance bands to cooperate in a new move to bring dance music broadcasts into better tune with the present spirit of Britain and her people. In effect, the idea is to rid the air of the oversentimental crooner and the kind of song that he or she sings.

"The step does not reflect any change in attitude on the part of the BBC, nor is it a high-handed attempt to dictate public taste. For many years now the BBC has maintained and exercised its right of censorship on behalf of the vast and varied public it exists to serve.

Particular Style Disliked.

"Where the present move differs from former censorship is that a ban is now placed not on particular items of music but on a particular style of music and on a particular type of singer.

"It is a change of attitude on the part of the public that has brought this about. It is not for the BBC to discriminate between one kind of music and another. The aim has always been to offer the best in every kind—Beethoven for those who like Beethoven, crooners for those who prefer crooners.

"The borderline between sentiment and sentimentality is a difficult path to tread, and there may be occasional errors of judgment. But the BBC is confident of public support for its intention to keep, for the present, well to the right of the line."

'STARS OF TOMORROW' SERIES TO OPEN OVER W-G-N THIS EVENING

The first of the new entertainment series, "Stars of Tomorrow," will be broadcast on W-G-N from 8 to 8:30 o'clock tonight, with six amateurs, chosen from more than 250 who auditioned at W-G-N last week, participating.

Mauri Cliffer.

Appearing on the program will be Eloise Kupfer of Milwaukee, singer and of movie stars; Norman Shickedanz, baritone, who will sing "I Love Life,"; William Benes, violin virtuoso, who will play "Estrellita"; Shirley Ross Rice, soprano, who will sing Gershwin's "Summer Time"; Mickey Scharf, comedian, and Jean Moss, who will sing "Miss You."

The six amateurs will be awarded defense stamp boutonnieres for appearing on the program, and the three voted best will be awarded wrist watches. All of the first prize winners on the first nine programs will participate on the tenth program and the winner will be awarded a $500 war bond.

Master of ceremonies on "Stars of Tomorrow" will be Mauri Cliffer, Chicago comedian. Originating in W-G-N's main audience studio, the program will be produced by Jack LaFrandre. Auditions for the program are to be held every Thursday evening at W-G-N.

NEW GROUP GIVES BREAKFASTS FOR S. SIDE DRAFTEES

Serves as Women's Corps for OCD.

The lady lieutenants of the South Shore Women's War Activities will be hostesses at a 6 o'clock breakfast Tuesday morning at OCD headquarters, 2454 East 75th street, for 60 young men who have been called to service.

This breakfast will be the 22d the organization has given. The men who have been guests at the breakfasts have been draftees from local boards No. 12 and No. 90.

The breakfast program involves early rising. Two weeks ago, for example, the breakfast was held at 4:30 o'clock in the morning. The breakfasts never are later than 6 o'clock.

Coöperate with OCD.

There are 160 lady lieutenants in the community. About 200 more women are members of the organization which has a five point program: to coöperate in the war effort in every way; to assist the civilian defense organization thru coöperation with the block captains and to enlist the services of all women of the community; to build morale and good will among neighbors; to provide entertainment for service men and assistance to their families, and to bring all phases of civilian defense to every resident of the south shore community.

The group which leaves Tuesday will be the largest that the organization has entertained and are from board No. 12. The women have issued an emergency call for coffee pots, card tables, cigarets, and food. Mrs. George Spencer is chairman of women's activities. She is assisted by Mrs. Thomas Leary, who is assistant to the community OCD commander, Harry O. Hargrove. The breakfast parties are usually closed with community singing. In some instances the members of the group provide automobiles to take the selectees to the uptown induction station.

A Unique Organization.

This is the only organization of its type on the south side. It was organized about four months ago principally thru the efforts of Mrs. Spencer. Mrs. Margaret Bender, chairman of publicity, reports that the OCD wishes other communities to consider formation of such an organization. The growth of the Women's War Activities had been observed by OCD officials in the light of an experiment.

A closer tie with the OCD organization is to be made when the lady lieutenants are placed in charge of air raid shelters. To qualify for the duty the women are taking the prescribed air raid warden instruction. When the organization is enlarged to include more than one community supervisors will be appointed in the various OCD zones.

To get cigarets to be distributed at the breakfast parties Women's Activities will stage a garden party and dessert luncheon Thursday at 1 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Bessie Latham, 8108 Jeffery avenue. Admission will be a package of cigarets.

The weeks since July 23, when they left home for the University of Iowa campus, have brought a decided change in the daily routine of members of Du Page county's own White Eagles squadron of navy aviation cadets. At salute in the foreground, left to right, are Cadets John McGuire, Downers Grove, and Carl Kant, Lombard. In the rear are Cadets Donald Olsen, Robert Belanger, and Harry Field, all of Glen Ellyn. The men are enthusiastic and eager in their quest for golden wings.

The training is rigorous, but some of the best known experts in athletics are in charge of the conditioning at the preflight school. On the obstacle course ladder, left to right, are Cadets Robert Diehl, Elmhurst; Emil Berger and Charles Venturoni of Wheaton, and Donald Olsen, Glen Ellyn.

Cadets Olsen, Diehl, and Venturoni take the wall on the obstacle course. Watching is Ensign Robert Grieve, former University of Illinois football and track star.

Talking of back home memories in common, left to right, are Cadets Judson Doane, Aurora, Kant, McGuire, and Field. Cadet Berger listens from the top of a plane.

White Eagles Grow Muscles and Wings, Too

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

When I asked the ensign about the Du Page county White Eagles squadron he answered by leading the way to a field on the University of Iowa campus where hundreds of naval aviation cadets were engaged strenuously in a dozen different activities. The ensign turned to me and said: "The White Eagles are in there 'taking it'."

In one corner of the field was a score or more of lively boxing matches. At another point members of a platoon were struggling "hand to hand." Here was a rough and tumble pushball game, and over there the workout of a football squad. A group was going thru the gruelling process of covering the obstacle course, and close by a military company drilled at a fast cadence. I asked about the stepped up cadence.

"Planes go swifter these days," the ensign replied brisky. "You're going to tell me it's tough out there. It is, but what counts is that the cadets are being toughened to it properly."

They Must Be Fit.

I spoke again about the White Eagle squadron.

"Let's see," the ensign reflected, "they came down here on July 23. That means they're about half way thru their preflight course. They've been in there 'taking it' for some time."

The ensign emphasized four requirements of a pilot—stamina, agility, coördination, and the will to win. "There," he nodded, "you have the reason for all this and why we have here some of the best athletic experts in the country. When they get thru your White Eagles will be able to handle themselves, physically, in any emergency. Planes are more maneuverable these days, and it takes more than the average person to get the most out of them."

My afternoon at the field and at the swimming pool, where the test demanded that a cadet be able to convert his trousers into water wings, left me well willing to pay due homage to men at the school who were preparing to give their last ounce of energy in aiding their country on to victory.

All Gain Weight.

I caught up with Robert Belanger and Donald Olsen of Glen Ellyn and Emil Berger and Charles Venturoni of Wheaton on the way to their room in the quadrangle. They were among the 14 White Eagles to leave Du Page county together.

"We got over our aches the first week," grinned Belanger. "Since then we've all gained weight and feel better than we ever have in our lives. We can fairly feel our muscles toughen."

I asked Olson about his missing front tooth.

"I lost it the fourth day I was out here boxing, had it replaced, and lost it again two weeks later in a wrestling bout with Belanger."

I suggested that the folks back home might want to know if they slept and ate well.

"Sleep?" echoed Berger. "You don't know whether you do or not. You lie down, and the next second the night's gone. And the meals are

These Greeks Have a Word—It's Patriotism

All four sons of Mr. and Mrs. George B. De Dakis, 5439 Flournoy street, are now in the United States armed services. The parents are proud of that, but it's nothing so unusual, to them. "With us it is traditional that the males should shoulder arms whenever the call of their country presents itself," declares the father.

George De Dakis knows whereof he speaks. Back in 1897, when he was a young man in Greece, he fought in the Greco-Turkish war which freed Crete of Turkish rule. He wanted to fight again in 1917, but by that time the family had come to this country, and his responsibilities in keeping his wife and four small sons held him back. Today those four sons are going to battle.

Points to Spartan Code.

In the eloquence of his native tongue, Mr. De Dakis explains it thus: "From the morning of my sons' lives, as a true Hellene following always the traditions of a Spartan father, I endeavored to inculcate into them the military training and martial aptitude. I ever reminded them that the ancient Spartan axiom should be perpetually in their minds—'Victory shall be your goal and not defeat.'"

Oldest of the brothers is Capt. Nicholas George De Dakis, 34, who is at Camp Adair in Oregon. He was born in Athens, Greece, as were both his parents. They brought him to this country when he was 5 years old. A lawyer, he graduated from Lane High school and the University of Chicago. He has a wife, and a baby daughter, Georgia Ann, 6 months old.

Served in Philippines.

Thomas, 30, is an instructor in the advance air force technical school at Lincoln, Neb., where he was transferred recently from Chanute field. A graduate of Austin High school and Crane Junior college, he served three years with the army in the Philippines before his transfer to Rantoul in 1939. He also is married, and has one daughter, Mary Ann, 3 months old.

Lieut. James De Dakis, 26, was a chemical engineer before he went into the army air corps. He is stationed at Fort Knox, Kentucky. He is married, and has a son, James Jr., 5 years old.

The youngest DeDakis son, Samuel, 24, is a cadet, training to become an aviator at Sheppard field, Texas.

Mr. De Dakis is vice president of the Mid-City Dairy company, 1110 Monroe street. His only daughter, Lillian, works for the treasury department in the Merchandise Mart.

NINE PLACES AT SPRINGFIELD ARE AT STAKE

Republicans Seek 6 from Democrats.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Nearly all of the action in the west side legislative campaign starting this week will be concentrated on state senate seats, which are at stake in nine of eleven districts in this section.

Democrats now have six of these senate seats, which means that the Republicans have more targets to shoot at than their opponents.

In last year's session of the state lawmakers the Republicans held a lead of 28 to 23 in the senate. This margin was not always satisfactory, because it counted on the party loyalty of a couple of Republicans who were apt to be on the other side of the fence when needed.

Seek Wider House Margin.

The G. O. P. state administration also is determined to widen the gap in its favor in the Springfield house of representatives, where the score is 79 to 74. Death and illness virtually wiped out the margin during the last session.

However, the west section of Chicagoland offers less opportunity for house gains than some others. In only two of the eleven west section districts are there chances to pick up house seats. In all of the others the candidates nominated at the April primary were practically elected at the same time, because there are only a total of three in both parties for three seats.

Following is the preview of the legislative campaign by districts:

SECOND DISTRICT

[Parts of Wards 20, 25, and 27].

No senate seat at stake this year. House nominees have no contests.

SEVENTH DISTRICT

[Most country townships of Cook county].

His G. O. P. backers see little chance for the Democrats to upset Sen. Arthur J. Bidwill this year. However, the district has new residents working in war plants who are an unknown political factor. Bidwill was elected by a narrow margin in 1936 and served four months before the Democratic majority in the senate ousted him in favor of his opponent. He was reëlected in 1938.

Mack D. Falknor of Morton Grove is the Democratic senate entry. He was unopposed in the primary.

There is no house contest.

NINTH DISTRICT

Andrew Toman, veteran employé of Armour and company, is the Republican primary choice to tackle the tough assignment of getting the seat held by Sen. Richard J. Daley. Young Daley has rapidly become one of the leaders in the legislature as well as in Democratic party councils; he took part in the recent conference to draft their state platform. There is no house contest.

FOURTEENTH DISTRICT

[Kane and Kendall counties].

No house contests. Senate seat is not at stake this election.

FIFTEENTH DISTRICT

[Parts of Wards 20 and 21].

Felix Kaski, Republican, occupies the rôle of David in this senate race. Not only is Sen. Peter P. Kielminski a powerful figure in the neighborhood political arena, but his great girth and bulk made it necessary for the senate to provide him with a specially constructed chair. The Democratic incumbent of 12 years service has been assistant superintendent of the Bridewell for the last 32 years.

There is no house contest.

SEVENTEENTH DISTRICT

[Parts of Wards 20 and 27].

Here there is a lively fracas between Sen. James B. Leonardo, Republican, and the former Republican, Roland V. Libonati, Democrat. Libonati was once a G. O. P. member of the general assembly. During his retirement the Democratic upheaval in his district occurred, and he joined them to return to Springfield as a representative. Leonardo has served 16 years, and says he gave "Libby" his start on the political ladder.

The house contest is a rarity in this district, which usually is a "set-up." Rep. Peter C. Granata is paired with Frank Novelli against two Democrats, Andrew A. Euzzino and Alfred J. Cilella. This race is being watched closely.

NINETEENTH DISTRICT

[Cicero, Riverside, Berwyn, and Wards 23, 24, and 29 in Chicago, plus part of Wards 22, 25, 27, 28, and 30].

Sen. Abraham L. Marovitz, Democratic incumbent, is a former Republican who is concluding four years in the upper chamber at Springfield. His opponent for the Republicans is swell, especially the 14 ounce steaks twice a week."

Altho in high spirits from their priceless possession of being physically fit, all four admitted they missed their old home towns and the folks back there. All said they were receiving plenty of mail, but wanted more. Sometimes, they explained, they might not be able to answer all the letters because of their crowded routine, but every written word was appreciated.

They told me they would not be allowed to take furloughs until they had finished the preflight course, and that their Saturday liberty extended no more than five miles from the university town. Residents of the community had invited them to their homes and they had advantages of a USO center. Tuesday nights there was entertainment in the quadrangle, but no member of the squadron had yet lent any of his talent except in the mass singing.

They spoke in appreciation of correspondence they had received from the Elks club in Elmhurst and from Postmaster "Bill" Knapp in Glen Ellyn. Venturoni regretted that he had been in town when his brother recently came from Naperville to pay him a visit, and Belanger smiled pleasantly in reminiscence of the visit the Sunday before from his girl friend, Arelene McPherson of Glen Ellyn.

All Glenbard Alumni.

All four in the group are graduates of Glenbard. Belanger in 1934, Olsen in 1940, Venturoni and Berger in 1938. After attending Michigan State college, Belanger had been a traveling auditor in the east. Olsen studied for two years at the University of Illinois school af architecture. Both have been in ROTC at college. Venturoni has attended De Paul university. Berger went to Loyola university for three years.

I asked them about their previous athletic experiences, and learned from the other boys that Belanger had been all-conference high school in football and basketball. Coaches at the camp insisted, however, that many of the men making good had no athletic background.

The room occupied by the four White Eagles in the dorm had four study desks, each with a light above it. Between the two double bunks was a dresser for underclothing, and the Eagles assured me that every corner of the room and its contents was given rigid inspection twice a day. In the closet hung each man's six khaki uniforms, two dress whites, one dress blue, and one athletic outfit. Also, there was overcoat and raincoat and six covers for each cap.

Speak Own Language.

We had not talked long before I became acquainted with a few navy terms. The White Eagles said the cadets were required to use them.

"I suppose," said Olson, "you'd call this a room. You're mistaken. This is the B-deck of a ship." The windows were "ports" and the floor was the "deck." Several times they caught themselves from giving me an "Aye, aye, sir."

I asked how the day started off.

"O!" explained Venturoni. "First at 5:45 we hear the bugle. Then from the loud speaker in the hall comes the command of the officer of the day, 'Rise and shine, rise and shine, hit the deck!' Before he's finished we're not only up, but we have to pull all the sheets off the beds."

Berger demonstrated how a cadet irons his tie by drawing it back and forth across one of the footrails of the bunk.

I asked when members of the White Eagles squadron had the best chance to talk over back home topics. They said every day during five minutes just before "chow."

Hope to See Glenview.

All the Du Page boys displayed for me the Eagle emblem pins presented to them before they left home. All said they hoped to be advanced to Glenview rather than to some distant point for preliminary flight training.

Five weeks had done much to the four White Eagles. I could see how they were being molded into something exclusively fine. I had a feeling they sensed it, too. Beneath the lightheartedness there would, on occasion, come a grimness to their jaws and a gleam of idealism into their eyes.

I thought of the admonition: Cadets are officers when they are on the street and must so act.

Along with the banter there was a note of seriousness in the answers to my questions. Any one can utter platitudes, but coming from men who stand up to the daily routine at a preflight school they lose their triteness and take on a new ring.

Not Easy, but Worth It.

I recall the sober comment of White Eagle Carl Kant of Lombard, who is only 18 and the youngest in the squadron. I met him and Judson Doane of Aurora shortly after watching the work on the obstacle course and the swimming test. Kant said simply, "You work hard, but it's worth it. Nothing worthwhile ever came easy." He went on, "You get your bump patched up and you're as good as new. We get good care. I wasn't an athlete when I came, but they're teaching me how here."

Kant, who graduated this spring from Glenbard, said Bill Knapp got him interested in the White Eagles. His roommates are White Eagles Herbert Gustin of Glen Ellyn and Benjamin Horek of Cicero. Horek finished at Morton High in 1935, later attended Morton Junior college and North Central college, and worked at the Western Electric until he enlisted last February. He was sent along with the White Eagles because he attended college in Du Page county.

Herb Gustin of Glen Ellyn, who graduated from Elgin academy in 1941 and was at the University of Missouri for one year, said his mother had been out to visit him the previous week-end, and added that his fraternity had promised him a "date" when the university starts.

Loses a Bet on Mail.

Gustin had made a bet with Horek and Kant that he would get more mail than both of them put together. "It looked like a sure thing," he chuckled, "but I underestimated the letter writing ability of Horek's family."

Judson Doane, the Aurora member of the squadron, introduced me to his roommates and explained that the three represented the states of Michigan, Minnesota, and Iowa. He said when he enlisted with the White Eagles, because of Aurora's proximity to Du Page county, he had known none of the other members, but had become well acquainted with them since. A graduate of East Aurora High school, class of 1937, he finished at Illinois Tech in Chicago this year.

White Eagles John McGuire of Downers Grove and Harry Field of Glen Ellyn have the same room with Elmer Larson, almost a White Eagle, and Don McQueen of Homewood. McGuire, a graduate of Downers Grove High school in 1936, had just finished at Central YMCA when he enlisted. "I went out for football one year, but was never particularly athletic," he told me. Then he added: "Now I'm making up for lost time."

He's Part White Eagle.

Larson's home address is 2937 North Sheffield avenue, Chicago. "That doesn't make me a Du Page boy," he said half regretfully, "but I came with the squadron, so that makes me part White Eagle."

White Eagle Clarence Smid, 20, resided in Chicago on the northwest side until 1940 when his folks moved to St. Charles. Asked how he was getting along he replied: "I'm doing everything I'm supposed to do, and, like all the others, I feel myself building up."

Robert Diehl of Elmhurst, altho a member of the White Eagles, left two weeks ahead of them and so finds himself in the 4th rather than the 5th battalion, as are the other White Eagles. I watched him doing his stuff on the obstacle course.

I found White Eagle Ralph Glatfelter of Elmhurst busy during the academic period. On graduating from Wheaton college this June he had already joined up for navy aviation and was sent with the White Eagles when they left for Iowa City. He has had considerable athletic background as he majored in physical education at Wheaton and was on the college football team.

From Wheaton College.

Glatfelter's three roommates also are Wheaton college men and were inducted at Elmhurst with the White Eagles. They are Dick Harold of Spokane, Wash.; Gordon Caldwell of St. Louis, Mo., and Carroll Rhinehart of Minnesota.

"Before joining the White Eagles," Glatfelter explained, "I already knew Belanger and Diehl thru athletics. I was anxious to get started toward getting my golden wings, and I'm glad I'm here."

It was nearing 9:10 p. m. and the end of the study period. Twenty minutes left for the cadets to take a shower and get to bed.

Has youth of the American democracy become flabby as the enemy has been told?

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 14

It is time to complete lawn making if the young grass is to survive the severe winter weather without injury. First consideration should be given the soil; it should be in good tilth, filled with humus and food, well drained, and thoroly prepared. Most city yards lack humus. If a new lawn is to be made buy manure, if possible, and spread a layer over the ground before spading. If manure is not to be had buy a bag or two of shredded cattle manure and use it in the same manner.

Tuesday, Sept. 15

Growing perennial flowering plants in shade is dependent on the kind selected. Here are a few that are recommended when the shade is not too dense: Beebalm, Virginia bluebell, sedum, plantain lily, meadowrue, lily-of-the-valley, forget-me-not, ferns [plant more ferns, for they make a lovely effect], columbine, bugle, goutweed, monkshood, daylily, and foxglove, which is grown as a perennial, but is really a biennial.

Wednesday, Sept. 16

It is time to lift and pot all plants that are intended for indoor culture. An early frost is predicted, but in any case such plants as the poinsettia should be removed indoors before cooler nights come. Give them full sunlight and never permit the soil to dry out.

Thursday, Sept. 17

Transplanting can begin about the end of the month. Shrubs should not be planted so dense they interfere with views from windows, or be so tall they cover the windows. A few choice kinds are: Japanese barberry [good for nesting places], dogwoods, Japanese oleasters, shrubby St. Johnswort, Tartarian honeysuckle, matrimony vine, snowberry, weigelia, and the viburnums.

Some of the lower growing tree forms furnish food for many birds, such as the hawthorns, flowering crab, mulberry, sumacs, redcedar, and others of equal importance. Save the leaves and start a compost heap. Start collecting mulching material for later use.

Friday, Sept. 18

Start paperwhite narcissus bulbs in soil or water and pebbles for early flowering. Madonna lilies can be planted now. Oriental poppies should be planted. They are available at supply houses.

Sow a few rows of radishes in the coldframe and enjoy them before freezing weather. Both radishes and lettuce like a mellow, rich soil. Do not water radishes too lavishly or they will split.

Considerable humus can be added to garden vegetable soil by sowing rye this fall and spading it under in early spring. It will be 4 inches high before severe weather. Harvest squash and pumpkins when thoroly ripened. Keep in a warm place.

Saturday, Sept. 19

Do not delay with trimming hedges for the last time. Stone fruits are best transplanted in spring. Give all newly planted trees plenty of water. Evergreens should never be allowed to suffer from a lack of moisture.

Apply some fertilizer to chrysanthemum plants when the buds show. A few plants dug and potted will flower and can be removed to the house for display. Select only those with good form and not too large. Water well after potting.

The aspidistra is one of the best plants for dry air. It is a foliage plant. Do not overwater begonias or the stems will rot.

SHOWER STALL NOW HAS WALLS OF FIBER BOARD

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

If you are remodeling to provide additional living quarters in your home or building a low cost defense home, there are interesting shower cabinets available. Their walls are made of tempered hard pressed fiber board instead of steel, and their receptors of steam cured concrete.

These are the same type of shower cabinets that are being used in army barracks and in naval training stations, and they are a tribute to the production miracles taking place all around us, and the use of substitute materials to save on critical war materials.

Early last February manufacturers of shower cabinets were summoned to Washington and asked to submit a shower unit with nonmetallic walls and precast receptor, a cabinet so constructed that there would be no more than 25 pounds of steel in its manufacture [against some 200 pounds of steel, and more, used in prewar models] since steel for shower cabinet walls, would not be available in the near future.

No More Metal Walls.

This proved no serious problem, since ingenious models for such cabinets already had been assembled.

Since that time these models have been put on the market, and their use now is mandatory.

These shower cabinet fiber board walls are finished inside and out with high temperature waterproof baked enamel. Even their shower heads and valve handles are made of plastic or iron instead of brass and the only steel found in them is in the back corner joints, the door frame, and the receptor flange.

Another development in the shower cabinet line is a metal conserving prefabricated shower enclosure of tempered structural glass.

No Metal But Screws.

These units are prefabricated at the factory, with all holes drilled and ready to install. No metal is required except the 16 screws supplied by the manufacturer. Space is saved in a house by such an installation, and plumbing, too.

YWCA CLASSES PLAN OPEN HOUSE AT LOOP CENTER

Open house evenings will be held Tuesday and Thursday at the Loop Center YWCA, 59 East Monroe street, from 5:30 to 9:30 o'clock. There will be exhibitions of physical fitness classes, roller skating, badminton, fencing, modern dancing, craft shop work, the Little Theater guild, and the choral group.

West siders helping in plans for the open house include: Ada Miraglia, 331 North Mayfield avenue; Lucille Lieberman, 3919 Jackson boulevard, and Irene Wolter, 1148 North Mayfield avenue, from the business and professional department council; June Leininger, 1242 North Hoyne avenue; Irene Luby, 5030 Adams street, and Myrna Serviss, 555 Cullerton avenue, from the health education council.

Lenore Worswick, 1209 6th avenue, Maywood, is a member of the choral group which will furnish the musical part of the entertainment.

BRITISH RADIO PROPOSES TO GET RID OF CROONERS

Ban on Jazzing Classics Ordered Also.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The British Broadcasting corporation has launched a movement to get rid of radio crooners. At the end of the third year of the war the BBC reports that it has noted a change in attitude on the part of the public with regard to the warblers of oversentimental songs. The public, it states, demands something more robust. So the BBC is undertaking to satisfy that demand.

Apparently the British campaign has no reference to Rudy Vallee, Morton Downey, and Bing Crosby, all of whom have been called crooners by Americans. The British apparently have in mind their own special types of whispering tenors.

Ban on Borrowed Tunes.

The BBC also is putting a ban on tunes borrowed from the classics. The new dance music policy of the BBC, which applies to the short wave transmissions to America as well as music for home consumption, is set forth in the following statement:

"The BBC has recently invited all publishers of dance music and leaders of broadcasting dance bands to cooperate in a new move to bring dance music broadcasts into better tune with the present spirit of Britain and her people. In effect, the idea is to rid the air of the oversentimental crooner and the kind of song that he or she sings.

"The step does not reflect any change in attitude on the part of the BBC, nor is it a high-handed attempt to dictate public taste. For many years now the BBC has maintained and exercised its right of censorship on behalf of the vast and varied public it exists to serve. Most people will agree that this censorship has not been noticeably heavy-handed and that nowhere has it been more lenient than in the matter of dance band broadcasts. But it would probably surprise many to learn just how many dance numbers have been excluded from the air for one very good reason or another during the last 12 months.

"Where the present move differs from former censorship is that a ban is now placed not on particular items of music but on a particular style of music and on a particular type of singer.

"It is a change of attitude on the part of the public that has brought this about. It is not for the BBC to discriminate between one kind of music and another. The aim has always been to offer the best in every kind—Beethoven for those who like Beethoven, crooners for those who prefer crooners.

Sempiternal Sob Disliked.

"But from its infinite number of contacts in homes, camps, barracks, and factories all over Britain it has learned beyond all doubt that the 1942 public as a whole finds the *sempiternal sob of the crooner almost as distasteful and distressing as, say, flippant blasphemy or an indecent innuendo. At the end of the third year of an increasingly strenuous war the public is demanding something more virile, more robust. The BBC, as the servant of the public, must act in the public interest.

"So bleating crooners are out from now on—possibly, as some will hope, forever. So is the sort of song they sing.

"To music publishers the broadcasting of a popular song usually brings greatly increased business. It would be unfair were they to suffer for lack of the same immediate opportunities as the BBC enjoys for noting any wide change in public taste. Already the banning of individual songs has meant a business loss to some of them. In informing them of the new policy, therefore, the BBC cordially invites them, when considering new songs, to submit to the BBC any doubtful cases.

*Sempiternal is defined in the dictionary as "unending" or "everlasting."

"The borderline between sentiment and sentimentality is a difficult path to tread, and there may be occasional errors of judgment. But the BBC is confident of public support for its intention to keep, for the present, well to the right of the line."

TRAFELET HITS BUROCRATS FOR WAR CONFUSION

Congress Nominee Opens G. O. P. Drive in 6th.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Republicans have taken the first round in the congressional fight in the 6th district, which promises to be the scene of the hottest battling in the Nov. 3 election campaign.

Raymond E. Trafelet, the G. O. P. nominee, set his campaign in full motion with a speech at the Berwyn Republican headquarters in which he ripped into Washington leaders for retarding the war effort by surrounding business and industry with bewildering laws and regulations.

Meanwhile, his Democratic opponent, former Congressman Thomas J. O'Brien, pursued his party's usual strategy of tying the congressional candidacy as a tail to the machine campaign for the full ticket, saving whatever specialized stumping he plans until the closing days of the race. O'Brien can count heavily on this organized help, whereas Trafelet, if he hopes to win, must supplement the party effort with a vast amount of personal campaigning.

Says Small Businesses Hurt.

"American war production has vital need today of a clarification of puzzling laws and the elimination of our overlapping and conflicting alphabetical bureaus," Trafelet declared, pointing out that the district has numerous small business and industrial enterprises that are now unable to throw their full energies into the war because of the confusion.

"Before maximum producing capacity can be attained we must clear the way for machinery and man power to produce to their limit. Billions of dollars are being poured into social experimentation, and delay follows delay in vital production lines. There we have the 1942 version of Nero fiddling while the world burns.

"Whatever bottlenecks have developed in our industrial output can be traced directly to laws and regulations of the New Deal. Today the business man and worker must have handy a certified accountant and a lawyer, and have contact with Washington for the latest interpretation of how to conduct a business. Otherwise he will be a law breaker.

Gives Kaiser As Example.

"A striking example is Henry Kaiser, the miracle shipbuilder, who was made a defendant in a federal court for obtaining steel with which to build ships.

"My fight as a member of congress will be aimed toward elimination of all nonessential bureaus, and to have the laws and regulations controling our war effort so definitely determined that no loss in time or cost will result in war production.

"Americans are patriotic, law abiding people who resent snoopers and burocrats interfering with their daily life. Our people will continue to cooperate with intelligent leadership, but they will not be driven by Gestapo methods.

Points to G. O. P. Gains.

Trafelet gave as an encouraging evidence of G. O. P. gains in the 6th the fact that in the primary the Democrats cast fewer ballots than at any time since 1934. Trafelet, who has shown drive and vigor since he entered the lists last spring, got nearly half of all the Republican votes cast in the 6th, altho there were eight G. O. P. candidates in the primary.

The election fights were slow to warm up in the 4th, 5th, and 8th districts, where the Democratic nominees have fair sailing in prospect, and in the 7th, where Republican chances are better than they have been for several years.

In the 4th, Master in Chancery Martin Gorski is the Democratic nominee in place of Congressman Harry P. Beam, who is a candidate for municipal judge. The Republican nominee is former State Rep. Arthur Joseph Rutshaw.

Sabath Opposed by Graver.

In the 5th, Congressman Adolph J. Sabath, dean of the national lower house, is again the Democratic candidate. He is faced off against Clem Graver, a minor figure in Republican politics who holds an appointive spot in the state attorney general's office.

City Treasurer Thomas S. Gordon, picked by the city hall Democrats to succeed Congressman Leo Kocialkowski in the 8th, is opposed by Mrs. Rena E. Pikiel, who also was the G. O. P. nominee in 1938.

In the 7th district the habitual Republican nominee, James C. Moreland, continued quietly marshalling the 7th district's growing Republican strength for the effort many observers think will carry him over the top next November in his fifth attempt to unseat Congressman Leonard W. Schuetz. Moreland was the G. O. P. nominee against Schuetz in 1930, 1936, 1938, and 1940.

NAME H.H. SUCHAN TO BERWYN WAR RATIONING BOARD

Henry H. Suchan.

Henry H. Suchan, manager of the central office of Western Union in Chicago, was appointed to the Berwyn war price and rationing board recently by Michael F. Mulcahy, OPA director. Suchan is resigning other civilian defense activities to accept his new position. A native Chicagoan, he has been associated with the Western Union company for the last 24 years. In Berwyn he is active in community affairs, being president of the Berwyn Men's Civic club and head of a local bowling league. Suchan resides at 2120 South East avenue with his wife and one child, Robert, 5.

Their $6.07 to Army Relief

Nine Springfield Seats Are at Stake.

E. Clifford Baker of Cicero, a young man, like Marovitz. Baker favors eliminating the pauper oath from old age assistant requirements.

The house race is a "setup."

TWENTY-FIRST DISTRICT

[Parts of Wards 26, 28, 30, and 37].

Eugene C. O'Reilly, veteran attorney, is carrying the Republican standard thru the battle for the senate seat in this home district of P. A. Nash, the Democratic county chairman. O'Reilly knows it will not be an easy fight. Norman C. Barry is the choice of the Democratic organization, having defeated Sen. George M. Maypole in a relatively costly primary.

This is the only district in Illinois where the house candidates had no opposition either in the primary or in the election.

TWENTY-THIRD DISTRICT

[Oak Park, Ward 31 in Chicago, also parts of Wards 26, 30, 32, 36, and 37].

Sen. Thomas E. Keane, Democrat ending his second four year term, is up against Oscar C. [Ches] Johnson, 1500 North Central avenue. Johnson was the G. O. P. senate nominee in 1930 and 1934 in the adjoining 25th district. Johnson was nominated for Municipal court bailiff in 1936—another bad Republican year.

Republicans here seek also a house gain. Rep. William G. Thon of Oak Park has served 24 years as a Republican is again teamed with Daniel A. Roberts, 31st ward committeeman. The Democrats renominated are Reps. Arthur M. Kaindl and Stanley A. Halick.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DISTRICT

[Parts of Wards 26, 28, 32, and 33].

John Turchany, Republican who has long been active in the Division street YMCA, is very active in his fight for the seat occupied by Sen. Stanley J. Mondala. Turchany has a signboard a-top his automobile; resembling a blimp, the silvery sign reads:

"John Turchany is a health builder. Elect him to the state senate and he will help rebuild economic health in Illinois. John Turchany is looking ahead. Keep 'em flying today. Keep 'em working tomorrow."

Mondala was elected in 1940 to fill a death vacancy. He is an engineer and former professional football player. The district has long been Democratic.

The house election finds the Democrats seeking a clean sweep of all three seats.

FORTY-FIRST DISTRICT

[Du Page and Will counties].

Sen. Richard J. Barr, Republican who has established a national record by his 40 years service in the senate, is not thought likely to relinquish the honor this election. His opponent is Otto J. Hruby of Hinsdale, who was the only person to file in the Democratic primary. There is no house contest.

Bride of Chicagoan

Camp Shelby, Mississippi, was the scene recently of the wedding of Helen Marguerite Woolsey, daughter of Mrs. Annie Fendley Woolsey of Woolsey, Ga., to Lieut. D. H. Alrutz, son of Dr. and Mrs. Louis F. Alrutz, 36 North Lotus avenue. The bride attended the Georgia State College for Women, and Lieut. Alrutz obtained his degree from DePauw university.

Fritzemeier, placement director of the high school, has been appointed local administrator of the program.

The program will assist in training persons for technical and semitechnical positions created by the war. The courses will concentrate on immediate practical application to war jobs. Women are urged to enroll.

Registration will be held Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, from 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p. m., in room 113 at the high school. C. D. McMurry, a representative of the University of Illinois, will assist.

DOWNERS GROVE MAKES TEACHER FEEL AT HOME

PTA Hostesses Greet New Arrivals.

What was begun as an adventure in friendship in Downers Grove proved so successful that the program is now in its 17th consecutive year.

In the fall of 1925 a group of women, comprising the social committee of the Parent-Teacher association, decided to widen its scope and make it an all year around activity instead of the customary annual party.

Since then the group has been known as the hostess committee, and members adopt new teachers when they come into the Downers Grove schools and try to make them feel at home immediately.

Notes of Welcome.

The chairman of the hostess group is given the name and address of each new teacher, her college and church affiliations, and other information. The chairman then writes a note of welcome and explains the workings of the hostess plan.

A hostess is assigned to the newcomer. The two may have been graduates of the same college or have taught the same grade or the same subject. Perhaps the church interests are the same.

Usually, the hostess offers to meet the new arrival at the train and aid her in finding a pleasant boarding place. The day after school opens, each teacher, old and new, is presented a packet of home made cookies and a greeting from the hostess group.

Hostesses for Year.

Hostesses for the coming year include Mrs. G. N. Askew, Mrs. L. A. Bellows, Mrs. C. E. Beard, Mrs. Curtis C. Bridgman, Mrs. Donald J. Campbell, Mrs. Fred C. Daigh, Mrs. Harold A. U. OF I. HOSPITAL UNIT WILL HAVE FAREWELL FETE

Leaves Next Month for Front Line Training.

A number of west side residents will play prominent parts in the University of Illinois Evacuation hospital unit benefit to be held at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, Sept. 22, at the Chicago Illini Union building on the campus of the Chicago colleges of the university, 715 South Wood street. The benefit will be in the nature of a send-off party for the unit which will go into training in October as a front line hospital.

750 Beds in Unit.

The University of Illinois Evacuation hospital—officially known as the 27th Evacuation hospital of the United States army—will be a 750 bed mobile unit, the largest type military hospital in existence. It can be enlarged to 1,500 beds. Dr. Charles R. Puestow, professor of surgery in the university's college of medicine, is lieutenant colonel in charge of the unit. Personnel of the unit comprises 417 doctors, nurses, internes, administrative, and technical staffs, the bulk of which are U. of I. alumni.

Serving on Committees.

West side residents who will serve on committees planning the benefit are: Mrs. J. W. Fischer, 311 North Austin boulevard; Dr. Paul L. Schroeder, 614 North Woodbine avenue, and Mrs. W. I. Brockson, 1110 Pleasant avenue, both of Oak Park; Gerald J. Koerner, 4721 Washington boulevard; Dr. G. W. Post, 5524 Huron street; Dr. Frank Maher, 214 South Hamlin avenue; Harold Striegel, 1234 North Lawndale avenue, and Tony Tysl, 2449 South Trumbull avenue.

Win Scholarships.

George R. Dvorak, son of Mrs. Emma S. Dvorak, 314 South Harvey avenue, Oak Park, and William J. Riordan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Riordan, 121 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, have been awarded scholarships by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Chicago Opera to Open Season with "Lakme" on Nov. 7

By Edward Barry

The Chicago Opera company will present Delibes' "Lakme" at the Civic Opera house on Saturday evening, Nov. 7, with Lily Pons, Anna Kaskas, Raoul Jobin and Alexander Kipnis singing the principal roles. In the course of the 1942 season Wolf-Ferrari's "The Secret of Suzanne," Flotow's "Martha," Offenbach's "The Tales of Hoffman" and Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" will be sung in English. Stella Roman, Kerstin Thorborg and Nicola Moscona will make their Chicago operatic debuts and Hilde Reggiani and Charles Kullman will return to the company after some years absence.

These unrelated statements are put at the top of the column because they are the only new, important and definite pieces of information in the company's fall announcement. Evidently Fortune Gallo, the opera's general director, is determined to dole out news about his 1942 wonders gradually. That way a newspaper is likely to run more stories than if the complete prospectus of the season were slapped on the editor's desk in mid-September.

This fall announcement is a masterpiece of its kind. It seems to be packed with information, but much of this information has a slightly familiar ring and other items are qualified in a clever way. For instance, a list of operas long and varied enough to gratify the most exacting patron is prefaced with the cautious statement that the repertoire will include most of these works. Similarly, an impressive roster of artists is qualified by the announcement that present plans call for the use of these singers. And the conductors are only proposed conductors and assistant conductors (all italics ours)

But Mr. Gallo's ability to deliver a high grade opera season when the time comes should not be questioned. He did it last year under even greater difficulties. His cautious announcement must be ascribed either to his canny knowledge of the publicity game (as suggested above) or to his determination that not a single definite statement shall be made until he is absolutely sure that he can make good on it.

For what it is worth, here is the list of operas from which the 1942 repertoire will be drawn: "Aida," "The Barber of Seville," "La Boheme," "Carmen," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci," "The Daughter of the Regiment," "Faust," "Halka," "The Jewels of the Madonna," "La Juive," "Lohengrin," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Manon," "Martha," "Mignon," "Otello," "Rigoletto," "Tannhauser," "Tosca," "La Traviata," "Il Trovatore." To this must be added the

When George Abbott was planning his production of "Best Foot Forward," currently at the Erlanger theater, he held auditions for teen-age talent in a number of cities. Here in Chicago the singing of Maureen Cannon (above) impressed Mr. Abbott so greatly that he awarded her a leading role in the musical comedy. (Constance Bannister photo)

Youth to Have Its Fling on Chicago Stages This Month

By Cecil Smith

Youth is certainly having its fling in our loop theaters this month. "Best Foot Forward," George Abbott's musical comedy with a cast made up mostly of performers still in their teens, has taken over the Erlanger theater. And on Sept. 21—a week from tomorrow—Max Gordon's Chicago company of "Junior Miss" will arrive at the Harris to help celebrate the vagaries and virtues of extreme youth.

As everybody must have heard by now, the heroine of "Junior Miss" is an extremely unpredictable young lady on the threshold of adolescence, who manages, with the aid of an irrepressible boon companion known as Fuffy, to churn her family up into a rare state of confusion. Both girls are afflicted with a movie-fed romanticism which causes them to imagine that the most innocuous human relationships are freighted with intrigue and mischief; in their innocence of real experience they translate their daily life into a lurid world of strange but uniquely diverting fantasy.

Like Max Gordon's earlier hit comedy, My Sister Eileen," "Junior Miss" was developed out of a set of New Yorker magazine stories by a pair of skilful and stagewise transcribers, Jerome Chodorov and Joseph Fields. Sally Benson wrote the original stories, which are remarkable in their witty understanding of the mental processes of teen-age girls. Altho it is of course entirely different in setting and subject matter, "Junior Miss" possesses the mellow love of human nature and the absence of unpleasant acidity which made "My Sister Eileen" so wholly likable.

Since the original cast of "Junior Miss" is still hard at work in the Lyceum theater in New York, we shall be seeing a second company next week. But a glance at the personnel indicates that it is not likely to be a routine road company, for Mr. Gordon has engaged a roster of capable and well known actors. Naturally Lenore Thomas, in the title role, and Sandra Holman, as Fuffy, are too young to have attained much professional prominence. But the older members of the cast are familiar members of the profession. Lois Wilson and Robert Allen will play the mother and father, and other parts will be undertaken by such estimable actors as Harry Ellerbe, Adrienne Marden, and Loring Smith.

Lenore Thomas began to study dancing at the age of six, and two years later she had become Ned Wayburn's star juvenile pupil. At ten she became a professional model. Last year she played a small part in "Best Foot Forward," from which she withdrew to accept the

Griff Williams Returns to Palmer House Thursday

Shares Honors with Paul and Grace Hartman

By Will Davidson.

It'll be easy to remember September.

Already it has done a generous job of providing new entertainment for Chicago gadders, but she beams all over the place this Thursday when Griff Williams and his tremendously popular orchestra return to the Empire room of the Palmer House. There they'll share honors with Paul and Grace Hartman, the funniest dancers I ever have seen. It will be a gala comeback, and the start of an engagement for Griff that is scheduled to break the orchestra record for long runs in the Empire room.

A week later Earl Carroll unveils the second large night club to be opened this month, his refurbished Terrace Gardens in the Morrison hotel. The only official information released at this writing as to the makeup of the show is that it will be called "Something to Shout About," and will feature two production numbers, one based on Hoagy Carmichael's "Morning Glory" and the other on "Moonlight Mood," by Peter De Rose and Harold Adamson. Winnie Hoveler is directing the dances.

Matching those two major events of the waning month, the first two weeks gave us Charlie Hepp's new Rainbow Gardens, Gracie Fields et al at the Chez, Jimmie Dorsey in the Panther room, and Jane Pickens in the Blackstone's Mayfair room.

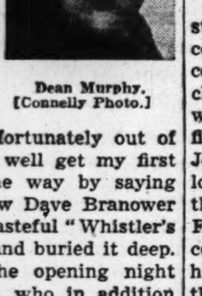
A flashy, big, rather loose jointed show greeted preview customers at the Rainbow Gardens 10 days ago. It battled the usual opening night difficulties, had its bad moments, but came thru as a meritorious and promising revue. I say promising because much of the entertainment was of top rank, and only a part of it was unfortunately out of place. I might as well get my first shudder out of the way by saying that I hope by now Dave Branower has taken that distasteful "Whistler's Mother" skit out and buried it deep.



Dean Murphy.
[Connelly Photo.]

Life saver of the opening night was Dean Murphy, who in addition to doing a splendid job of mimicry in a new "I Am an American" routine, did yeoman work in holding the entire revue together. He added considerably to his stature as an entertainer in this show. As the commentator in an interpretative ballet he displayed splendid voice and timing, despite the fact that the excellent choregraphy seemed to have no relationship to what he was saying.

Spectacular highlight of the revue is the daring adagio work of the Martels and Mignon, famous for their precision timing and their amazing throws. This is the sort of act that will make the Rainbow a popular rendezvous. Ballard and Rae, skating and knockabout comedians, found considerable approval for their strenuous efforts, and are another flash act that seems to have a popular appeal.

Corinne and Tito Valdez must be listed among the better dance teams, for their work is beautifully conceived and executed. Both have tremendous grace and assurance, and their "Sleepy Lagoon" number is a triumph of imagination and technique. Their "Dance of Farewell" in the colorful but not too cohesive "Street Scene in Algiers" is a thing of sensuous beauty.

The Rainbow is not ideal for a straight singer, as even such an accomplished one as Deane Janis discovered. Deane has lost little of her charm and her talent, and if she weren't quite so lost on that huge floor she would be one of the stars. Joe Frisco, the original and much beloved comedian, discovered the same thing. It was fun seeing his original Frisco dance again, but poor Joe couldn't achieve that contact with his audience that is so important to the effectiveness of his comedy.

All in all, the production numbers are interesting to watch, but at first showing not yet compact enough to be effective. Probably by now even the aimless World Fair melange is in better shape.

A long ovation goes to Arne Barnett for conducting a splendid show. Arne is just venturing into the large orchestra field, and he does himself proud as the show and broadcast band. Phil Levant sounded better than he has in a long time during the dance sets.

It is difficult to predict the course of a huge club like this, but I suspect that Charlie Hepp and Dave Branower learned a lot of lessons on opening night, and will be able to trim and reinforce their revue considerably. It has the makings of something worth while.

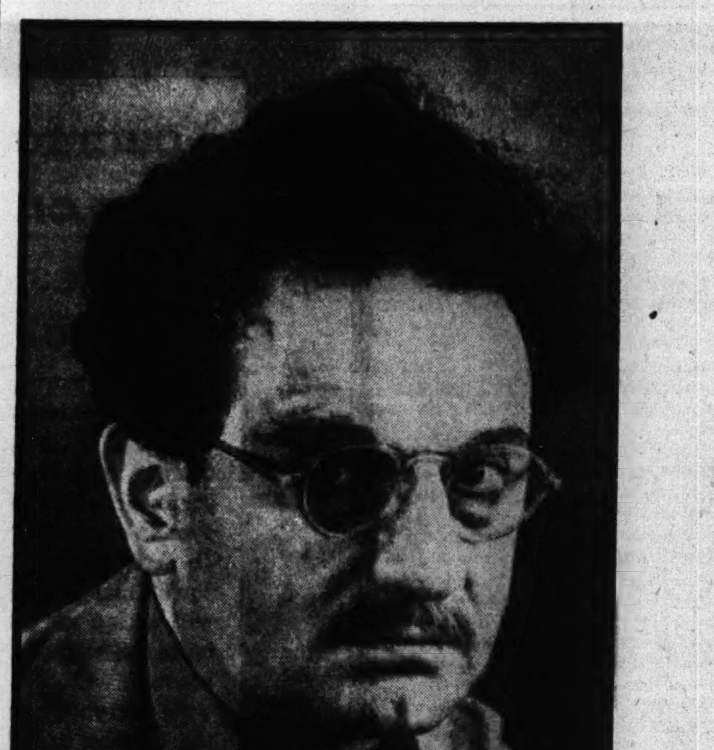
Boswelling the Bistros:

Speaking of Earl Carroll's new spot, Eve Stanley, his press agent, says she hasn't yet heard officially what the trade is saying—that Happy Felton and Bob Strong's bands, Bill Grady, the Bryants, Miss America, St. Clair and Day, and Bob Williams and Red Dust will be in the opening show. She is enthusiastic about the remodeling, however.

On the "coming" list are: Art Kassel to the Bismarck Oct. 2; Freddy Nagel to Aragon Oct. 3, and Dick Jurgens there Oct. 30; Chico Marx and band to the Blackhawk Oct. 7; Sonny Dunham to the Panther room Sept. 25, Woody Herman Oct. 9, Alvino Rey Nov. 6, Stan Kenton Dec. 4, and Claude Thornhill Dec. 31; Sophie Tucker to follow Gracie Fields at the Chez, date not yet announced.

When Griff Williams opens in the Empire room Thursday, beautiful Carlyn Truax will be getting her first solo break with the Abbott Dancers. Carlyn is nearing a movie career, and is best described as high and handsome, but not wide. . . . I suppose it is inevitable that Mrs. Hobby will eventually be tagged "Madame Tussaud," because she runs the WAACs works.

FAREWELL, MR. APPOPOLOUS



Philip Loeb, who has amused Chicagoans for 50 weeks as the Sherwood sisters' Greek landlord in "My Sister Eileen," departs from the Harris theater with the rest of the company on Saturday evening.

Youth to Have Its Fling at Loop Theaters

It sounds shocking to tell about it, but Sandra Holman—Lenore's inseparable companion in "Junior Miss"—started out, at 10, as a child monologist. In her appearances before women's clubs and divers other organizations she has done scenes from "Romeo and Juliet," "Rebecca," and "Girls in Uniform"; and she has regaled her audiences with stories in French and Irish dialects. In a series of radio fairy tales she was fated to portray an uncompromising list of witch and hobgoblin parts. "Junior Miss" will give her her first major opportunity to show what she can do on the legitimate stage.

Lois Wilson, cast as the mother of the heroine, last appeared in Chicago in "The Women," another Max Gordon production. A noted star of silent pictures, Miss Wilson returned to Hollywood briefly a year or two ago to make two talking pictures. In the main, however, she has devoted herself to radio since her tour in "The Women."

Of all the actors in "Junior Miss," Harry Ellerbe is probably the best known in Chicago. In Ibsen's "Ghosts," with Alla Nazimova, his performance of the afflicted Oswald was memorable for its emotional intensity; and in the same Chicago engagement with Nazimova he also played Tesman in Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" with admirable, if somewhat less unforgettable, results. In later assignments we saw him as Finch in the Ethel Barrymore company of "Whiteoaks" and as Mr. Prior in "Outward Bound." Earlier this summer he played his forthcoming rôle of Uncle Willis in "Junior Miss" in New York while Alexander Kirkland, the regular incumbent, was on vacation.

Adrienne Marden, who plays Ellen Curtis, the young woman whom Judy, the junior miss, imagines to be a "menace" to her father, was another member of the cast of "The Women." She appeared as Peggy, the young bride. Eileen Clarence, impersonating Judy's older sister, has her first big chance in "Junior Miss," after dramatic school and summer theater preparation.

"Junior Miss" comes to Chicago with the expectation of a long run. During the last Broadway season it remained consistently the box office leader among nonmusical plays. Last week, in its 43d week in New York, it was still grossing $13,000. The subscribers of the Theater guild and American Theater society will see "Junior Miss" during its first three weeks here, as the first of the season's six subscription items.

It is late in the year to be talking about summer theaters, since all of them closed a week ago. But I have not reported on the bill which ended the season of the Port players at Shorewood, Wis., on Sept. 6; and I think that the performance was valuable enough to deserve a few footnotes.

To bring the curtain down upon their eminently successful 11 week season, the Port players elected to present Paul Osborn's "Morning's at Seven." This play by the author of "On Borrowed Time" attained moderate success in New York three years ago. The original company did not tour. A traveling company, under independent auspices, was formed, however, with Effie Shannon in the cast; but after a few weeks on the road it perished miserably in St. Louis.

The Port players, therefore, were able to give the first professional production in Chicagoland of "Morning's at Seven." It is an unusual play, in that all the characters are more than usually old. The action revolves around four sisters in their late sixties and early seventies. The juvenile lead is 40, and the ingénue is 39. Nobody else in the dramatis personae is anywhere near as young as that.

In its writing, "Morning's at Seven" achieves some of the nostalgic charm that so often surrounds people in the autumn of life. But its simple story, dealing with the frustration of unrealized lives and the quirks of untutored people, recalls Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" strongly enough to suffer by comparison with the Wilder play. Three of the four sisters live in houses with adjacent back porches and a common back yard, and their daily chitchat — which sometimes begins to seem insupportably repetitious—is an inferior variant upon Mr. Wilder's inspired dialog.

Still, I do not want to condemn "Morning's at Seven," for it is a mildly interesting play. And most emphatically I do want to congratulate the Port players for their important contribution in offering the first professional performances in this region not only of "Morning's at Seven" but of three other plays which never toured—"Ring Around Elizabeth," "The Wookey," and Thornton Wilder's infinitely delightful "The Merchant of Yonkers."

War Languages Course Opened at Columbia U.

By the Rev. John Evans.

There are just 2,769 languages spoken in the world today, and that number does not include minor dialects, but you do not need to know them all to get along. This is on the authority of Prof. Mario A. Pei of Columbia university, who announced the figure and explained that you can do very well anywhere in the world with only seven languages besides your English.

Prof. Pei did not call a person who manages only English an ignoramus, but he did recommend French, Spanish, German, Portuguese, Italian, Russian, and Japanese as a répertoire for members of the A class. He pointed out that various parts of the world have been colonized by people of those languages, and if you know them you can go anywhere and get on nicely. These announcements were made in connection with the opening of a new war language course at Columbia. Students will be required to master a rudimentary vocabulary of 30 or 40 war zone languages, both for military activities on foreign soil during the war and greater international unity after the war.

The first of its kind in this country, the course is planned particularly to meet the needs of future officers in service and of government workers in fields demanding general acquaintance with foreign tongues.

"While this type of training naturally will not replace a mastery of any of the tongues of our allies or enemies, it is more valuable in certain fields than expertness in even three or four languages," Prof. Pei said, "and will be of great practical use in the war effort. For example, it may be used in the censorship bureau, where written languages must be identified quickly."

Planes and tanks have made heavy artillery obsolete, Col. Henry W. Miller, head of the department of mechanism and engineering drawing at the University of Michigan, recently stated. Writing in the journal, Army Ordnance, Col. Miller claimed that tanks now bring the fire-power of light artillery into the midst of the battlefield, while bombers deliver the explosive equivalent of heavy shells at longer ranges than any cannon could possibly be fired.

Tanks and planes also hold the advantage of direct fire, since the effect of their bombs and shells may be observed readily. With easy mobility so vital to modern warfare, heavy guns are useless, Col. Miller asserted, and the artillery of the immediate future must be lighter, even to the disappearance of six inch guns within two years.

Regarding future artillery, Col. Miller urged that "research and development never stop. A generous allotment should always be made for it. Obsolete war equipment should be scrapped and replaced as soon as a better variety appears. Perhaps the engineering divisions of our military departments can profitably be associated with industry in times of peace for design, development, and peacetime replacement of war equipment."

Chicago Symphony Opens 52d Season Next Month

Several New Soloists Will Be Introduced

By Felix Borowski.

Plans for the forthcoming concerts of the Chicago Symphony orchestra have reached this department. The organization will open its 52d season on Thursday-Friday, Oct. 15-16. Frederick Stock will begin, on that occasion, his 38th year as conductor—a record that has not been approached by that of any other orchestral director in this country.

Hans Lange.

There will be in Orchestra hall, as there have been for many years, 28 Thursday evening concerts, which will be duplicated on Friday afternoons.

Twelve Tuesday afternoon performances will be given, and 22 popular concerts. Of the latter, four will be presented by the Civic orchestra, which functions under the baton of Dr. Hans Lange. In addition, the Orchestral association announces two series of Young People's programs, to be presented on the first and third Wednesday afternoons of each month. The programs on the first Wednesday are intended for children from the public schools of the city; those on the third Wednesday are open to the general public.

The orchestra management states that "while ordinarily the symphony season covers a period of 28 consecutive weeks, this year it will cover a period of 29 weeks between Oct. 15 and April 30, due to the fact that no concerts will be played during Christmas week." The organization is not planning any tours, owing to the difficulties of travel, but 10 concerts will be given in the Pabst theater, Milwaukee.

A matter of considerable interest is that of the soloists who will appear during the season under the baton either of Dr. Stock or of Dr. Lange. There will be 26 in all—19 at the Thursday-Friday series, and seven at the Tuesday afternoon group. This season a commendable effort has been made to lay some stress upon the talents of native artists.

Thus, at the Thursday-Friday performances Eugenia Buxton, Edward Collins, Leonard Pennario and Sidney Foster will be heard as piano soloists. Miss Buxton, who comes from Memphis, Tenn., has been heard here in recital, but has not so far played with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Her appearance will be made in January, when she will interpret Rachmaninoff's C minor concerto for piano. Edward Collins has long been a resident of Chicago, and four works to his credit as a composer stand in the repertory of the local orchestra. He is scheduled to perform his own concerto for piano.

Sidney Foster has not yet been heard in these parts. He hails from Florence, S. C., and is an artistic product of the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia. Leonard Pennario also is a newcomer. Born at Buffalo, N. Y., he would seem to have been a child prodigy, for he performed Grieg's concerto for piano with the Dallas Symphony orchestra when he was only 12 years old. It is not that work, however, which Mr. Pennario will interpret with Mr. Stock, but rather a concerto by Arthur Bliss, an English composer who wrote it in 1938 for the New York World's Fair. The other pianists include Claudio Arrau, Sergei Rachmaninoff, Arthur Rubinstein, and Artur Schnabel, who need neither introduction nor explanation. One who does, perhaps, is Arnoldo Estrella, a pianist who comes here as the winner of the Guiomar Novaes prize, competed for in Brazil.

Pianists who have been engaged for the Tuesday series comprise the duo pianists, Luboschutz and Nemenoff [who have not been heard in Orchestra hall before], Arthur Rubinstein, Artur Schnabel, and Hilde Somer. There are no new violinists. At the Thursday-Friday concerts there will be heard Mischa Elman, Zino Francescatti, Jascha Heifetz, Fritz Kreisler, John Weicher, Carroll Glenn, and Patricia Travers.

Miss Glenn, it will be remembered, made an admirable impression when she performed Sibelius' violin concerto under Mr. Stock a year ago, and it may be said that she is entirely American; for her ancestor, John Carroll, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and her entire musical training was given her in New York. The work that will be set forth by this young artist will be the violin concerto by Miaskowsky, which is new to the repertory of the orchestra, altho not new to Chicago, since it was played at a concert of the Illinois Symphony orchestra last year.

Miss Travers is another native violinist who is making her second appearance with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. It is difficult to determine whether an eager public will or will not be more interested in Miss Travers' performance of one of the violin concertos by Sergei Prokofieff this season, because of the fact that the young lady has also appeared in motion pictures—in Paramount's "Magic in Music," to be precise. The Tuesday concerts will include Miss Glenn as well as Fritz Kreisler and Robert Quick among the violin virtuosi. Milton Treves, the principal violist of Mr. Stock's organization, will appear at one of the Thursday-Friday concerts, as also will Edmund Kurtz, the orchestra's first violoncellist, and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Beyond the names of the concertos that have been discussed as forming the media for the pianists and violinists that have been mentioned here, no word has been given out as to what the orchestra itself will interpret in the course of the season. It is certain that no new scores will come out of Germany, France, or Italy, and there is not much that is emanating from Britain. One work is promised, however. Mr. Stock will offer at all the subscription concerts the Seventh Symphony by Dimitri Shostakovich, which Arturo Toscanini first disclosed to American listeners at a concert of the National Broadcasting company last July, and which Mr. Stock conducted at a performance for the Russian War Relief in August at Ravinia park. Even those who may have heard the work on those occasions would probably welcome another opportunity to consolidate their impression of it.

In view of the fact that music is so potent a factor in stimulating the public morale, and in giving solace and inspiration to those who so urgently need it, the season promised by the Orchestral association will prove to be a necessity rather than a delightful luxury.

For the information of those who are intending to avail themselves of the concerts, it may be said that the rates of subscription for the Thursday-Friday series range from $40 to $65, according to location, on the main floor, and from $24 to $48 in the balcony. For the Tuesday afternoon concerts the rates for main floor seats are from $18 to $30, and in the balcony from $12 to $18.

SOLOIST WITH SYMPHONY

Carroll Glenn, American violinist who made her first appearance with the Chicago Symphony orchestra last October, has been re-engaged for the forthcoming season.

Cuffless Slacks Pose Problem in Outfitting Actor

Fred Tozere, who this year replaces John Lodge [who has joined the naval reserve] in the "Watch on the Rhine" company, ran into an unexpected snag when he went to shop for his stage wardrobe. From his tailor shop he telephoned the Herman Shumlin office. "They say they can't give me a pair of slacks with cuffs on them," he reported in consternation.

A member of Mr. Shumlin's staff spoke to the manager of the tailor shop, explaining that the action of "Watch on the Rhine" took place before Pearl Harbor and that cuffless trousers would be an anachronism. The manager of the shop was unmoved. Mr. Shumlin's representative asked how permission to make slacks could be obtained. "From the WPB," was the reply. The Shumlin man suggested that perhaps the fashionable tailor could apply for such permission. "O, no," said the manager, "we don't talk to the WPB."

"Meet the People."

Alex Cohen has bought the little revue, "Meet the People." He plans to send it on the road this autumn, after minor changes have been made in cast and script.

Chicago Opera Opens Season with 'Lakme'

five listed in the first paragraph of this story.

The singers under consideration [besides those already mentioned] are Licia Albanese, Josephine Antoine, Rose Bampton, Kurt Baum, Douglas Beattie, Richard Bonelli, Giuseppe Cavadore, Richard Crooks, George Czaplicki, Dusolina Giannini, Coe Glade, Helen Jepson, Jan Kiepura, Dorothy Kirsten, Mobley Lushanya, Virgilio Lazzari, Mark Love, Giovanni Martinelli, Lauritz Melchior, James Melton, Grace Moore, Nino Martini, Carlo Morelli, Gladys Swarthout, John Charles Thomas, Lawrence Tibbett, and Vittorio Trevisan.

The proposed conductors and assistant conductors include Giuseppe Bamboschek, Dino Bigalli, Jerzy Bojanowski, Paul Breisach, Angelo Canarutto, Leo Kopp, Edwin McArthur, and Carlo Peroni.

There is no word yet about the opera's ballet. Its chorus will be the same as last year. By the way, Gladys Swarthout described this chorus [which had been trained by Kurt Herbert Adler] as one of the two best she has ever sung with.

The Nov. 7 performance of "Lakmé" is a preseason, nonsubscription event. Tickets will be $2 to $5, plus tax. The subscription season will begin on Nov. 9 and run to Dec. 12, a total of five weeks. Performances will be given each Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday evening, and each Saturday afternoon. Season tickets [five performances] for any of these sessions except the Friday cost $7.50 to $18, plus tax. The Friday series, which is sponsored by the board of education, is lower priced —$3.75 to $12.50, plus tax. The Friday audiences are not confined to school children.

Purchasers of season tickets not only save considerably over single admission box office prices, but also have the opportunity of buying seats for the Nov. 7 opening performance before these seats are put on public sale. A 25 per cent deposit will hold new subscriptions and renewals of old until Oct. 1.

Reverting to "Lakmé," it may be interesting to recall that this was the vehicle of Miss Pons' Chicago operatic debut in the season of 1936. The work has been performed here only twice since, and Miss Pons had the name part both times.

In earlier days, Chicago heard quite a variety of Lakmés. Luisa Tetrazzini appeared in the first performance of the opera by the resident company back in 1911. Amelita Galli-Curci was heard in the rôle often between 1917 and 1923. Alice Mock and Florence Macbeth have both essayed it here. It is a very attractive part, for the Lakmé of the story is a beautiful Indian [Asiatic Indian] maiden, who sings highly effective music, wears ravishing costumes and is framed in scenes of tropical luxuriance.

The part of Gerald, the young Englishman whom Lakmé befriends, will be sung on Nov. 7 by Raoul Jobin, the French-Canadian tenor who reached the stages of the Chicago and Metropolitan operas after considerable experience in Paris. He made his debut here only last season, and was warmly admired for the taste and delicacy of his singing. By the way, what has become of the splendid Andre Burdino, the Frenchman who sang Gerald in the last two performances of "Lakmé" here?

Alexander Kipnis, who will sing Nilakantha, Lakmé's priestly father, in the Nov. 7 performance, is one of the world's supremely great artists. In depth of understanding and in ability to establish the warmest and most direct rapport with an audience he yields to no one on the concert or operatic stage today. Kipnis was long identified with the Chicago Opera company and he is married to a Chicagoan, the former Mildred Levy [daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heniot Levy], but for decades his fame was European rather than American. He was one of the highest ranking artists of Germany and Austria, and he terminated his activities in those countries only because he refused to sing in any city over which the swastika waved.

Alexander Kipnis.

Of late years Kipnis has made very few appearances in Chicago. Therefore the Nov. 7 performance will partake of the character of a homecoming. This will be his first local enactment of Nilakantha, a rôle long identified here with his countryman, Georges Baklanoff.

Anna Kaskas, who is to sing the part of Mallika, Lakmé's serving woman, in this performance is an American of Lithuanian extraction who made a successful Chicago operatic debut in the part of the witch Ulrica in last season's opening night performance of "A Masked Ball." She has also appeared here once or twice in recital.

A word about the new singers announced for this season:

Stella Roman is a Rumanian soprano who came to the Metropolitan after experience in Bologna, Palermo, Naples, Berlin, Barcelona and other European centers.

Nicola Moscona is a Greek bass whom Chicago knows only thru a single recital. He has been active in New York not only at the Metropolitan opera but also as a concert and oratorio soloist.

Kerstin Thorborg is a Swedish contralto who has made one appearance with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Her experience has been wide. Four years of musical activity in her native country were followed by numberless engagements in several European nations and even in far away Argentina.

Of the singers returning to the Chicago company after some years' absence, Hilde Reggiani is the Italian soprano who was heard here as Rosina in "The Barber of Seville" in the seasons of 1938 and 1939. Charles Kullman is the American tenor who sang Julien in one of the 1939 performances of Charpentier's "Louise."

Notes of Music and Musicians

The Chicago Business Men's orchestra, which usually has a long waiting list of musicians anxious to join its ranks, now has openings in every division. The armed services and war related industries and activities have made serious inroads on its personnel, and President Merle T. Jennings has declared that never before have there been such opportunities open. "We will need every type of instrument," his statement reads, "and any one desiring to play with one of the leading nonprofessional orchestras of the country should apply now." There will, of course, be careful auditions, for every effort is being made to keep up the orchestra's standards. Its principal activity is a series of programs of standard symphonic music played in Orchestra hall under George Dasch's direction at intervals during the season. The first of the 1942-'43 concerts is scheduled for Nov. 18.

George Dasch.
Daguerre Photo.

The first rehearsal of the new season will be held next Friday evening at 6 o'clock in Curtiss hall in the Fine Arts building. Good nonprofessional musicians who play orchestral instruments and who desire an audition should communicate immediately with the orchestra's executive secretary, Miss Bonnie McKenna, 400 North Michigan avenue, Room 908 [Phone: Superior 2198].

The Society for the Publication of American Music has announced that it will again examine chamber music manuscripts with a view to publication. Works for any combination not exceeding six instruments are eligible, but special interest this year will cetner on sonatas for any solo instrument with piano and works for any small combination of woodwinds. For full information, write the society's secretary, Miss Marion Bauer, 115 West 73d street, New York, N. Y.

The Northwest Music guild will sponsor a Russian War relief concert in Curtiss hall, Fine Arts building, beginning at 8 o'clock this evening. The artists, all of whom are donating their services, are Arthur Hassen, flutist; Adelina Trentadue, soprano, and Naomi Hassen, pianist.

Gilman Chase, organist of the First Unitarian church, Woodlawn avenue, at 57th street, will give a recital at 11 o'clock this morning. His program consists of a Handel larghetto and fantasia and the Reubke sonata, "The 94th Psalm."

Adolph Hansen, conductor of the Concordia Singing society of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for 53 years, died last week of injuries received in an automobile accident.

Carola Goya, Dancer, Is Given Canadian Insignia

The dancer, Carola Goya, was given a pair of wings with the Canadian Royal Air Force insignia recently when she appeared in a private recital for officers and men of the air service.

Vaudeville

Charlie Spivak and his orchestra, fresh from a long engagement at the College Inn, are parading their melodious wares on the stage of the Chicago theater this week. Spivak is the man whose "sweet" trumpet has won him so many admirers among popular music devotees. One of his featured entertainers is Garry Stevens. The Chicago stage show also offers Chester Dolphin, juggler; the comedian Cookie Bowers, and the precision routines of the Chicago theater ballet girls. The screen feature is Irving Berlin's "Holiday Inn."

Ted Lewis, his orchestra, and his "Rhythm Rhapsody Revue" are on the Oriental theater stage this week. Among the featured names in the show are Lindsey, LaVerne and Betty, Geraldine DuBois, June Edwards, the Kayne sisters, Gertrude Erdy and Charlie [Snowball] Whittier.

At Helsing's Vodvil lounge a singing sextet justly called "The Six Lovely Ladies" is getting top billing. The girls are assisted by Dot and Dave Workman and their musical glasses, Lou Ashe, singing master of ceremonies, the Four New Yorkers, and the pianist, Chet Roble.

"Uniforms by Schiaparelli"

"Uniforms by Schiaparelli," by Smith Dawless and Ester Klinck, will be the second production on Brock Pemberton's schedule this year. The first was "Janie," which opened in New York Sept. 9. "Uniforms by Schiaparelli" concerns itself with the rivalry of two women's defense organizations.

Drapes for Scenery Will Solve Shipping Problem

When Lew Cantor and High Skelley prepare a production of a dramatized version of the radio serial, "The Shadow," they will use drapes for scenery, so that the materials may be shipped in trunks. This will solve the touring problem threatened by an overtax on the railroads' baggage car facilities.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

All screen detectives have sleuthing brides. Now, Fellow Film Fans, meet the wife of a district attorney who tracks down prey and proves that a woman's intuition is a powerful weapon in the hands of a woman who knows how to use it.

This is a whodunnit opus with a different and amusing slant and a different and amusing femme in the principal feminine rôle. A little thing she is, this June Walker, with snappy eyes and gray hair. She's slightly on the order of Spring Byington only not so cozy. . . .

When Mrs. Pettijohn says "Move!" people git up and git—including the right honorable district attorney. . . .

The story opens in a classroom where a group of law students are introduced to the district attorney who has come to address them on "Circumstantial Evidence." . . . To prove a certain point he gives the case history of a crime. . . . As he concludes, there's a knock at the door and Mrs. District Attorney who had "gotten tired waiting two hours" outside in the car is admitted—to be introduced with pride and greeted with applause.

The somewhat incredible story that has been told is what you watch on the screen—with interest, laughter, and a good deal of suspense.

Miss Walker, Frank Craven, and Jerome Cowan are the outstanding players.

The film is brief and well directed.

See you tomorrow.

Obtains Rights to Play About Merchant Marine

On the lookout for a play which might duplicate the success of his post-World War I. production of "Journey's End," Gilbert Miller has obtained the American rights to "Lifeline," a play which focuses the spotlight on the English merchant marine. Set in the officers' quarters of a 5,000 ton tramp steamer bringing gasoline from Canada to England, the play has only 11 characters [all male] and no love interest.

THE CASE OF THE PERFECT MAID

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

(Copyright: 1942: By Agatha Christie Mallowan.)

"O, IF you please, madam, could I speak to you a moment?"

It might be thought that this request was in the nature of an absurdity, since Edna, Miss Marple's little maid, was actually speaking to her mistress at the moment.

Recognizing the idiom, however, Miss Marple said promptly: "Certainly, Edna, come in and shut the door. What is it?"

"O, please, m'am, it's my cousin Gladdie."

"Dear me," said Miss Marple, her mind leaping to the worst—and, alas, the most usual conclusion. "Not—not in trouble?"

"O, no, m'am, nothing of that kind. Gladdie's not that kind of girl. It's just that she's upset. You see, she's lost her place."

"Dear me, I am sorry to hear that. She was at Old Hall, wasn't she, with the Miss—Misses—Skinners?"

"Yes, m'am, that's right, m'am. And Gladdie's very upset about it—very upset indeed."

"Gladys has changed places rather often before, tho, hasn't she?"

"O, yes, ma'am. She's always one for a change, Gladdie is. She never seems to get really settled, if you know what I mean. But she's always been the one to give the notice, you see!"

"And this time it's the other way round?" asked Miss Marple drily.

"Yes, m'am, and it's upset Gladdie something awful."

Edna went on: "You see, m'am, it's the way it happened—the way Miss Skinner looked."

"How," inquired Miss Marple patiently, "did Miss Skinner look?"

This time Edna got well away with her news bulletin.

"O, m'am, it was ever such a shock to Gladdie. You see, one of Miss Emily's brooches was missing and such a hue and cry for it as never was, and of course, nobody likes a thing like that to happen; it's upsetting, m'am, if you know what I mean. And Gladdie's helped search everywhere and there was Miss Lavinia saying she was going to the police about it, and then it turned up again, pushed right to the back of a drawer in the dressing table, and very thankful Gladdie was.

"And the very next day as ever was a plate got broken, and Miss Lavinia she bounced out right away and told Gladdie to take a month's notice. And what Gladdie feels is it couldn't have been the plate and that Miss Lavinia was just making an excuse of that, and that it must be because of the brooch and they think as she took it and put it back when the police was mentioned, and Gladdie wouldn't do such a thing, not never she wouldn't, and what she feels is as it will get round and tell against her and it's a very serious thing for a girl as you know, m'am."

Miss Marple nodded. Tho having no particular liking for the bouncing, self-opinioned Gladys, she was quite sure of the girl's intrinsic honesty and could well imagine that the affair must have upset her.

Edna said wistfully: "I suppose, m'am, there isn't anything you could do about it? Gladdie's in ever such a taking."

Miss Marple said, "I—er—am going up that way this afternoon. I'll have a word with the Misses Skinners."

"O, thank you, madam," said Edna.

Old Hall was a big Victorian house surrounded by woods and parkland. Since it had been proved unlettable and unsalable as it was, an enterprising speculator had divided it into four flats with a central hot water system, and the use of "the grounds" to be held in common by the tenants. The experiment had been satisfactory. A rich and eccentric old lady and her maid occupied one flat. The old lady had a passion for birds and entertained a feathered gathering to meals every day. A retired Indian judge and his wife rented a second. A very young couple, recently married, occupied the third, and the fourth had been taken only two months ago by two maiden ladies of the name of Skinner.

Miss Marple was acquainted with all the tenants, tho she knew none of them well. The elder Miss Skinner, Miss Lavinia, was what might be termed the working member of the firm. Miss Emily, the younger, spent most of her time in bed suffering from various complaints which, in the opinion of St. Mary Mead, were largely imaginary. Only Miss Lavinia believed devoutly in her sister's martyrdom and patience under affliction, and willingly ran errands and trotted up and down to the village for things that "my sister had suddenly fancied."

It was the view of St. Mary Mead that if Miss Emily suffered half as much as she said she did, she would have sent for Dr. Haydock long ago. But Miss Emily, when this was hinted to her, shut her eyes in a superior way and murmured that her case was not a simple one—the best specialists in London had been baffled by it—and that a wonderful new man had put her on a most revolutionary course of treatment and that she really hoped her health would improve under it. No humdrum G. P. could possibly understand her case.

"And it's my opinion," said the outspoken Miss Hartnell, "that she's very wise not to send for him. Dear Dr. Haydock, in that breezy manner of his, would tell her that there was nothing the matter with her and to get up and not make a fuss! Do her a lot of good!"

Failing such arbitrary treatment, however, Miss Emily continued to lie on sofas, to surround herself with strange little pillboxes, and to reject nearly everything that had been cooked for her and ask for something else—usually something difficult and inconvenient to get.

The door was opened to Miss Marple by "Gladdie," looking more depressed than Miss Marple had ever thought possible. In the sitting room Miss Lavinia rose to greet Miss Marple.

Mary politely retrieved various odds and ends.

Lavinia Skinner was a tall, gaunt, bony female of 50. She had a gruff voice and an abrupt manner.

"Nice to see you," she said. "Emily's lying down—feeling low today, poor dear. Hope she'll see you, it would cheer her up, but there are times when she doesn't feel up to seeing anybody. Poor dear, she's wonderfully patient."

Miss Marple responded politely. Servants were the main topic of conversation in St. Mary Mead, so it was not difficult to lead the conversation in that direction. Miss Marple said she had heard that that nice girl, Gladys Holmes, was leaving.

Miss Lavinia nodded.

"Wednesday week. Broke things, you know. Can't have that."

Miss Lavinia Refuses to Reconsider About Gladys

Miss Marple sighed and said we all had to put up with things nowadays. It was so difficult to get girls to come to the country. Did Miss Skinner really think it was wise to part with Gladys?

"Know it's difficult to get servants," admitted Miss Lavinia. "The Devereuxs haven't got anybody—but then I don't wonder—always quarreling, jazz on all night—meals any time—that girl knows nothing of housekeeping, I pity her husband! Then the Larkins have just lost their maid. Of course, what with the judge's Indian temper and his wanting Chota Hazri, as he calls it, at 6 in the morning and Mrs. Larkin always fussing, I don't wonder at that, either. Mrs. Carmichael's Janet is a fixture, of course—tho in my opinion she's the most disagreeable woman, and absolutely bullies the old lady."

"Then don't you think you might reconsider your decision about Gladys? She really is a nice girl. I know all her family; very honest and superior."

"I've got my reasons," she said importantly.

Miss Marple murmured: "You missed a brooch, I understand——"

"Now who has been talking? I suppose the girl has. Quite frankly, I'm almost certain she took it. And then got frightened and put it back—but of course one can't say anything unless one is sure." She changed the subject. "Do come and see Miss Emily, Miss Marple. I'm sure it would do her good."

Miss Marple followed meekly to where Miss Lavinia knocked on a door; was bidden enter and ushered her guest into the best room in the flat, most of the light of which was excluded by half-drawn blinds. Miss Emily was lying in bed, apparently enjoying the half gloom and her own indefinite sufferings.

The dim light showed her to be a thin, indecisive looking creature, with a good deal of grayish yellow hair untidily wound around her head and erupting into curls, the whole thing looking like a bird's nest of which no self-respecting bird could be proud. There was a smell in the room of eau-de-cologne, stale biscuits, and camphor.

With half-closed eyes and in a thin, weak voice, Emily Skinner explained that this was "one of her bad days."

"The worst of ill-health is," said Miss Emily in a melancholy tone, "that one knows what a burden one is to every one around one.

"Lavinia is very good to me. Lavvie dear, I do so hate giving trouble, but if my hot water bottle could only be filled in the way I like it—too full it weighs on me so—on the other hand, if it is not sufficiently filled, it gets cold immediately."

"I'm sorry, dear. Give it to me. I will empty a little out."

"Perhaps, if you're doing that, it might be refilled. There are no rusks in the house, I suppose—no, no, it doesn't matter. I can do without. Some weak tea and a slice of lemon—no lemons? No, really, I couldn't drink tea without lemon. I think the milk was slightly turned this morning. It has put me right against milk in my tea. It doesn't matter. I can do without my tea. Only I do feel so weak. Oysters, they say, are nourishing. I wonder if I could fancy a few. No, no, too much bother to get hold of them so late in the day. I can fast until tomorrow."

Lavinia left the room murmuring something incoherent about bicycling down to the village.

Miss Emily smiled feebly at her guest and remarked that she did hate giving any one any trouble.

Miss Marple told Edna that evening that she was afraid her embassy had met with no success.

She was rather troubled to find that rumors as to Glady's dishonesty were already going around the village.

In the postoffice, Miss Wetherly tackled her: "My dear Jane, they gave her a written reference saying she was willing and sober and respectable, but saying nothing about honesty. That seems to me most significant! I hear there was some trouble about a brooch. I think there must be something in it, you know, because one doesn't let a servant go nowadays unless it's something rather grave. They'll find it most difficult to get any one else. Girls simply will not go to Old Hall. They're nervous coming home on their days out. You'll see, the Skinners won't find any one else, and then, perhaps that dreadful hypochondriac sister will have to get up and do something!"

Great was the chagrin of the village when it was made known that the Misses Skinners had engaged, from an agency, a new maid who, by all accounts, was a perfect paragon.

"A three years' reference recommending her most warmly, she prefers the country, and actually asks less wages than Gladys. I really feel we have been most fortunate."

"Well, really," said Miss Marple, to whom these details were imparted by Miss Lavinia in the fishmonger's shop. "It does seem too good to be true."

It then became the opinion of St. Mary Mead that the paragon would cry off at the last minute and fail to arrive.

None of these prognostications came true, however, and the village was able to observe the domestic treasure, by name, Mary Higgins, driving thru the village in Reed's taxi to Old Hall. It had to be admitted that her appearance was good. A most respectable looking woman, very neatly dressed.

When Miss Marple next visited Old Hall, on the occasion of recruiting stallholders for the Vicarage Fête, Mary Higgins opened the door. She was certainly a most superior looking maid, at a guess 40 years of age, with neat black hair, rosy cheeks, a plump figure discreetly arrayed in black with a white apron and cap—"quite the good, old-fashioned type of servant," as Miss Marple explained afterwards, and with the proper, inaudible, respectful voice, so different from the loud but adenoidal accents of Gladys.

Miss Lavinia was looking far less harrassed than usual and, altho she regretted that she could not take a stall owing to her preoccupation with her sister, she nevertheless tendered a handsome monetary contribution, and promised to produce a consignment of penwipers and babies' socks.

Miss Marple commented on her air of well-being.

"I really feel I owe a great deal to Mary. I am so thankful I had the resolution to get rid of that other girl. Mary is really invaluable. Cooks nicely and waits beautifully and keeps our little flat scrupulously clean—mattresses turned over every day. And she is really wonderful with Emily!"

Miss Marple hastily inquired after Emily.

"O, poor dear, she has been very much under the weather lately. She can't help it, of course, but it really makes things a little difficult, sometimes. Wanting certain things cooked and then, when they come, saying she can't eat now—and then wanting them again half an hour later and everything spoilt and having to be done again. It makes, of course, a lot of work—but fortunately Mary does not seem to mind at all. She's used to waiting on invalids, she says, and understands them. It is such a comfort."

"Dear me," said Miss Marple. "You are fortunate."

"Yes, indeed. I really feel Mary has been sent to us as an answer to prayer."

"She sounds to me," said Miss Marple, "almost too good to be true. I should—well, I should be a little careful if I were you."

Lavinia Skinner failed to perceive the point of this remark. She said: "O! I assure you I do all I can to make her comfortable. I don't know what I should do if she left."

"I don't expect she'll leave until she's ready to leave," said Miss Marple and stared very hard at her hostess.

Miss Lavinia said: "If one has no domestic worries, it takes such a load off one's mind, doesn't it? How is your little Edna shaping?"

"She's doing quite nicely. Not much ahead, of course. Not like your Mary. Still I do know all about Edna, because she's a village girl."

As she went out into the hall she heard the invalid's voice fretfully raised: "This compress has been allowed to get quite dry—Dr. Allerton particularly said moisture continually renewed. There, there, leave it. I want a cup of tea and a boiled egg—boiled only three minutes and a half, remember, and send Miss Lavinia to me."

The efficient Mary emerged from the bedroom and, saying to Lavinia, "Miss Emily is asking for you, madam," proceeded to open the door for Miss Marple, helping her into her coat, and handing her her umbrella in the most irreproachable fashion.

Miss Marple took the umbrella,

NEXT SUNDAY—"NOT ONLY OIL," A SHORT STORY BY T. T. FLYNN

"Which friend sent you, Miss Day?"

What Has Gone Before

Miles Barcland, Chicago financier, who has risen to power and riches thru blackmail, extortion, and bribery, receives a whispered death threat over the telephone in his hideout. Unable to recognize the voice or the sex of the Whisperer, he searches thru records in a secret compartment of his bedroom, hoping to get some clew. He chooses the four most incriminating documents—a death-threatening letter to him by Duke Herndon, bootlegger; a death-threatening letter and two love letters signed "Elfreda"; a record of murders ordered by Tony Monoco, racketeer; and an affidavit swearing that Drake Royal, gambler, killed a certain man. Miles turns over this evidence to Paul Brand, his lifelong friend. That night he attends the opening of a night club run by Monoco, where Lucille Day, Monoco's mistress, is the featured singer. Other guests at the opening include: Miles' son, Richard; Brand; Jim Hallard, oil executive and silent partner of Detective Dan O'Malley; Ann Marshall, Hallard's fiancee; Margaret and Herbert Severn, Ann's flirtatious sister and jealous brother-in-law; Duke Herndon, and Drake Royal. Miles is blackmailing Ann into breaking her engagement to Jim and promising to marry Richard by threatening to show Herbert letters Margaret wrote a gigolo. With Miles looking on, Ann gives Jim back his ring. Lights suddenly go out in the night club and some one shoots at Miles but misses. Shortly after 3 o'clock the next morning Jim is awakened by what he thinks is his telephone ringing, but when he answers it the line is clear. He decides to go to Miles' hangout and demand Margaret's letters. When he reaches there he finds Richard drunk in the living room and Miles murdered in the bedroom. As he is picking up a brooch he thinks is Ann's, police step out of hiding and demand it. Some one had called police headquarters shortly after 3 a. m. and whispered the report of Miles' murder. Richard remembers having seen two different women come and go from his father's apartment that night and later having been struck by some one, but he was too drunk to remember the women or his assailant. refuses to talk, as he received a whispered threat over the telephone. Brand gets O'Malley to work on the case Miles left a note to Brand asking him to find the murderer. The janitor seems to recognize a picture of Ann but and turns over to Jim the four documents Miles gave him. Jim telephones Herndon, Royal, and Monoco, telling them that he has the documents, then tapes them to the body of Nick, his valet. Jim has Ann hide in an unoccupied apartment of Nick's sister to keep police from questioning her, but Dick learns about the hideout, gets drunk, and tells many others. The Whisperer telephones Jim, then Ann, threatening death if they don't stop trying to find the murderer. Jim, accompanied by police, goes to Ann's hideout, but finds Brand there. Brand says the Whisperer telephoned him, threatening Ann. Ann denies owning the brooch police question her about and shows them one she has like it. She tells Jim that Margaret admitted having been in Miles' apartment the night of the murder and having lost her brooch, but denies killing Miles. Both Tony and Dick arrive at Ann's hideout while police are there. Afterward Tony sends for Jim and O'Malley and his men search them in vain for Tony's record book. When they return to Jim's apartment they find that Tony's men have also been there and torn everything up in their search. Brand tells them Dick is missing. As they leave the apartment some one shoots at them.

INSTALMENT X.

JIM HALLARD and Dan O'Malley were silent as their cab moved south and then west. Dan seemed amused. Every once in a while he chuckled to himself. But Jim was seething with anger. He felt as he always had felt under fire during the first World war.

At first, he was shocked by the sense of imminent danger. Then he was excited. Then, after it was over, he was wildly mad at the attempt upon his life.

The cab drew up to the curb in front of the homicide bureau. The driver pulled down the flag. Dan got out alone.

He turned and walked toward the entrance and Jim leaned forward and gave the driver Ann's address. He wondered if Dick were with Ann. She had promised to use her knowledge of psychoanalysis to help Dick remember who he had seen in his father's apartment the night of the murder.

The cab driver searched for the flag but held his hand as he looked back at Jim. He slid back the panel in the glass partition.

"You Mr. Hallard, Mr. Jim Hallard?" he asked.

"Yes," Jim replied.

"Well, I got something might interest you. It might mean something and it might not. It's about a dame. It happened the night this guy, Barcland, was croaked."

"What was it?"

"Well, I'm night hawking, see? And I'm cruising up and down. I'm just turning the corner into Rush which I see this dame come out of an apartment near Barcland's. Maybe it was Barcland's. Since I've been thinking it over, I believe it was. But you know how it is. Reading things in the papers gets you to believe things that ain't always so. They call it the power of suggestion."

Jim sat quietly, watching him.

"So I swing over to the curb. I didn't have to flag her. I didn't have to say anything. As soon as she sees me, she makes a dive for the cab. I swing the door open and switch on the light in the back so I can get a good gander at her. She piles in. 'Drive me to 1942 Winthrop avenue,' she says in a voice so low and sweet it sent tickles over me. 'Hurry!'

"I stepped on it, but I got a good look at her before she caught me watching her in the mirror and told me to turn off the glimmer. Boy, was she something! A blonde in a black evening dress under a fur coat. But what a blonde! Big slant eyes. Plenty of fire ready to be lit in them. A face like you see in moving pictures. A build like a strip teaser's."

"Why didn't you tell the police?"

"Why should I?" the cabby argued reasonably. "If I told them I'd carried a dame away from the scene of a murder, they might take me in the back room. They might use a hose on me to make me confess I saw her shoot Barcland or even helped her. Not me!

"Anyhow, I don't know whether she came out of the apartment house where Barcland was croaked.

"She gave me her right address and when we get there, she went right in. And she gave me a two-bit tip. No more. No less. That's a pretty big tip for a woman. But it ain't no tip for a dame that's mixed up in a killing to give a hacker for driving her away from it. If she was in it, she'd have given me a fin, anyway, even if she was sap enough to tip off to me where she lived. To tell you the truth, I never connected her up with Barcland's bump-off until I recognized you."

"What time did you pick her up?"

"It was around 3 o'clock. Maybe a little after. Why? Does that mean anything to you? You think maybe she chilled him?"

"Somebody did," Jim said. "I'm looking for candidates. I may look her up."

"It's going to be a tough job," the cabby told him. "That 1942 Winthrop is a hell of a big apartment house. Couple a hundred people in it. It's gonna take plenty of time to find her."

"Not if she's the knock-out you say she is," Jim grinned. "I got plenty of time. I may hire your cab by the day and you and I will sit in it near the apartment house until she comes out. What's your name?"

"Purvis, Harry Purvis, Mr. Hallard. Me and the bus will be on the stand in front of your place any time you want us."

Jim came alert as the cab swung to the curb in front of Ann's apartment. The cabby pulled down the flag and proferred the meter reading. But Jim ignored it as he handed him a fifty and a five dollar bill.

"Thanks, Harry," he said. "Maybe we'll get together."

Ann and Dick sat chairs on either side of the fireplace. They were gazing thoughtfully into the log fire as Jim came in.

"Jim!" Ann greeted, and held out her hand. But as he took it, her face grew grave again. "Dick," she explained, "has remembered one of the two women he met in his father's apartment on the night Miles was killed. But he wanted you here before he told who she was."

"Not before I told who she was," Dick corrected. His voice was harsh. "But to find out why I should tell at all. Hello, Jim. Ann's been psychoanalyzing me. It tears your nerves much worse than a week's hard drinking. But Ann's good.

"She kept me at it. I found one of those two women after only about two hours of hell. But I don't think it's going to help anybody if I tell who she was. It wouldn't help the woman. And I'm sure she'd rather remain unknown. Both of them would. If they didn't, they'd have come forward before this. Isn't that true, Jim?"

Dick Barcland Professes His Love for Ann

Jim felt his antagonism. It was almost tangible. And his quick temper leaped to meet it. But he held it in check. He sat down in a chair next to Ann's and looked straight into Dick's eyes, and said:

"Knowing who she is and who the other woman is may help us to discover who killed your father."

"And what good will that do?" Dick sneered. "It won't bring my father back to life. It will just push some poor devil to disgrace and trial and death. Maybe a woman. But I forgot. You're not so much interested in finding my father's murderer as you are in getting back the letters Margaret Severn wrote to a gigolo. You think the murderer has them, so you want to know who the murderer is."

Anger whitened Jim's face.

"I didn't mean that," Dick said quickly. "It was a rotten thing to say. But I love Ann, too. I even want to marry her. Do you want to know how long I've loved her? All my life, I guess, but especially after my mother—died." His voice faded. He sat there, thinking. "Perhaps, it was because I had to love some one," he laughed, "and Ann was nearest to me. But I always knew it was hopeless. And then, one day not long ago, it wasn't hopeless. My father told me Ann would marry me."

Jim was uncomfortable. He felt vaguely ashamed, as tho he was looking at something that he had no right to see. He glanced quickly at Ann. She was staring beyond Dick. There were tears in her eyes.

"When my father told me," Dick explained, "I thought he was laughing. But I asked Ann to marry me and she said she would. Didn't you, Ann? I don't believe I was ever so happy in my life. I know I'll never be that happy again. And then, my father was killed and I learned that he had forced Ann to accept me. He had used those damned silly letters that Margaret had written as a club. Then, it was worse than if I had never had any hope because that hope was killed before my eyes and I still——"

"Don't, Dick," Ann said softly.

"O, I'm not going to cry about it," Dick promised her. "Only it didn't make me feel any closer to my father. I mean, it isn't particularly important to me whether his killer is found or not. That's why I'm not sure it is for the best that I tell who the first woman was I met in his apartment that night. I don't think it will help anything. It will hurt her. It may hurt Ann, too."

"Dick," Ann said quickly. "Jim and I both know Margaret was in the apartment that night. Margaret told me."

"So you told Jim," Dick's voice was bitter. "Well, let's take it from there. Margaret was the first woman I saw there. She may have killed my father. She had motive enough. He was holding her letters to Steath over her head. If her husband ever saw them, Margaret would have been ruined."

"Margaret didn't kill him," Ann calmly insisted. "She told me she didn't. She didn't know he had been killed until she saw it in the paper."

"That's her story," Dick laughed shortly. "It may be true. But it's the story she would have told if she had killed him. What else could she say?"

"You could have done it, too," Jim reminded him.

"But I didn't," Dick said. "I know I didn't."

"If you didn't," Jim argued, "then you and Margaret Severn are eliminated. There's still a lot of suspects. Right now, the most promising is the other woman you met in the apartment. But we'll never get a chance to question her, if we don't learn who she is. You may be the only one who can solve your father's murder because you saw the murderer. Could it have been this other woman? Who was she?"

"If I could remember that," Dick said impatiently, "I'd know whether she killed dad. But I can't fix her in my mind. All I can remember is that both she and Margaret were in evening dress and that she wore orchids. I remember snatching one from her shoulder as she brushed by me on the stairs."

"Try to remember, Dick."

Dick stared at her, trying to refuse it. "It hurts," he said. "I don't want to remember."

"Won't it be easier if you lie down?" she suggested.

Dick made no reply, but he got out of the chair and walked to the couch. He sat down and remained there a moment as if lost in thought. Then he swung his feet off the floor and lay on his back, staring unseeingly at the ceiling. After several minutes of silence, Dick said plaintively:

"Margaret was asking dad for some letters he held in his hand. He refused to give them to her as I came in. I told him that if they were hers, he should return them to her. He cursed me and told me to mind my own business. He went into the bedroom and I followed him. He was putting the letters away. Some place. Some hidden place. I saw him——" His voice trailed off. "It's gone."

Jim felt the thrill of a hunter who has found a new and unexpected trail. So Miles Barcland did have a hiding place for the explosive, slanderous papers with which he had clubbed so many of his victims. It was in his hideaway apartment. Dick had located it even closer than that. It was somewhere in the bedroom. Ann's voice broke in on his excited thoughts.

"Yes?" she was prompting. "What happened then?"

"What happened then," Dick repeated. But he did not answer the question. He remained staring at the ceiling while a new picture focused in his mind. "Dad put me out," he said at last. "I sat on the stairs. Margaret came out and went past me down the stairs. I went back to the bar again. I was drinking." His voice got fainter, trailed off. Jim felt the tenseness in his own body. "Then there was a blank and then I was ringing dad's doorbell again," Dick resumed.

"I rang a long time until dad opened the door. He was in his pajamas and bathrobe. He tried to close the door on me. But I pushed in. A woman was coming out of the bedroom. She wore a black evening dress. There was an orchid at her shoulder. She laughed as she passed me on her way to the door. I got mad. I called her a name and snatched the orchid. I knew her. Who——" His voice waded again.

"Who was she?" Ann's voice snapped like a whip.

"Why, Lucille," Dick said mildly. "Lucille Day. I remember now."

Jim held himself motionless by sheer will power and his two hands gripped to the arms of his chair. Lucille Day? Tony Monoco's sensational torch singer at the Krazy Kat and, if rumor was correct, Tony's mistress. And then his memory painted another swift picture of her. She must have been the mysterious woman who had driven away from the apartment that night in Harry Purvis' cab. Harry's description fitted her.

"Was it Lucille Day who struck you with the pistol?"

"I don't know," Dick said tiredly. "Wait. Let me think. When she went out I sat down on the couch. I fell asleep. I don't know for how long. I woke to hear quarreling with somebody in the bedroom. But I fell asleep again. Pistol shots woke me up. I was on my feet. The bedroom was lighted. I walked toward it. Some one came out of it and hit me in the face with a pistol—with a pistol."

"Who was it?" Ann asked breathlessly.

"I don't—I can't remember," Dick said. He frowned, trying to concentrate. "I almost can. Let me think——"

All three heard the telephone. It rang insistently, once, twice. The frown disappeared from Dick's forehead. He sighed.

"O, Dick! Who was it?" Ann wailed.

"I can't remember," he answered shortly. "I'm all in. I need a drink."

Helga appeared in the doorway.

"Mr. Brand wishes to speak to you, madam," she announced.

"Thank you, Helga," Ann said. "Bring whisky and soda, will you?"

Ann Reports Phone Conversation with Brand

She rose and left the room. They could hear her talking.

"Yes, Paul, he's here. But why are you so anxious? You shouldn't worry like that. What can happen to him? O, Jim Hallard is here, too, and we were just talking of this and that. Yes, among other things. I'm sure he'll be all right. But I'll tell him."

Ann came in.

"Paul was worrying about you," she told Dick. "He suggested that it might be a good idea for you to go home."

"Paul," Dick tried to smile away his annoyance, "is probably my best friend. But sometimes he acts like an old lady. As a matter of fact, I am going home. But I wish Paul would quit trying to direct me by remote control. Are you going my way, Jim?"

"No," Jim told him as Helga brought in whisky, soda, and glasses on a tray. "I have some people to see. So I'll say now that you and Ann have done a fine day's work."

"It would have been better if Dick could only have remembered the person who struck him."

"I will," Dick said confidently after drinking a stiff drink. "I almost had it when the telephone rang." He chuckled. "Whoever it was wouldn't like the idea."

"They'd kill you, if they knew,"

SOMEBODY WHISPERED

Ann declared solemnly. "You mustn't tell any one, Dick. Not any one."

"I won't," Dick promised.

Sipping his highball, his eyes opaque, Jim reviewed the spate of information that had flooded over them that night. The interview with Tony Monoco had not tied him in with the crime, but it hadn't eliminated him as a suspect, either. And the revelation that Lucille Day had been in Miles Barcland's apartment before—or during—his murder made Tony loom again as a possible killer, if Lucille, herself, hadn't done it.

So here were two likely suspects and one of them, Tony, already had been indicated by Miles Barcland as one of three men who had good reasons for killing him. Jim already had decided that since luck seemed to be with him this night, it might be well to interview the other one. He was Drake Royal, the gambler, who knew Barcland held indisputable evidence of an old murder he had committed.

Jim Hallard knew the Monte Carlo well. It followed the Richard Canfield tradition and had achieved a quiet elegance.

It was housed in a stone mansion on the northern fringes of the Gold Coast and was furnished tastefully and illuminated by reflected lighting. The first floor was devoted to entertainment and refreshment, being a cabaret with a good floor show. When and if patrons felt the urge to play, they ascended to the gambling room which occupied the entire second floor except the large, square sedately furnished room in the rear which was Drake Royal's office.

Jim reached there at 2 a. m., and, relieved of his coat and hat by an attendant who greeted him by name, he ascended the stairs and paused in the doorway to survey the softly illuminated room. It was comfortably filled with a crowd, the majority of which wore formal evening dress. They were gathered in little groups around two roulette wheels, three dice tables, and two blackjack tables whose limits, Jim knew, were the sky.

He gave the players only a cursory glance. He was looking for Drake Royal and he saw him almost immediately. He was standing at a dice table watching a steel man from Pittsburgh riding his luck for his seventh pass.

The gambler saw him coming toward him and extended his long, shapely hand as he smiled politely.

"Good evening, Mr. Hallard," he greeted. "It's nice to see you here. What is your pleasure?"

"A few words with you," Jim grinned, "if you're not too busy."

Royal's expression did not change. But his gray eyes turned wary. "I'm never too busy," he said. "In fact, I've been expecting you. Will you step into the office?" When they entered the quiet room, he motioned to an overstuffed chair and took his seat behind a flat-topped desk. "Now, what's on your mind?" he asked.

"I don't know," Jim confessed. "A trade, maybe. I've got something that concerns you. I'd like to give it to you for information about some letters Dan O'Malley and I are looking for." He paused and waited.

Drake Royal made a tall house by placing his long fingers together.

"I could stall with you, Hallard," he said thoughtfully, "but it would be a waste of time. I'm playing this as if it were a showdown.

"I know what you and Dan O'Malley are holding. I told you I've been expecting you." He held up one hand and counted the items off on his fingers. "You have an affidavit signed by a man named Bullock. It claims that I killed a man named Healey in a gambling store I ran in St. Louis by hitting him with a club. You have records that would send Tony Monoco to prison and might even put him in the chair. You have four letters. They were written to Miles Barcland by Duke Herndon, the ex-bootlegger, and a girl named 'Elfreda.' Both people threatened to kill him.

"The letters you're looking for disappeared when Barcland was killed and you, therefore, believe that his killer has them. I'm a candidate. If I killed Barcland, I have the letters. You want them back for the affidavit. Right? I knew all this about an hour after the papers were turned over to you."

"That's it," Jim nodded.

"You haven't much of a hand," the gambler pointed out. "If I killed Barcland, the affidavit wouldn't be a drop in the bucket. It would have no trading value. If I didn't kill Barcland, it would be no more of a threat than it has been for two years, since Barcland persuaded Bullock to sign it. In fact," he smiled, "it is hardly a threat any more. You're neither a blackmailer nor a stool pigeon. You'd have to have a better reason than you have now to turn it over to the police."

He looked at Jim and his smile widened. Jim laughed.

"You've got something there," he admitted ruefully. "So I'll put the question directly. Did you kill Barcland?"

Royal stared at him and his smile faded.

"I almost believe I'd tell you, if I did," he said gravely. "I didn't. I have an alibi. The night Barcland was killed was a big night here. I was on the floor from 10 o'clock until 5 the next morning. A hundred people saw me."

"Who is 'Elfreda'?" Jim abruptly asked.

"'Elfreda,'" Royal smiled, "is quite a girl. She may give you some ideas. I thought she was—well, my best friend until I found out she had brought the story of Healey's death to Barcland. Healey's death always worried me because I made a bad play. He died of heart disease in my gambling place in St. Louis and he had his seizure at the head of a flight of stairs. Bullock found him when he was locking up the place. He told me about it. I examined Healey. He was dead. I didn't want an investigation of his death in my place so Bullock and I carried him out and laid him on the sidewalk a block away. I don't know how Elfreda found out about it, but I talk in my sleep. She probably overheard me. Anyhow, she told Barcland."

"Why?" Jim asked.

"Barcland did the same thing to her she did to me," the gambler grinned. "He took her away from me. He was quite a hand with the girls. He was after this place then. She helped him all she could. He paid her off by getting rid of her. He accused her of two-timing him with Tony Monoco. Maybe he was right. Tony thinks so. But if I were Tony, I'd just turn that around. Those incriminating records Barcland had disappeared from Tony's place after Elfreda became friendly with him. I don't think Tony realizes it, tho. She is his featured singer."

"Lucille Day?" Jim grunted, as tho he'd been hit in the stomach.

"That's the lady," Royal nodded. "Her real name is Elfreda Baum. But Monoco doesn't know that. I knew her when she was a kid. She's from St. Louis, you know."

Jim Finds Singer Waiting in Apartment

As Jim, a half hour later, climbed into a cab in front of the Monte Carlo and gave his home address to the hackie, he realized that Elfreda Baum, alias Lucille Day, was the best bet they had unearthed since Miles Barcland was murdered. A woman who had done the things she had done was capable of killing him for any of several reasons.

Because she loved him. And from the letter she had written him, it looked as tho she did.

He paid off the driver absentmindedly and walked into the Angel Arms. Absently, he felt for his keys as he ascended in the elevator. He was thrusting his key in the lock when the door opened. Nick Serento confronted him.

"Did you tell a dame to come up here and wait for you?" he asked.

"Why?" Jim countered.

"Because she's in there now, waiting for you," Nick informed him.

Jim walked past him into the living room. A woman smiled at him from the divan. She was Lucille Day.

"I'm Lucille Day," she told him in her low, husky speaking voice. "I realize I'm intruding. I hope I can explain."

"Sit down, please," Jim invited.

Nick turned and glided out, silent as a shadow.

"What do you want to see me about?" Jim asked bluntly.

"I've heard certain papers were given you on the morning of the day Miles Barcland was killed," she said. "Would you mind telling me if that's true?"

"Yes, it's true, Jim answered, watching her.

"Would you mind telling me what kind of papers they were?"

"Not if I had a reason."

She sighed and brought her hands together and leaned forward. "The reason for my being here," she declared with an air of confession, "is a friend of mine. This friend asked me to see if I could persuade you to return certain papers 'they' believe you may have."

"Which friend sent you, Miss Day?" Jim grinned. "More than one of your friends is concerned."

She shot him a frightened glance. "It wasn't Tony Monoco," she answered quickly. "He told me you had something of his. But my friend is a woman. She signed the name 'Elfreda' to some letters she wrote to Mr. Barcland. Have you those letters?"

"I know where some letters signed 'Elfreda' are," Jim acknowledged.

"My friend told me," the woman explained, "that the letters are really perfectly innocent. They were written as a joke to Mr. Barcland. But in view of—what happened—they read like threats. That's why she's anxious to get them back."

"I see," Jim nodded. "Who is Elfreda, Miss Day?"

Her eyes were hidden for an instant. She started to smile, thought better of it.

"Elfreda," she began, "is an artist. She came from a small town and studied here in Chicago and became very good in her line. She met Miles Barcland and fell in love with him." A harsh note came into her voice. "She found out that he was taking advantage of her love. He used it to hurt other people. When she learned he'd made a fool of her, she began to hate him. In the letters she wrote to him, the ones I'm asking you to give to me, she admitted that hatred. She was so carried away by it that she even"—she hesitated—"she even threatened to kill him.

"Of course, she didn't mean that," the woman explained. "Her anger was writing that part of the letters. But, if the police ever get hold of them, they'll think she killed him. She didn't. I swear she didn't. I know." Her hands started to tremble, but she clasped them hard together and got hold of herself. "So, she asked me to come and explain all this to you. She said she had heard that you were the kind of man who would understand."

"Why didn't she come and tell me this herself?" he asked.

"She was afraid," the woman explained. "She didn't want to be mixed up in a—a killing."

THE CASE OF THE PERFECT MAID

dropped it, tried to pick it up and dropped her bag which flew open. Mary politely retrieved various odds and ends—a handkerchief, an engagement book, an old-fashioned leather purse, two shillings, three pennies, and a striped piece of peppermint rock.

Miss Marple received the last with some signs of confusion.

"O, dear, that must have been Mrs. Clement's little boy. He was sucking it, I remember, and he took my bag to play with. He must have put it inside. It's terribly sticky, isn't it?"

"Shall I take it, madam?"

"O, would you? Thank you so much."

Mary stopped to retrieve the last item, a small mirror, upon recovering which Miss Marple exclaimed fervently: "How lucky now that that isn't broken."

She thereupon departed, Mary standing politely by the door holding a piece of striped rock with a completely expressionless face.

For 10 days longer St. Mary Mead had to endure hearing of the excellencies of Miss Lavinia's and Miss Emily's treasure.

On the 11th day, the village awoke to its big thrill.

Mary, the paragon, was missing! Her bed had not been slept in and the front door was found ajar. She had slipped out quietly during the night.

And not Mary alone was missing! Two brooches and five rings of Miss Lavinia's; three rings, a pendant, a bracelet, and four brooches of Miss Emily's were missing also!

It was the beginning of a chapter of catastrophe.

Young Mrs. Devereux had lost her diamonds which she kept in an unlocked drawer and also some valuable furs given to her as a wedding present. The judge and his wife also had had jewelry taken and a certain amount of money. Mrs. Carmichael was the greatest sufferer. Not only had she some very valuable jewels, but she also kept a large sum of money in the flat which had gone. It had been Janet's evening out and her mistress was in the habit of walking round the gardens at dusk calling to the birds and scattering crumbs. It seemed clear that Mary, the perfect maid, had had keys to fit all the flats!

There was, it must be confessed, a certain amount of ill-natured pleasure in St. Mary Mead. Miss Lavinia had boasted so much of her marvelous Mary.

"And all the time, my dear, just a common thief!"

Interesting revelation followed. Not only had Mary disappeared into the blue, but the agency who had provided her and vouched for her credentials was alarmed to find that the Mary Higgins who had applied to them and whose references they had taken up had, to all intents and purposes, never existed. It was the name of a bona fide servant who had lived with the bona fide sister of a dean, but the real Mary Higgins was existing peacefully in a place in Cornwall.

"Damned clever, the whole thing," Inspector Slack was forced to admit. "And, if you ask me, that woman works in with a gang. There was a case of much the same kind in Northumberland a year ago. Stuff was never traced and they never caught her. However, we'll do better than that in Much Benham!"

Inspector Slack was always a confident man.

Nevertheless, weeks passed and Mary Higgins remained triumphantly at large. In vain Inspector Slack redoubled that energy that so belied his name.

Miss Lavinia remained tearful. Miss Emily was so upset, and felt so alarmed by her condition that she actually sent for Dr. Haydock.

The whole of the village was terribly anxious to know what he thought of Miss Emily's claims to ill-health, but naturally could not ask him. Satisfactory data came to hand on the subject, however, thru Mr. Meek, the chemist's assistant, who was walking out with Clara, Mrs. Price-Ridley's maid. It was then known that Dr. Haydock had prescribed a mixture of asafetida and valerian which, according to Mr. Meek, was the stock remedy for malingerers in the army! It was felt that this settled the question of Miss Emily's health once and for all, and great admiration was felt for Dr. Haydock's masterly handling of the case.

Soon afterward it was learned that Miss Emily, not relishing the medical attention she had had, was declaring that in the state of her health she felt it her duty to be near the specialist in London who understood her case. It was, she said, only fair to Lavinia.

The flat was put up for subletting.

It was a few days after that that Miss Marple, rather pink and flustered, called at the police station in Much Benham and asked for Inspector Slack.

Inspector Slack did not like Miss Marple. But he was aware that the chief constable, Col. Melchett, did not share that opinion. Rather grudgingly, therefore, he received her.

"Good afternoon, Miss Marple, what can I do for you?"

"O, dear," said Miss Marple, "I'm afraid you're in a hurry."

"Lot of work on," said Inspector Slack, "but I can spare a few moments."

Miss Marple Starts to Talk About Maid

He frowned judicially.

"O, dear," said Miss Marple. "I hope I shall be able to put what I say properly. So difficult, you know, to explain oneself, don't you think? No, perhaps you don't. But you see, not having been educated in the modern style—just a governess, you know, who taught one the dates of the kings of England and general knowledge—Dr. Brewer—three kinds of diseases of wheat—blight, mildew—now what was the third—was it smut?"

"Do you want to talk about smut?" asked Inspector Slack and then blushed.

"O, no, no," Miss Marple hastily disclaimed any wish to talk about smut. "Just an illustration, you know. And how needles are made and all that. Discursive, you know, but not teaching one to keep to the point. Which is what I want to do. It's about Miss Skinner's maid, Gladys, you know."

"Mary Higgins," said Inspector Slack.

"O, yes, the second maid. But it's Gladys Holmes I mean—rather an impertinent girl and far too pleased with herself, but really strictly honest, and it's so important that that should be recognized."

"No charge against her so far as I know," said the inspector.

"No, I know there isn't a charge—but that makes it worse. Because, you see, people go on thinking things. O dear—I knew I should explain badly. What I really mean is that the important thing is to find Mary Higgins."

"Certainly," said Inspector Slack. "Have you any ideas on the subject?"

He grudgingly remembered that Miss Marple's ideas had occasionally proved of use to the administration of justice.

"Well, as a matter of fact, I have," said Miss Marple. "May I ask you a question? Are finger prints of no use to you?"

"Ah," said Inspector Slack, "that's where she was a bit too artful for us. Did most of her work in rubber gloves or housemaid's gloves, it seems. And she'd been careful—wiped off everything in her bedroom and on the sink. Couldn't find a single finger print in the place!"

"If you did have her finger prints, would it help?"

"It might, madam. They may be known at the Yard. This isn't her first job, I'd say!"

Miss Marple nodded brightly. She opened her bag and extracted a small cardboard box. Inside it, wedged in cotton wool, was a small mirror.

"From my handbag," said Miss Marple. "The maid's prints are on it. I think they should be satisfactory—she touched an extremely sticky substance a moment previously."

Inspector Slack stared.

"Did you get her finger prints on purpose?"

"Of course."

"You suspected her then?"

"Well, you know it did strike me that she was a little too good to be true. I practically told Miss Lavinia so. But she simply wouldn't take the hint! I'm afraid, you know, inspector, that I don't believe in paragons. Most of us have our faults—and domestic service shows them up very quickly!"

"Well," said Inspector Slack, recovering his balance, "I'm obliged to you, I'm sure. We'll send these up to the Yard and see what they have to say."

He stopped. Miss Marple had put her head a little on one side and was regarding him with a good deal of meaning.

"You wouldn't consider, I suppose, inspector, looking a little nearer home?"

"What do you mean, Miss Marple?"

"It's very difficult to explain, but when you come across a peculiar thing you notice it. Altho, often, peculiar things may be the merest trifles. I've felt that all along, you know; I mean about Gladys and the brooch. She's an honest girl; she didn't take that brooch. Then why did Miss Skinner think she did? Miss Skinner's not a fool; far from it! Why was she so anxious to let a girl go who was a good servant when servants are hard to get? It was peculiar, you know. So I wondered. I wondered a good deal. And I noticed another peculiar thing! Miss Emily's a hypochondriac, but she's the first hypochondriac who hasn't sent for some doctor or other at once. Hypochondriacs love doctors. Miss Emily didn't!"

"What are you suggesting, Miss Marple?"

Inspector Slack was still quite fogged.

"Well, I'm suggesting, you know, that Miss Lavinia and Miss Emily are peculiar people. Miss Emily spent nearly all her time in a dark room. And if that hair of hers isn't a wig I—I'll eat my own back switch! And what I say is this—it's perfectly possible for a thin, pale, gray-haired, whining woman to be the same as a black-haired, rosy-cheeked, plump woman. And nobody that I can find ever saw Miss Emily and Mary Higgins at one and the same time.

"Plenty of time to get impressions of all the keys, plenty of time to find out all about the other tenants, and then—get rid of the local girl. Miss Emily takes a brisk walk across country one night and arrives at the station as Mary Higgins next day. And then, at the right moment, Mary Higgins disappears, and off goes the hue and cry after her. I'll tell you where you'll find her, inspector. On Miss Emily Skinner's sofa! Get her finger prints if you don't believe me, but you'll find I'm right! A couple of clever thieves, that's what the Skinners are—and no doubt in league with a clever post and rails or fence or whatever you call it. But they won't get away with it this time! I'm not going to have one of our village girl's character for honesty taken away like that! Gladys Holmes is as honest as the day and everybody's going to know it! Good afternoon!"

Miss Marple had stalked out before Inspector Slack had recovered.

"Whew!" he muttered. "I wonder if she's right?"

He soon found out that Miss Marple was right again.

Col. Melchett congratulated Slack on his efficiency and Miss Marple had Gladys come to tea with Edna and spoke to her seriously on settling down in a good situation when she got one.

New York Theater Sputters Thru a New Opening

Murder Play Arouses Only Tepid Reaction

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special].—The new theater season sputtered thru a second opening last week, like a tallow dip in a saucer giving off a thin, yellow light. An oft-heralded murder mystery called "I Killed the Count" furnished the excuse.

There is a theory in the theater that if a bad murder play is made sufficiently ridiculous it thereupon automatically becomes both an exciting and amusing comedy. Alec Coppel, an English writer, thought up one in which no less than four persons confess to the killing of a count who could, by the evidence, have been dispatched by only one of them. It still was a bad murder play when he finished with it, altho it could boast laughable incidents.

Doris Nolan.

The fact that the victim of the four suspects must subject himself to flashback illustrations of all four killings makes the playing of that rôle a pretty tough assignment.

The count was discovered in a prolog with his head both bloodied and bowed, reclining in a wing chair before the fireplace. Inspector Davidson of Scotland Yard decided that he had been shot in the head by a person unknown, but probably by a mysterious tenant living in an adjoining flat. The search for suspects brings in two such tenants, as well as an elevator man who was in the habit of putting the count to bed. Each of them, forced into a corner by the inspector's questioning, proceeds to describe how he did the murder, and each of these scenes is acted out.

In each instance there was a struggle in the dark, a muffled shot, and the count crumpled. Now, if he crumpled anywhere near the chair in which he was discovered in the prolog, the situation was easily handled, but in all three killings the first night he appeared to have been shot in the stomach instead of the head, and at some distance from the chair. The supposed dead man was therefore obliged to help his murderer get him back to the position in which his body was discovered. This made the audience laugh some, but not much.

In the end it was revealed that the murder had been plotted and the evidence of guilt planted deliberately to incriminate all the suspects and defeat the authorities. The deed was really done by an abused heroine and didn't matter, seeing the count was a dastard to start with.

The playing company is good, being headed by Louis Hector, who knows his way about Scotland Yard, Clarence Derwent, and Doris Nolan.

Ten years separated the passing of the Harrison Grey Fiskes. He, the manager, died last week at the age of 81. She, the actress, died in February, 1932, at 67. Together they had battled thru 10 of the most tempestuous years in American theater history, fighting the theatrical trust. And after full and active lives both had passed as quietly and obscurely, from the point of view of public knowledge, as any two of the theater's notables known to fame.

I had occasion, not long since, to look up the drama written by C. M. S. McClelland called "Leah Kleschna," with which Mrs. Fiske started her famous Manhattan Theater company on its career in December, 1904, with John Mason and George Arliss in her support. It brought vivdly to mind the theater of that day, and the part the Fiskes had played in it.

All thru the 1890s, Fiske had been editor and proprietor of the old Dramatic Mirror. Up to 1899, Minnie Maddern had been a favorite star of the stage, playing skittish heroines in light comedies of the "caprice" and "feather brain" order.

When she married the young editor of the Mirror, Minnie Maddern retired from the stage. For four years she was contented to conduct the affairs of her home. Then her husband wrote his first play, one called "Helen Crewe," which he was sure she could play better than any other actress.

For that occasion, Minnie Maddern returned to the theater as Minnie Maddern Fiske, and her husband became her manager. It was the beginning of new careers for both. He took less and less interest in journalism and more and more interest in production. Gradually her interest in the more serious drama grew, and her manager let her have her way with it.

She played Nora in "A Doll's House" by way of indorsing what was then thought of as the radical realism of Henrik Ibsen. Together the Fiskes staged "A Light from St. Agnes," which she wrote, and "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," which he adapted. "Tess" gave them their first popular success.

In 1896, or thereabouts, they became involved in the fight with an "octopus" known as the theatrical syndicate. Klaw and Erlanger and four associate managers sought to control the booking arrangements of every legitimate theater in America. The Fiskes refused to subscribe along with David Belasco, Richard Mansfield, Francis Wilson, and other stars.

Barred from the better theaters, Mrs. Fiske played in vaudeville theaters, Masonic halls, burlesque theaters, community theaters, and even tents when necessary. Harrison Grey Fiske remained at home and fought the trust. Joined eventually by the Shuberts, the independents organized a rival booking organization and the fight was carried on thru the middle 1900s and finally won.

The joint careers of the Fiskes were active thereafter. Harrison Grey became a producer of better dramas, including the "Kismet" that made a fortune for several persons, with Otis Skinner as its star. Minnie Maddern grew in stature and popularity with an Ibsen répertoire and popular hits such as "Salvation Nell" and "Becky Sharp."

In 1932 Mrs. Fiske was touring in a play New York never saw, called "Against the Wind." In Chicago, illness compelled her to abandon her tour. She came back to New York and, after two months of illness, went to the home of an old friend on Long Island and died there the following day. In compliance with her definite instructions, there were no funeral services.

Shortly after his wife's passing Harrison Grey Fiske went into semi-retirement. Of recent years he had been writing his memoirs. He, too, sought seclusion. He died as modestly as he had lived, and also by his request little notice was taken of his passing.

Thus two of the theater's prominent figures played their parts, arranged their exits, and slipped quietly away. Their farewells were whispered, and none but the self-appointed historians of the theater took much heed of them. Truly the theater is an institution of strange contrasts.

Notes of the Theater

"Maid in the Ozarks," the week's only theater opening, reopens the Great Northern theater Tuesday evening. The hill-billy comedy by Claire Parrish ran for more than six months in the Grand playhouse in Los Angeles and then moved to San Francisco for seven weeks at the Alcazar theater. The cast includes five members of the original California company—Valeria Fisher, Burman Bodel, Jon Dawson, Alberta Casey, and Audrey Phalen. In place of others who could not leave California or who have been called into military service, the following Chicago actors have been engaged: Paul Mikota, Frank Pacelli, Peggy Wynne, Lee Young, Genevieve Stevens, and Jeanne Washburne.

A somewhat astounding synopsis has been provided, which we reprint verbatim, for your edification: "The play tells in rough and ready fashion the experiences of a city girl who goes to the hills to forget her past, is intrigued by a sincere and virile mountain boy, but tires of him when she meets an attractive artist who is in the mountains looking for local color. Her less attractive but honest sister gets the mountaineer and the curtain rings down with romance and happiness for all concerned."

"My Sister Eileen" closes at the Harris theater Saturday night after a total of 50 weeks, divided between two engagements of 32 and 18 weeks. On Sunday, Sept. 20, the company begins a week's stand at the Davidson theater in Milwaukee. St. Louis, Indianapolis, Columbus and Cincinnati will then see the comedy—at the bargain prices adopted by Producer Max Gordon for the second Chicago engagement.

"My Sister Eileen" is easily the most profitable of Mr. Gordon's many profitable stage successes. The Chicago takings, over 50 weeks, will almost reach the $450,000 mark. In New York, where the play is now finishing its 21st month, the total gross is already considerably higher. A third company also has done well by itself on tour and has just finished a two week return engagement in Washington, where the astonishing sum of $30,000 was garnered in at $1.65 top. Including the film rights, which were sold to Columbia for $225-000, the final earnings for the play will be in the neighborhood of $2,-000,000.

Chicago saw three Eileens and two Ruths. In the former rôle Marcy Wescott, K. T. Stevens, and Peggy Van Vleet appeared. Audrey Christie and Effie Afton played Ruth.

"Skating Vanities," the "musical on wheels," continues at the Chicago arena thru next Sunday evening. Most of the performers in the $100,000 roller skating extravaganza were new to show business when they were lured away from rinks all across the country in order to pool their talents in Harold Steinman's musical extravaganza. Heading the cast of this novel entertainment are Lucille Page, novelty and acrobatic dancer on roller skates; Buster West, comedian from many a Broadway production; Gloria Nord, ballerina on skates, and Bobby May, juggler. A chorus of 24 Rollerettes and 12 Roller Cadets participates in the show. The total number of participants is 85.

Lucille Page.

Maxwell Anderson's "The Eve of St. Mark," performing rights of which have been given to amateur theater members of the National Theater conference, will be given its world première performance Oct. 1 by the Fort Wayne, Ind., Civic theater. Repeat performances are scheduled for Oct. 2 and 3. "The Eve of St. Mark" will be the first of eight productions scheduled by the Fort Wayne Civic theater during the 1942-'43 season.

S. N. Behrman's new play, "The Pirate," receives its world première performance tomorrow evening in the Memorial Union theater at Madison, Wis. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne head the cast of the play, which is produced jointly by the Playwrights company and the Theater guild. After three nights in Madison the production moves to the Pabst theater in Milwaukee on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week.

"Heaven Can Wait," a play drawn from the moving picture, "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," will open the fall season of the Actors Company of Chicago on Oct. 7. Other plays considered for the repertory are John Van Druten's "Solitaire," Robert Ardrey's "Thunder Rock," Samson Raphaelson's "Jason," and a revival of Clifford Odets' "Awake and Sing."

The new London company of "Claudia" begins its career tomorrow evening at St. Martin's theater. The title part has been awarded to Nova Pilbeam, once a talented child actress and now, surprisingly, old enough to impersonate the young wife who refused to grow up. Hugh Sinclair, known to some American audiences, will be Claudia's husband, David, and Mary Hinton will play the rôle of the mother. The play retains its Connecticut locale. Only one change has been made in the script. An explanation has been written in of that typically American institution, the "party line."

Touring Schedule Is Announced for 'This Is the Army'

The complete touring schedule for "This Is the Army," the Irving Berlin soldier show, has now been announced: Two weeks beginning Sept. 29, Washington; two weeks beginning Oct. 12, Pittsburgh; two weeks beginning Oct. 26, Philadelphia; week of Nov. 9, Baltimore; two weeks beginning Nov. 16, Boston; week of Nov. 30, Cleveland; week of Dec. 7, Cincinnati; week of Dec. 14, St. Louis; two weeks beginning Dec. 21, Detroit; two weeks beginning Jan. 4, Chicago. After closing at the Civic Opera house in Chicago, Jan. 16, the entire cast will go to Hollywood to make the motion picture version. After the film has been completed the tour will be resumed.

Vivian Della Chiesa Sings in Summer Opera

Vivian Della Chiesa, the young American soprano who was once a resident of East Chicago, Ind., and of Chicago, and who was active here in opera, radio and concert work, made two appearances as Mimi in Puccini's "La Bohême" with the Cincinnati Summer Opera company this summer.

POPULAR RECORDINGS

Add Benny Goodman to the growing group of bandsmen who link "Dearly Beloved" and "I'm Old Fashioned" on a platter. Benny does his usual workmanlike job on this Columbia record, altho it is the debut of Buzz Alston as vocalist that catches attention. Chicago's Dick Jurgens comes across with a good pair for Columbia, too: "Hip Hip Hooray," sung neatly by Buddy Moreno, and "Why Don't You Fall in Love with Me?," chorused by Harry Cool.

Victor interest centers in the King Sisters' version of that Indian dilly, "Kille Kille." You'll wanta war dance. On the other side is "Daybreak," a gorgeous interpretation. Freddy Martin is okay in his treatment of "I Wanna Go Back to West Virginia" and "Hello Mom," the latter a soldier ditty. Not up to his best, but satisfactory.

Nathan Milstein to Aid Sales of War Bonds

The treasury department has named Nathan Milstein, world famous Russian born violinist, coördinator among musicians for the promotion of war bond sales.

Bookwormish Daughter Causes Her Mother Worry

Parent Seeks to Broaden Girl's Views

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Here is today's letter:

"My dear Mrs. Bevans:

"I have three lovely daughters, nine, six, and four years old. It is of the oldest one that I am writing to you for advice.

"She is a bright child, has 'skipped' twice in school, but she is not happy. I envy other mothers whose children always seem gay and carefree. My daughter has no friends. She does not seem to get along with any children for too long a time. She would be completely satisfied with books; she is an indiscriminate and voracious reader [as I was when a child, altho I enjoyed outdoor play too]. Also the radio. She is permitted about an hour's listening daily, and she resents the fact that there is restraint on radio programs and that there is no weekly movie, altho she goes occasionally, weather permitting. She has an active imagination and is always day dreaming with a far away look.

"She has an interested father. I am trying to say that our home is a happy one. We take them many places, very frequently the zoo, and so forth, but she is not too interested. She is a well developed child, physically the biggest probably in her class, the youngest in years.

"I want to help my daughter be happy and contented. Can you help me? I am miserable when I watch her; she is really a beautiful, dutiful, and sweet, helpful child, but she is missing a lot of fun that I would want her to have."

This letter is about one of a group of children who are not "run of the mill," who may in time and with our efforts become more "average" in social and individual development, but who, until they do so, cause their parents much concern.

After all, most of us who are mothers have formed in our minds a picture of what a "normal" child is. We think that such a child has the best chances of happiness. There are, however, innumerable boys and girls who are variations from that perhaps arbitrary, "norm" we set up. Sometimes they go thru a short period of being "different," sometimes a longer one. Yet these children usually achieve a satisfactory life, even a strikingly successful one, as they grow older. It is important that, in our efforts in their behalf, we do not make them feel inadequate or inferior.

My answer to her follows:

Your letter is the more difficult to answer because it presents a problem which is anything but cut and dried. However, I have several thoughts on the matter.

One is that, provided you continue to do everything to give your little girl a well balanced life [as you are now doing] you simply wait for her to grow past this phase. She may change greatly as she gets along to 11 or 12, which is the pre-adolescent age.

Another thought is that you might try to "wangle" her into following a hobby; and to find some interest which she has other than books, which will draw her into contact with groups of children. If this is not practicable, try inviting, one at a time, playmates that your daughter likes to the house, and include them on your trips. Also, encourage her in sports. And try to uncover, and then develop, any latent talent she may have.

The third thing is that the absence of her interest in mixing with other children may be tied up with several things; one, that she is bright and large for her age and so is associated with children older than she, and therefore they have not a common ground of interests and play. This kind of thing frequently happens with brilliant children and an effort has to be made to find congenial companionship for them. Also, the unusually tall or large child sometimes develops somewhat solitary ways. Have you ever thought of having her take dancing lessons, both social and special dancing?

These are some suggestions that I hope will act as starting points for you. I do want to add, however, that first you must not worry, as so many things work out if we are patient; second, that you must not let your little girl know you are all worked up about what you consider this lack of adjustment; and third, if you do try some of these measures do not expect a magical and sudden transformation.

Patterns by Clotilde

By Clotilde.

Softly tailored fashions are imperative for this wartime autumn. These three patterns offer a variety of smart daytime styles to fill virtually any wardrobe need.

No. 3550 works magic for the heavier silhouette. It has a rolled collar, easy sleeves and shoulders, softly shirred bodice and a slim skirt. Buttons trim the entire front. Prints and plain colors will make up equally well, with only contrasting binding for trimming.

No. 3484 is a winner for slender figures, because horizontal lines are employed. There's a contrasting band running across the bodice and another at the base of the low waistline. The cuffs on the three-quarter length sleeves match this contrast.

No. 3500 is the popular two piece effect, with moderately tailored jacket and slim skirt to match.

Style No. 3550 is designed for sizes 16, 18, and 20, and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50 inch bust measurements. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material.

Style No. 3484 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 39 inch material with ⅞ yard of contrasting.

Style No. 3500 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20, and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inch bust measurements. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 39 inch material.

Each pattern costs 10 cents, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost.

For 15 cents buy the summer Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions on sale at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower, 10 cents if ordered with a pattern. Address mail orders to New York address in coupon.

The Wise "Fool."

Socrates once called himself the wisest man in Athens because he alone knew the great interval between himself and perfection. Others thought him wise, but to the great philosopher himself the state of his wisdom was far short of what he wanted it to be. He never paused in his constant search for more facts, more understanding of the laws of the universe, both inside man and surrounding him.

Sew-Your-Own Calico Dolls Are Appealing

Priority worries offer no deterrent to captivating dolls in various shapes and sizes, and slyly sophisticated animals, as long as mother can sew! The new ones, appealing to both mothers and children, are masterpieces in calico, unbreakable, dyefast, and washable. They are yours for a small sum, needle and thread, and a little time.

The complete array of animals includes a dashing horse with a curly, beribboned mane; a coy little calf with limpid blue eyes and a most up to date froufrou; the rabbit family, dressed in the height of fashion, is represented by a dignified papa and a super mama; the ears and eyes of the calico dog and cat, and their gay colors, place them in a class which puts "best of dog and breed" at any show, in the back seat. There are no pink elephants in this group, but instead, a rakish blue fellow with vivid red accoutrements. The rest of the menagerie are outstanding personalities and all well behaved.

A snappy sailor doll is accompanied by an equally smart Red Cross nurse, with her new uniform of the latest cut. Jack and Jill, with their curly blond hair, skip gayly up a hill, clad in the newest of printed percales and patches. The surprise feature is this new package arrangement is the companion piece, a crib cover, or bedspread, which is stamped with the identical calico figures, the costumes of which are appliqued upon a white, waffle pique background. A small scenic arrangement appliqued in the background completes the story each character represents.

These dolls, animals, and covers are sold in packages ready for making. The unit includes embroidery thread and the variously colored materials required to create the animals, dolls, or applique pieces for the quilt, and all reasonably priced.

Another feature, especially designed for the young bib users, is a group of three bibs, flannel lined, bound with bright bias tape, and stamped with figures of Jack-Be-Nimble, Miss Muffett, and Little Bo Peep. Included in this triumverate are patches for each figure, embroidery thread for the finishing touches, and detailed instructions for the added attraction of quilting.

Sold in a Chicago department store, these items are reasonably priced for every pocketbook and to please every individual.

The Stamp Collector

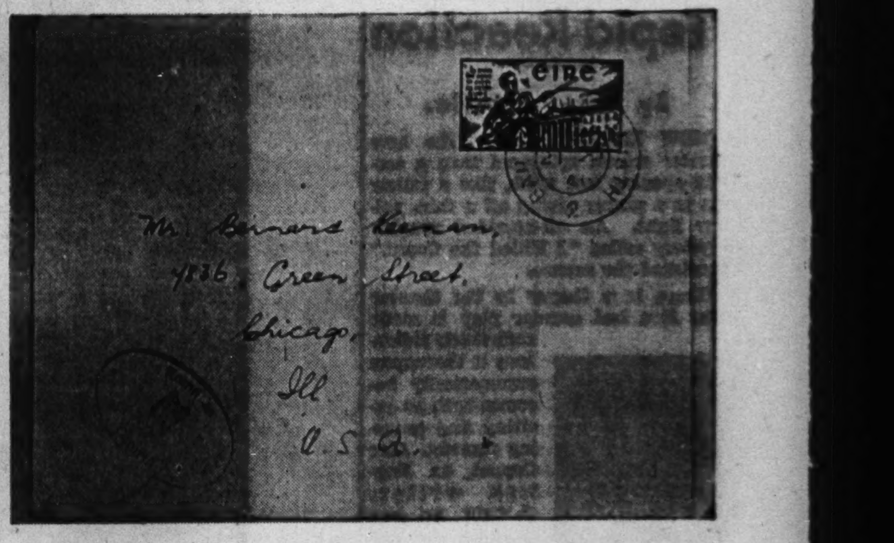
In recent issues of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE attention has been called to the use of the letter "q" without a "u" in the spelling of various foreign proper names. According to an explanation given editorially in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Aug. 30, such a "q" is pronounced "k" and occurs in words of Semitic origin.

General collectors are acquainted with similar words as they appear on the stamps of Albania, the most familiar example being in the monetary system. Qind is the Albanian word for one hundred and the fractional unit or one hundredth is a qintar or qindar and this appears on the stamps, full length or abbreviated to qint., or qind., or qd. Qintar was first used on stamps in December, 1913, when the Scanderbeg commemorative issue was placed on sale. Prior to that time the units of coinage had been associated with Turkish rule and had been expressed in paras and piastres. After 1913 there seemed to be some question about the monetary system, for we find the Scanderbeg stamps overprinted in 1914 with values in paras and groschen. In 1917 stamps were issued in centimes and francs, but in 1919 a return was made to the qintars with 100 of those units equaling one franc. This word was probably more French than Albanian and later in the year "qindar" was adopted as the proper Albanian spelling of the word.

The "q" without its companion "u" appears on nearly all the Albanian stamps in the name of the country. This started as Shqipenia, then Shqiponies and Shqipetare, Shqiptare, Shqipenie, etc., but by 1920 it became fairly well established as Shqyptare. However, in 1925 the spelling is changed to Shqiptare, altho later it appears on a few issues as Shqipni. Perhaps several of these variations of spelling are due to other national influences at work in the Albanian government or in part to the stamp printers themselves. A short word of this type is qen, which is Albanian for dog. If transliterated to ken, it looks as if it had been borrowed from the Latin canis.

It is doubtful if any of the Albanian, Turkish or Egyptian words which use the "q" alone are genuine examples of English spelling without the "u." It appears that they are simply foreign words used in current use without transliteration. Had the words been in the Cyrillic characters of Bulgaria it would be necessary to do something before they could be used in an English language newspaper, but since they were written in Latin letters they can be taken without change.

The word Albania is not a transliteration nor a translation of the natives' name for themselves. The word Shqiptare is derived according to legend from the word meaning "Land of the Men of the Eagle." Certain philologists believe that it means rockdwellers or possibly mountaineers. The name Albania, derived from the word "Alp," was tagged onto the snowy mountainous region by some foreigner in about the 11th century when he was confronted with the difficulty of pronouncing Shqüperia, as it was known at the time.



This cover from Bernard Keenan shows an Irish commemorative stamp which has not been previously illustrated in the Stamp Collector. It commemorates the 25th anniversary of the Easter week rebellion of 1916.

Many old collections contain copies of a brownish stamp or label as shown in the illustration. At first glance it would appear that this stamp might have been used to pay the registration charges on valuable mail matter, but this is not true. The label was not a government issue and evidently had no connection with postal matters, but was used in some manner at the Columbian exposition. The editor will consider it a favor if any reader who is acquainted with the facts will transmit them to this department.

The Midwest regional meeting of the American Air Mail society will be held at Milwaukee next Saturday and Sunday at the Plankington hotel. The Jack Knight Air Mail society of Chicago and the Milwaukee Air Mail society have joined to act as hosts at this meeting, which will consist of a business session, auction, bourse, exhibition and banquet.

The exhibition is by invitation only and will include the outstanding collections of the United States. The banquet is scheduled for Saturday at 6 p. m. with the auction following at 9 p. m. Auction lots will be on display before the sale. Dealers interested in the bourse may obtain full details from A. J. Karr, 2641 North 25th street, Milwaukee.

It is understood that the postoffice department will soon issue a new edition of the booklet entitled "A Description of United States stamps from 1847 to date." The most recent edition of this useful handbook came out in 1939 and since a large number of stamps have been issued since that date, collectors will welcome a chance to obtain an up-to-date copy.

Effective Aug. 24, Chicago was provided with a new postal station to be known as Lake Front Station. Altho there is nothing in the notice to warrant this supposition, it is believed that this station should be collected as a military service station.

A previous issue of the Stamp Collector announced the cancellation of the 1942 American Philatelic congress which had been scheduled to meet in Cincinnati. It is now learned that the papers prepared for this meeting have been published as is customary and the booklet will be mailed to collectors by Jere Hess Barr, 533 Penn street, Reading, Pa., upon receipt of $1.

Embroidered Quotation

By Nancy Cabot.

The attractive, cross-stitch sampler quotes the first line of the 23d psalm. The shepherd and his lambs are easy to execute, and the cross-stitch embroidery quotation is extremely simple and worked in monotone colored silk floss. The hot iron transfer motif measures 10 to 14 inches, and the chart includes a color guide and stitch illustrations.

For the hot iron transfer of "The Lord Is My Shepherd," No. 526, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Economical Cuts of Meat Also Are Savory

FASHIONS . . .
By Angela

"High hat" is the dominant tendency in headlines this fall, and wide, sweeping, pancake berets provide the other extreme. Whether your hat reaches skyward or stretches out toward the horizon, you'll be right with the fashion world.

Wool and felt combine to advantage in hats for fall and winter. In the first instance a band of crocheted wool in beige and rust divides and joins the brown felt crown and brim. A tassel of the same wool dangles from the peak of the crown.

• • •

Flat as a pancake and black as the bottom of a pocket is the wide beret. The black silk tassel over the left eyebrow will remind you of the mortar board you wore the day you graduated.

In the third hat wool is worked in such a way as to resemble coarse needlepoint. There are several styles of hat designed in this medium and a variety of color combinations, as well as plain colors, is available. This needlepoint is a nice complement to tweeds. A bracelet of brown wooden beads is laced around the high crown. $5.

Bags to match will make the accessory touch complete.

The ghost of Empress Eugénie stalks again in the small feather turban with the plume curling down back of the ear. You can get one to match your black, Kelly green, or rust colored dress, or virtually any other frock in your wardrobe.

Another hat and bag combination is the velveteen, a tiny bit of a hat and a big, pouchy bag. A high, triangular crown mounts above the twisted bumper brim of the hat. Sheer black veiling floats lightly. The interesting part of the bag, as far as design is concerned, is the heavy, velveteen rope twisted into a handle. The set, under $11.

The high peak in the brim of the next hat, which rolls back off the forehead and the temples, exposes the curls of the pompadour or bangs. It is a hat which fits down snugly on the head. Rustic felt is the material. Under $6.

Lend Variety to Menu and Help Budget

By Mary Meade.
[Copyright: 1942: By The Chicago Tribune.]

If we are headed for meatless days, as some authorities think, we shan't let it worry us. We'll serve cheese and beans on the meatless days when we don't have fish; and we'll learn new tricks in economical meat dishes for the days on which we are permitted this basic menu ingredient.

We won't complain about meat scarcity, either, for we know that no matter what food shortages we face we'll still be the best fed people in the world. Our meat, dairy, and crop productions are making all-time high records, but at the same time they must fulfill a tripled demand. Food for our armed forces right now is more important than food for us. So is food for our allies, whose diets have reached a dangerously low level of nutrition.

There are more ways to prepare economical meats, and those which are plentiful, than there are to fix the fancy roasts and steaks. Well prepared, economical, meat dishes can be so savory that they'll be demanded again and again.

Braised Ox Joints.

[Serves five.]

- 1 ox tail, rolled in flour
- 2 tablespoons margarine or other fat
- 1 cup canned tomatoes
- 1 cup water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon celery salt
- 4 whole cloves
- 1 bay leaf
- 3 cups diced carrots
- 2 small onions, chopped
- ¾ cup diced turnips
- ½ clove garlic
- ¾ cup lemon juice

Don't worry if you haven't all of the seasonings called for in this recipe. You'll still have a good dish if you have nothing but salt, pepper, and vegetables to add flavor. Cut the ox tail in short lengths, roll in flour, and brown in half the fat. Add water, seasonings, and tomatoes, and simmer about 2 hours, or until tender. Brown carrots, onion, turnips, and garlic lightly in the other tablespoonful of fat, add to the meat, and cook half an hour longer. Add lemon juice last 10 minutes of cooking.

Savory Casserole.

[Serves four.]

- ½ cup rice
- 1 cup tomato sauce
- 1 bay leaf
- 2 cups roast veal, beef, pork, or lamb, cubed
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 cup grated American cheese
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cook rice in boiling, salted water until tender, and drain. Simmer tomato sauce with bay leaf for three minutes. [Make your own tomato sauce, if you like, by seasoning strained canned tomatoes with salt, pepper, and onion.] Remove bay leaf and add sauce to cubed meat. Put half the rice in a greased casserole, dot with a tablespoon of butter, add ½ cup cheese, ¼ teaspoon salt, and 1-16 teaspoon pepper. Add meat and tomato sauce, then top with remaining rice and add remaining butter, cheese, salt, and pepper. Bake 35 minutes at 350 degrees.

Economical Lamb Grill.

[Serves four.]

- 4 round bone lamb shoulder chops
- 2 lamb kidneys, split
- 2 tomatoes, cut in halves
- 2 cups whole kernel corn or hominy
- 4 carrots, steamed or boiled whole

Place corn or hominy in broiler pan under rack. On rack place chops. Broil six or seven minutes about three and one-half inches under the broiling element. Season with salt and pepper, and turn. Now place the tomato halves on the rack also, sprinkle them with salt, and dot with butter. Brush carrots with butter and place them on the rack also. Broil another six or seven minutes and serve hot on a hot platter.

Barbecued "Hot Dogs."

Slit frankfurters and place in baking pan, slit side up. Pour barbecue sauce over them and bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes. Here's a good barbecue sauce which will take care of eight frankfurters, serving four persons nicely. Melt one tablespoon butter, cook ½ onion, chopped, in it until yellow. Add ½ cup catsup, ¼ cup vinegar, ¼ cup water, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, ⅛ teaspoon black pepper, 1 teaspoon paprika, and a few drops of tabasco. Bring ingredients to a boil and pour over frankfurters before baking. Baste with sauce several times during baking.

Meat, Rice, and Vegetable Casserole.

[Serves six.]

- ¾ cup uncooked rice
- 1 cup diced cooked carrots
- 1 pound ground beef
- ½ cup milk
- ⅓ cup bread crumbs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ¼ cup flour
- 2 cups milk
- 1 tablespoon chopped onion
- 1 teaspoon salt

Cook rice in rapidly boiling, salted water until tender. Mix meat with ½ cup milk, bread crumbs, and salt. Form into small balls. Brown in melted butter. Remove from pan and add flour to butter. Blend well. Add milk gradually. Cook and stir until gravy thickens. Add onion, other portion of salt, and cooked carrots. Add meat. Press rice around sides of buttered baking dish, pour meat mixture in the center, and bake at 350 degrees for half an hour.

Thru the Looking Glass
By Eleanor Nangle

These are the days which make milady realize she must repair the damage to loveliness which summer sun and lazy, easy days have wrought.
[TRIBUNE Studio Photo.]

We wouldn't need a calendar to know that the melancholy days have come. The mail reflects the season with the utmost fidelity.

"I need a permanent, but my hair is a mess. . . ."

"I've gained 9 pounds this summer, and all 9 are in exactly the wrong place for the streamlined dresses and short-jacketed suits. . . ."

"The tan that looked so gorgeous right after my vacation doesn't seem like such a good idea now; my skin just looks dirty. . . ."

And so on and on. This is the season to mend one's beauty fences.

• • •

The hair problems are fierce. Sun and wind, and the usual summer disregard of the hairbrush and its uses, take a toll that shows up just before the fall permanent. The solution lies in reconditioning, oiling, scalp massage, and brushing every day as faithfully as can be. It's a slow process, but it works. Hair responds to kind treatment. A quicker way is to invest in some professional treatments before you make a date with the permanent wave machine. The professional treatment always includes these three steps to hair beauty, but a skilled operator can do all three better than you can yourself.

About those pounds: Diet, sister, and exercise! Try a three day liquid diet as a starter; soups, [not the cream kind, however], vegetable and fruit juices, and skim milk. Then, when you'll have lost the first few pounds, start on a diet dictated by your own common sense. Eliminate the starches and the candies and the obvious fattening things. And, above all, go on the wagon! Alcohol and weight reduction don't work together. Do your setting ups, with fervor, every morning and evening. Those radio programs in the morning are good things to tie to if you're really serious about reducing or keeping fit.

Of course, if you can afford it, a course of professional reducing treatments, preferably the kind that blend massage and supervised exercise, will accomplish what you want in a much quicker time and won't call on you for the exercise of so much character. They're a wonderful investment, really.

Complexions need clarifying, but not at any cost of the natural oil supply. Use whitening creams, not strong bleaches, that lighten the skin slowly but surely and, at the same time, give back some of the precious oil that the summer sun has taken away. Here again, if you can afford it, professional care will be quicker and better. If you can't, home beauty treatments, all keyed to the faithful, generous use of a rich lubricant that lightens, will accomplish much.

Miss Donnelly Reports:

By Antoinette Donnelly.
[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Women must take time to replenish energy so needed to do an efficient job in their war work, whether it be as a nurses' aid or air raid warden, as an office volunteer or war plant worker. This relaxation and energy restoration period is as important to our war effort as the actual time spent at the machines or at the desk.

There are many short cuts to resting mind and body. When the afternoon zero hour arrives and time seems too short to finish that day's work, a pause of a minute or two will work wonders for aching back and confused mind. By standing up and stretching like a cat, the body's circulation will carry off fatigue. A whiff of a stimulating, spicy smelling salts will give a welcome lift.

State Federation of Women's Clubs Board to Meet

The new board of directors of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs will meet on Tuesday and Wednesday in the headquarters at 30 West Washington street. Mrs. Preston L. Wettaw, president of the federation, will call the first session to order at 10 o'clock on Tuesday.

During the six meetings vice presidents of the federation will report on "Advertising the Federation." District presidents will be asked to tell of "Advertising My District," while chairmen will have as their subject, "Advertising My Work." Mrs. Arthur W. De Selm, vice president of the central region, and board members from that region will have charge of dinner arrangements for Tuesday night.

Bettina Bedwell Says:

A dark dress with an air of shining elegance can be the "best beau" dress of a girl doing defense work in a factory. It is certain to be worn by city women and girls who would be debutantes in peacetime. A woman going to town from the suburbs with a date ahead of her is going to find such a dress just what she dreamed about.

The dress, thus set apart for playtime between five and whenever you go to bed, is more likely to be black than any other dark shade. It may be made fastening down the back, and with costume jewelry for accessories. Such a model is one by Nettie Rosenstein. A softly draped, untrimmed dress of rayon jersey, worn with special costume jewelry, is another of her good date dresses.

"Mary Lou" Quilt Design

By Jean Macdonald.

"Mary Lou" is the name of this attractive, applique pattern of a motif for a child's crib quilt. The apron and hat are of print materials, while the dress is of solid color. The alternating blocks may match the dress or be in contrast to the applique block on which "Mary Lou" is sewed.

For the quilt pattern, "Mary Lou," No. 1069, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Illinois Voters League Officers Plan Two Meetings

Department chairmen and officers from local leagues thruout the state will come together at two all-day department sessions to be conducted this week by the Illinois League of Women Voters. The first group will meet at 10 o'clock on Tuesday at Knox college, Galesburg, Ill. At 10 o'clock on Friday a similar discussion will be opened in the First Methodist church, Evanston.

Among the luncheon speakers will be Mrs. William H. Spencer, chairman of the state department of government and foreign policy; Mrs. Homer Johnson, chairman of government and education; Mrs. Marc A. Law, chairman of government and its operation; Mrs. Edward D. Nix, chairman of government and economic welfare, and Mrs. Walter T. Fisher, treasurer of the national league. Among the vital questions to be considered will be ways and means of fighting the apathy of citizens about voting; weaknesses in the proposed tax bill; the fight against inflation, and the need in Illinois for county units of public health.

The Lady of the House

"Come Under My Plaidie."

From kindergarten to college campus plaids, mannish or feminine, are going back to school with the youngsters, enlivening the picture along the way.

Mother Nature, too, says to the tired old earth, "Come under my plaidie," and spreads over the landscape her bright colors embracing all the tartans of all the clans of Old Scotia, where plaids really got their start.

Each Scottish clan selected and wove its own plaid, wearing it as a declaration of allegiance to its band of kinfolk. Later, as military organization advanced, the plaids were rewoven into regimental patterns, and today from over 100 old clan tartans we are told there are some 30 odd genuine and well known regimental plaids from which to choose.

As most things spring from humble beginnings, it is probable that the gay plaids of mighty clans are really the gift of the humblest of highland shepherds, who, having no dyes, wove their cloth in the natural colors of black and white shepherds' plaid, just as the wool came from the sheep.

September Magic.

A day of breeze,
A day so still
That you can hear
The maples spill
Their golden leaves
On yonder hill;
A sight long to remember.

A day of heat,
A day of cold,
An autumn haze
Blue mist on gold;
And there you have,
So I am told,
The aura of September.
—Helen Adele Lerch Miller.

Canning Summer.

"You have a front porch; why aren't you out there?" Aunt Ella came briskly out to the kitchen where I was canning.

"Standing over a hot stove putting up tomatoes on a day like this!"

"I'm not just canning tomatoes." [Aunt Ella always manages to get me on the defensive.] "I'm canning a lot of things this summer. I put an April shower and a rainbow in with my red rhubarb; the freshness of young green leaves and all the flowery fragrance of May and June with the strawberries and cherries. Fervid summer sun and sultry south wind are in every jar of these tomatoes. There's a bit of the lazy, hazy days of August in those cans of Indian berries, and I'm going to put a glorious golden harvest moon into my old-fashioned pumpkin marmalade, and the salty tang of southern seas with all the precious spices of Araby into the chutney and relishes —'Sabean odors from the spicy shore of Araby the Blest.'"

Aunt Ella gave me a sharp look, as if I'd said something queer. "I suppose those apples drying out there in the sun will taste just like September?"

"Exactly. And there's a lovely purple mood in that jar of dried wild bergamot, to say nothing of many cups of tea."

With a loud "humph" Aunt Ella departed, leaving me to make a game of my task—if I was "that simple."

Rolling Rumors.

Unlike a rolling stone, a rolling rumor
Gathers considerable "moss" along the way!
So let's do our bit for national morale—
Let's always be careful of what we say.

Because our version might be misconstrued,
Helping fear and hysteria to spread.
How much better to nip rumors in the bud
And pass along HAPPY thoughts ......instead!
—Balbina Mars.

Calling Junior.

He heard her voice, lilting, sweet,
"Yoo-hoo, Junior, time to eat,
Hurry, lunch is ready, dear";
Junior played—he did not hear.
"Come on Pet," was heard by all,
"Sweetheart! Lambkins!" Then the call
That set him quickly on his feet
And sent him racing down the street,
"Johnny Jones, I'll tan your hide;
Answer me," his mother cried.
And Junior, panting out each word,
Said, "Mom, your last call was the one I heard."
—Mary A. Ganey.

"Wee sleekit, cow'rin, tim'rous beastie."

[The only reply to Margaret Lofland's appeal, Aug. 16, that has any sympathy for the mouse.]

Come now, Mrs. Lofland, do have a heart
For one wee bit mousie who gave you a start;
The world is so large that all created things
Have their right in it, be they furred or with wings.
Why not stop up the hole and chase him away,
E'en tho your plans may have oft gone a-gley;
And if my suggestion your common sense spurns,
Please read again what was said by one Robert Burns.
—Marie Lilliander.

Which reminds of the induction to Henry IV., where Rumor says in his speech:

"Rumor is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures;
And of so easy and so plain a stop
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it." M. M.

Fashions as I See Them
By Judith Cass

The fact that it was a bad day may have had something to do with it, but the fact that their husbands and beaux are away in the service probably had more. At any rate a long table of young women who had luncheon together at the Onwentsia over the Labor day week-end didn't look particularly colorful. Their clothes were of the most informal kind, for the most part, and well tailored slacks predominated. Absolutely gone were the young men who customarily are golfing and dining at the club on holidays. There weren't but two "young" men present, tho a number of older ones were about. . . . Among the young women at the dove party was Mrs. William B. Cudahy. She was one in slacks. Her trousers were of dark blue, topped by a paler blue sweater. . . . One corner of the dining room was enlivened by Mrs. Telfer MacArthur's costume. She had on a brilliant yellow silk sports dress that buttoned all the way down the front. Because it was chilly she added a sweater of pale pink, and a tweed coat, also of pink, and the color combination turned out to be a most attractive one. . . . Mrs. Seymour Wheeler, at home after a month or two on Cape Cod, was wearing a hat reminiscent of the seashore at a Chicago luncheon party. It was made of four feather shells, each one partly opened, and with a pink feather pearl nestled inside.

Taking her young daughter to register for school in Hubbard Woods, Mrs. Wallace D. Mackenzie looked young enough to be enrolling for a little higher education herself. Mrs. Mackenzie's colorful costume combined a black and white mixed tweed skirt, a white cashmere sweater and a purple wool jacket. Little Madeleine Mackenzie was wearing a blue piqué dress with a white collar edged in lace, and a white cardigan sweater. . . . Mrs. Charles H. Conrad, in town from Tryon, N. C., for a few days at the Drake, shopped in a brown silk suit printed in white polka dots. On her head was a fetching brown felt hat trimmed with a charming little red-breasted bird of gold and beige. The Conrads and Mrs. Everett L. Millard were in a group having luncheon at the Indian Hill club on Labor day. Mrs. Millard was all in powder blue, turban, silk dress, and wool coat, a lovely color it was with her blue eyes. . . . Mrs. William W. Miller spent Labor day being teased about her "Johnny Jeep" hat, which was an old white tennis hat she clamped on her head, brim down. A blue skirt of heavy cotton, and a white blouse printed in a tiny red figure provided the perfect informal costume for picnicking that day. . . . Mrs. Philip W. Moore Jr. was wearing a dirndl type frock in tan printed all over in the wildest white animals imaginable. They looked rather like unicorns. . . . Miss Marjorie Kelly, back from a holday in the west, came to the picnic in raspberry linen slacks and a navy blue cardigan over a white blouse. . . . There's something fresh and pretty about gingham dresses, and Mrs. Joseph S. Miller was wearing one of the prettiest of these. Her dress was in blue and white checks, and tied at the neck with a little blue tie. . . . Mrs. Benjamin Crawford, celebrating a wedding anniversary, introduced a festive note with a lavish corsage of giant white gardenias, "one for each year," pinned to one shoulder of her gray, white, and black plaid frock. . . . Mrs. Lloyd Wheaton Bowers, the former Frances Reid Clow, strolled on Michigan boulevard with her bridegroom of a day wearing a new and stunning suit from her trousseau. It was of stone blue wool, in two pieces. The jacket was edged in beaver, and the hat that went with it was trimmed with a quill.

"They look like soldiers," somebody remarked of Miss Nancy Graff and Miss Cherry Boyd, who were wearing trim tweed suits to a Smith College club tea the other day. Their soldier like appearance was due principally to the visor caps of matching tweed these two pretty debutantes had upon their heads. A third such ensemble was worn by Miss Anne Bouscaren. Whereas the first two were wearing suits of pastel colors, Miss Bouscaren's was as giddy and gay as could be in small, bright checks. Her little hat was patterned after the overseas cap, and was most becoming with her long, blonde locks. . . . Miss Jane Leonard's hat at a Service club tea was one that could be worn only by the young and light in heart, a darling little red beanie from which dangled "leaves" of red, embroidered around their edges in black. It was perfect to enliven her town costume of black dress and topcoat. . . . Miss Mary Claire Van Hagen, who attended the meeting of the Service club along with Miss Leonard and other debutantes of this season, looked rather military, too. She was wearing a gabardine suit and a trim little brimmed hat in matching tan. Slung over one shoulder was a large brown leather pocketbook. The club is sponsoring the opening of the "Ice Follies of 1943" on Oct. 13 at the Chicago Arena as its annual benefit. . . . Miss Mary Lou Laird, a member of the benefit committee, came to the meeting in a pale blue wool suit, a charming color with her titian locks and fresh coloring. One of the new, large berets crowned her head.

Gabardine was far and away the most popular material at a luncheon party given for Mrs. Frederick M. Owens Jr. who until yesterday was Miss Lucy Trumbull. The bride's mother, Mrs. Charles L. Trumbull, was wearing a suit of gabardine in a lovely, bright blue color. . . . Mrs. William Woollett and Mrs. Norman Ibsen wore it in beige shirtwaist type dresses. Mrs. Ibsen's smart frock had a henna monogram at one corner of the collar, matching the henna cardigan she wore with it. . . . Miss Sally Clover appeared in the same style dress but in russet color. . . . The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Owens Sr. of Minneapolis, a stunning, white haired woman, appeared in a smart and becoming black dress. It was trimmed with white braid on the breast pocket, finished with white tassels. The bride and her sister, Mrs. James L. Worrall, wore rather similar tweed suits in gray and blue checks. . . . Gabardine appeared again in the raincoat Mrs. Gilbert Osgood tossed over her good looking India print frock. The coat was a reversible one of gabardine and tweed.

New Wartime Wedding Gowns Preserve Romance

Sacrifice No Traditional Bridal Beauty

By Rea Seeger.

Rules, regulations, precedent, protocol, brass hats, and the rest of the obstacles dwindle to minor irritations when wartime wedding plans are successfully culminated. 'Way back before all the martial dither caused so much speed and streamlining, weddings were planned at comparatively slow tempo, sometimes taking at least six months before every detail was perfected.

Speeded up with the rest of the excitement, to match the streamlining of living, are the weddings. It's no trick at all nowadays to select, and be fitted for, a wedding costume a day, or even a few hours, before the ceremony. The bridal bureaus deserve all the chest medals usually reserved for active combatants, for in these accommodating, and always sympathetic, strongholds of first aid to baffled and hurried, to say nothing of harassed, brides-to-be and their attendants, plus the families of both bride and bridegroom expert and knowing counselors do their stuff.

You can enter any of these havens, state your difficulties, needs, likes, dislikes and problems, and have them solved almost while you wait. Anything from bridal gown to gifts, personal doodads, veils, flower arrangements, and keeping track of the elusive bridegroom and his regulations as to uniform, hats, gloves, and duties are daily tricks to them. Ask anything and you'll get the right answer, for the quiz experts have nothing on these helpful authorities on wartime wedding ceremonies, or anything about a trousseau, new flower arrangements, new materials, colors, and such.

Bridal gowns still are the lovely, romantic drifts of tulle, lace, or net, or gleaming creations of bridal white satin or stiff, stand-alone taffeta. If you wear the average sizes, from 12 up to 38, or even more, you can find the gown of your dreams ready to wear immediately, if you so desire, many of them with little or no extra fitting except for length, tightening of wristband, and similar small items.

You can find breath-takingly beautiful lace gowns, whispering taffetas to swish most effectively down the longest center aisle, or the statuesque, time-honored gowns of shimmering satin. There are veils for every type of face and beauty, with proper headdresses to complete the picture, shoulder length to full sweeping trains that drift even beyond the longest of trains.

New this fall are the beautiful gowns that feature long sleeves, high covered yokes and necklines, unusual details of shirring and handwork to accentuate the beauty of the materials and, as usual, the myriad of tiny buttons used instead of the more utilitarian and, certainly, less romantic snaps or hooks and eyes of the daytime dress and your daily wardrobe. Every one of the newest models stresses beauty and romance, gowns that make unforgettable pictures.

But the newest finds are the wedding costumes for the brides foregoing the ceremony of the pageant-like weddings, the brides who plan to be married during a week-end leave or a 10 day furlough, or even a shorter time. These are the most feminine of dress parade suits, costumes, and thin wool dresses especially designed for early fall and winter brides. Very feminine affairs, all of them, with soft ruchings, shirrings, fur bands, bows of the materials, soft pastel or jewel-like colors, all combined with superflattering artistry, quite the equal of the effect achieved with the more ceremonious gowns of satin, lace, or silk.

Many of these costumes are completed with long to be remembered accessories, chartreuse tangerine, nattier blue or raspberry colored hats, gloves, or luxurious, large muffs of fluffy fur to match tiny hats of the same fur. One-piece dresses are as effective worn with unusual colored accessories as the suits or costumes of dress and companion coat. Velveteen, soft wool, velvet, corduroy, and combinations of wool with the velvet, velveteen, or taffeta offer plenty of choice. Price marks on both the bridal gowns of satin and these extremely smart suits and costumes of wool or dress parade velvets are amazingly low, a most important bit of shipping news.

The Sensitive Person Has a Valuable Trait

By Doris Blake

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Are your feelings hurt easily?

Then, undoubtedly, you are a fine person, but you are misusing a splendid trait. Sensitive persons have the capacity for bringing joy to themselves and every one else, or they can let their sensitivity make themselves and others miserable.

Edna's letter is an example of a sensitive person with the wrong slant:

"At the age of 15, I have had a hard life," Edna writes. "Mother has been divorced and her second marriage did not turn out well.

"I liked a boy who took advantage of my regard to get me to pet with him. I felt hurt about it and still do. I gave him up. Every time I meet him on the street I feel cheap and ashamed.

"I gave up my best girl friend because she always talked about my parents. When I tried to make friends with other girls, they ended by insulting me. Now I haven't any friends at all, because I feel I can't trust any one.

"Recently I met a boy who has the same tastes I have, but I don't know whether I should risk being disillusioned. Besides, our house is poorly furnished with only a few chairs in the living room. I am ashamed to have him call for me.

"I don't want to consult my mother about these things because she has been heartbroken so many times. I don't want to add to her troubles."

Edna's unhappy home life has made her supersensitive. Because of her background she distrusts people. It has given her the habit of self-pity. She always is blaming others for her troubles, dramatizing herself as a martyr. Unless she changes her attitude she will spend her whole life looking for unhappiness and inevitably finding it.

Yet the hardships and unhappiness she has suffered have not been entirely evil in their influence. They have made her considerate and sympathetic. So far she is only considerate and sympathetic with her mother. She will rise above her problems if she extends that circle of kindness. It takes a sensitive nature to understand and forgive. If Edna wants happiness herself, she should be sensitive about others and try to make them happy.

She has high standards. Of course it hurt her when the boy she liked persuaded her to lower them. As long as she blames the boy and cherishes her grievance, she will gain only pain from the experience, yet it could teach her how to handle such situations more successfully. If she learns something from it, it has really been of benefit to her.

A great writer once said, "Evil overcome is a benefactor." If misfortunes and troubles teach us something profitable, they have not been suffered in vain.

We would like to print a letter from a sensitive person with the right slant, but it is impossible. Such persons are too busy thinking about others to have many troubles of their own. We will have to be satisfied in describing them.

They feel other people's problems so keenly they forget about their own. They sense the hurts of their friends and try to heal them. They respond to other people's happiness, and rejoice with them. They can overlook another person's failings because they realize what prompted his weaknesses. They are sympathetic, forgiving, understanding. They know when to be quiet and when to laugh.

They give so much to others, love, friendship, and appreciation are constantly pouring back to them.

The next time your feelings are hurt congratulate yourself. You are a sensitive person, and a sensitive person has a capacity for joy, happiness, and helpfulness which the thick-skinned individual never knows. His faculties are keener. His imagination is more highly developed. Because he is responsive, every experience has that much more beauty and meaning for him. He can contribute more to society.

The next time your feelings are hurt congratulate yourself. Then turn that precious gift you have toward the outer world. Don't just be sensitive about yourself. Be sensitive to others. Then their happiness will be your happiness, too.

If you are sensitive, let other people benefit by it. Then you will forget the slights and wrongs to yourself. You won't find time for personal grievances.

Two Crocheted Edgings

By Ellen Bruce.

Here are two extremely attractive edgings for fall dresses. These will be found on the new "black-out" dresses and they certainly will be more decorative than the proverbial "headlight." It's not difficult to create, and a needleworker can go on and on to create any amount of this lace. These same edgings may be used on tray cloths, pillow cases, or towels.

For instructions in crocheting the two deep edgings, No. 1154, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

On the House

There are some lovely blond wood finishes available for wood paneling or for unpainted furniture. . . . These finishes do a dual job: They give an object the standard wood colors and also unusual ones, such as driftwood, honey, and cactus green; and their clear finish protects, while it lets the grain of the wood show thru. . . . Cost of two ½ pint cans [both the dye and the protective finish] is $1, and this amount will cover some 50 square feet of surface.

We mentioned some time ago a paint especially manufactured for awnings. . . . Now this same paint has been developed to prove effective on grass, fiber, or sisal rugs, old rugs that seem a bit too drab for continued usefulness. . . . This paint can be applied on rugs by a brush or sprayer, and acts as a water repeller as well as a preservative.

There's a unique little furnace unit which has been designed especially for low cost houses, and it is built entirely inside a chimney! . . . Certainly a saving of space and materials. . . . The fire box is built into the base of a conventional chimney, on first floor or basement level, and smoke and gases are carried off thru a porcelain enameled smoke stack, inside the chimney. . . . A suction fan draws in cold air, and a blower forces heated air thru registers into rooms. . . . The furnaces will use coal, oil, or gas.

Etiquet Editor Answers Varied Reader Queries

The column today will serve as a means of catching up on some of our correspondence. By making the answers public we can reply to our inquirers and perhaps hit upon a similar problem about which others of you have wondered.

Miss M. S. asks about the procedure of a wedding when the church in which it is taking place has no center aisle but, instead, two aisles, one at the right and one at the left of the altar.

You have a choice here, Miss S., of selecting one of the two aisles and employing it as the main aisle and considering the other as just a side aisle. The plan usually is followed when the wedding is a small one. Or, if the wedding is a large one with a great number of guests expected, both aisles may be used. The wedding party will approach the altar by proceeding down the right aisle. And after the ceremony the bride, bridegroom, and their attendants will walk down the left aisle to the exit of the church. Another detail which this particular style of church architecture alters is the seating of the guests. The family and relatives of the bride are seated at the right and left of the right aisle, the immediate family on the side nearest the altar. And the bridegroom's family is seated at the right and left of the left aisle, with his parents in the first pews on the side nearest the altar.

Mrs. T. asks this question: When a written message is delivered by a friend, is it true that the envelope should not be sealed?

Emphatically, yes. If you send a letter by a telegraph messenger, you can give it to him sealed, but under other circumstances the letter is given to the bearer unsealed. To seal it is to insinuate that the bearer would consider reading it. The individual who delivers the message should himself seal the envelope. It is customary, when one sends a letter in this fashion, to write in one corner of the envelope, "Kindness of ———," giving the bearer's name.

From Mrs. L: Is it correct to send a printed card of condolence to a family after a death?

A printed card for this purpose is not in good taste. It doesn't show much thoughtfulness and is a rather cold message. In such cases you should send a little personally written note of sympathy. Messages of this kind are rather difficult to write, and should not be too sentimental.

Golf Dinner Big Event at Hot Springs

By Cousin Eve.

HOT SPRINGS, VA.

Time was, a while ago, when the annual golf dinner at the Homestead seemed as remote as Christmas. Now it is history. The excitement happened over the Labor day week-end when the great hotel began suddenly to fill with patrons heavily laden with golf kits. The great lobby was livid from stem to stern with piles of luggage belonging to contestants for the Fairacres cup. And as for the dining room, golfers and their wives were lunching and dining and dancing with all the verve and noise of collegians.

Hectic might have been the word for it, but the entire season has been so gay that a few hundred more were a mere flea bite. Blind pool tickets toward a half interest in the champion were sold at $2 each, with 631 subscribers before the Saturday night dinner. This took place in the Empire room and was hilariously gay. The large party of the evening was Col. and Mrs. Le Ray Berdeau's, with a table across the room heaped with set pieces of huge bright pink dahlias. Mrs. Berdeau was very pretty in pink faille with a modern style necklet of rubies and diamonds. Mrs. Charles S. Dewey wore a mulberry embroidered muslin; Mrs. George Ranney's frock was pale blue, and Mrs. Philip Gossler of New York, a blonde beauty of this season, wore white satin. She is the mother-in-law of Tommy Leiter and quite the most alive of the New York women here. The Gosslers have a house at Nassau and are friends of the Windsors, and Mrs. Gossler writes poetry and songs.

Another very good looking woman at the dinner was Mrs. Charles Gray, who has been thru all the horrors of bombardment in London and shows it in her triste expression—the sad droop of her great dark eyes. Hicks Kerr, who heads the sports and amusements here, took the mike half way thru dinner and Mrs. Charles Lockridge passed a silver bowl from which 16 fair ladies drew each a number from the blind pool.

Mr. Kerr called upon Mrs. Fay Ingalls, Mrs. Logan Monroe, Mrs. Berdeau, Mrs. Ballard Moore, Mme. De Hertelendy and others to draw a number and the names were read as drawn. The owner of the first ticket had a magnificent name—Spurlock Farrington—and he owned Eddie Ault, many times champion, but nobody knew quite who Mr. Farrington was. However, time solves most mysteries, and soon it transpired that it was two of the waiters who serve the Casino lawn with efficiency, better known as Edward and George. Theirs was the first ticket drawn and $130 was divided between them syndicated to enormous applause. Mrs. Berdeau, who is very lucky, drew George Payton and bought him in herself at auction and the sale went on and on until $4,292 were raised for distribution.

Afterward, as the dinner guests poured out into the ballroom, they found the annual golf dance well under way, and scores of parties forming at the little tables lining the white and gold room. The white uniformed musicians were already hard at it with rhumbas and Viennese waltzes. Mrs. Richard Park, a pretty little piece of Dresden china was seated at the dinner with Billy Hitt.

Crossing the ballroom, thru various salons, and the lounge, you found bridge games going on, a dozen of them, the players utterly oblivious of golf and golf dinners, and wishing that the musicians blaring away with the tom-toms were "Deep in the Heart of Texas" and not here in the midst of the Alleghenies making so much noise.

The early days of September are magnificent in the mountains. Here and there across the incredible green of the leafage is a splash of red, a hint that it is later than we think. The air is super soft, the whole splendid panorama is drenched with a sort of gentle melancholy at the outward drift to winter.

The Chicago colony is breaking up and preparing to fold its tents. After a happy summer tucked away in the warmth of the enveloping hills we move on to make way for others. Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman leaves on Tuesday, Mrs. Ralph Shaw the same date and Mr. and Mrs. George Ranney go tomorrow.

At the moment the Ranney family has been augmented by the arrival of Dorothy and Gaylord Donnelley, who motored down from Cape May. Gay Donnelley is an officer in the naval reserve, and his young son, Elliott, aged 5 years, is one of the handsomest and brightest little boys seen in long days. The Donnelleys have a baby son, quite new.

For the present, this place is replete with attractive young couples taking a breathing space before setting forth into the world mêlée. Notable among these are the junior Kenneth Watsons of Washington, D. C. Black haired Mrs. Watson, who dresses dashingly, will delight the Brazilians no end, as Kenneth Watson has been appointed to represent Donald Nelson at Rio de Janeiro and they are ready to fly down at any moment. Watson Jr. is a very handsome man, with sleek black hair who will fit into the Brazilian scene perfectly.

Arthur Bradley Campbell had so many departing guests at the Sunday night dinner that it became a farewell for several, including Col. and Mrs. Berdeau, who motored away to New York on Tuesday. The Watsons were there and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Close, the jolly little minister from South Africa, and his nice little wife, whose wihte hair is parted in the middle and whose silks rustle when she walks. There is something of Queen Mary and, yes, of Queen Victoria, too, in this diplomatic lady.

Another recent arrival is the Hon. Mrs. Frederick Guest of Palm Beach, whose two polo playing sons are known far and wide. The Guests have become American citizens and Raymond is now in the navy and Winston is in the army. Diana Guest is a daughter of this house. All the Palm Beachites fell upon Mrs. Guest's neck and invited her to a series of cocktail routs as soon as she appeared in the lounge.

Mrs. Jack Ralston's cocktail party in honor of Congressman and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey of Chicago also was a farewell for herself and the two girls, Joan and young Lucille, who are already back in Dixon. Mrs. Ralston, who was Lucille Reynolds, is a modern Juno who does everything well. She swims, rides, golfs, and excels at most games, and so do her daughters.

The tennis lawn has been bathed in bright sunlight these days and bordered by the blue shadows of great old trees. Every little table is surrounded by groups in gay colors, and a few are watching the never ceasing tennis matches, but mostly the kibitzing is for the backgammon and the gin rummy. The summer's leading backgammonists are George Ranney of Chicago, Col. Berdeau, Robert Appleton of Palm Beach, Harold McGraw of New York, and Albert Russell of Cleveland. They all play outstanding games, and any contest between any of them is sure to draw a crowd.

On to the lawn of a warm, sunny day strolls an athletic, handsome brunet woman, medium slim, and not so tall. She is Mrs. Lawrence Copley Thaw, whose adventures at tiger shooting in India in company with her sportsman husband have been filmed and shown all over the world. In fact, the sale of the film paid the costs of the excursion. Mrs. Thaw shot a tiger between the eyes, which she likes to remember. But a feature of the shoot that she can never forget was falling out of the howdah once when the elephants were racing away from a man-eating tiger. A Hindu caught and held her by a foot, or she might not be here at the moment.

Another much admired and very picturesque woman who has been here this season is Mrs. Ward Ames of Duluth, who now registers from Palm Beach. Mrs. Ames has been doing a bit of sun bathing and is very tanned. As many of her frocks are the most vivid of Chinese reds, or plain whites, she presents, with dazzling white teeth and flashing black eyes, a most dashing appearance. Mrs. Ames also is clever at games and makes excellent ratings in the bridge and backgammon tournaments.

I hear children's voices, many shouts and joyous cries, in the circle below. For days a hay ride has been hanging like a sword over the mammas' heads, and now the long hay wagon is here with its heaps of hay and two fat piebald horses to draw the load of precious freight. The youngsters are hopping, leaping, and shrilling like so many gay little beetles, the reds and blues of their frocks and sweaters bright against the dark branches of the giant fir trees.

For children of older growth there was the horseback picnic one warm late afternoon. A cavalcade of young riders wound its way up the mountainside headed for some beauty spot not too far distant.

Last year there was still the picnic ground and pool at the Warm Sweet Springs for motorists. But some months ago the quaint old brick caravanserai built by Thomas Jefferson was sold for a sanitarium for tubercular patients. Way up on this high ridge behind White Sulphur stands the old resort, with its semicircle of cabins, once the rendezvous for all that was chic-chic and romantic in the history of American spas.

The Ballard Moores are the most inveterate of all the picnickers in the cottage colony, but on account of the gas situation they have given up this pleasure entirely. The Moores are leaving for Chicago on Tuesday. Mrs. John J. Abbott is the only one of a large group who will still linger on to welcome the autumn crowd.

There was a grand gala in the theater one night last week when "Mrs. Miniver" was given here for the first time and every seat in the house was taken. There was a great rush by those lady patrons who have their pet war charities to get the show for a benefit, but Fay Ingalls was adamant. No benefits are given under the Homestead roof, other than the sale of war bonds and stamps. These have done a large business. One man here from England has invested $10,000 in war paper.

Congressman and Mrs. Charles Dewey of Chicago are off again for Washington, leaving behind a trail of charming notes of adieu and farewell nosegays, and taking with them kindest thoughts. They are gay, warmhearted and friendly people in these trying days, and never bore any one with their sorrows. Theirs is the light and sparkling touch.

Mrs. Dewey wondered at the evening frocks worn here, the tinsel and the tulle, the low neck and bare arms. In Washington, it seems, it hasn't been done in many months. The Deweys will visit Peter Dewey and his bride, who are sojourning for a few months at Harrisburg, Pa. Young Dewey is a student at an officers' school in that region, where he is the youngest man in the group of several hundred assembled there. Among his confrères is Thornton Wilder.

Nancy Weller and Peter Dewey were married in such a rush, with only two days' notice, that many friends of the family have only just heard, and interesting wedding gifts are beginning to flow in. Peter and his bride have taken a small apartment in Washington and when he goes into active service the lovely little creature will stay on alone and keep the home fires burning.

Women in War Work

By India Moffett

Whenever an emergency makes increased industrial production necessary, such expressions as "overtime" and "extra shifts," and "time and a half" get into pretty general usage. To the layman, these terms are likely to mean hundreds of men and women working day and night on weekdays, Sundays, and holidays with never a day off until the emergency is past. But to employers and labor leaders increased production means compliance with labor regulations first of all. In Illinois, emergency regulations and relaxations thereof are controled thru the War Labor Standards board of which State Director of Labor Francis B. Murphy is chairman.

As war production increases and more men go into service, more and more women will go into industry. Many of these women will be new to war production industry, and many more will be new to industry itself. Some may be attracted by the prospect of high overtime pay. Others may be afraid to accept jobs that need doing for fear that possibly the overtime would tax them physically or keep them away from family responsibilities too long.

"These problems and many more are considered at the regular board meetings," says Miss Miriam Michael, secretary of the board.

Miss Michael may be considered a woman in war work herself now that she devotes her entire time to the work of the board. She is also experienced in labor problems, for she was assistant supervisor in the state division of women's and children's employment for eight years.

Regulations that must be relaxed to permit overtime for war production are the women's eight hour law and the six day week law. Employers first began asking for relaxations and receiving grants thereof in November, 1941, as the national defense program gained momentum. Requests increased with Pearl Harbor.

Under these laws, women work eight hours a day. They may work that period for six days, but they must receive overtime [time and a half] for everything over 40 hours. Relaxations of the law [which are not often granted] allow women to work up to a maximum of 54 hours a week—that is, nine hours a day for six days with overtime for all over 40 hours. Grants vary with individual cases. For instance, it might be possible for an employer to obtain permission for women to work 10 hours a day for three days.

Gov. Dwight Green appointed the Illinois board as a means of settling labor problems thru an administrative agency. It has operated so successfully that State Labor Director Murphy has had requests for outlines of the plan from many other states.

The board functions as a nonpolitical body. Members are Miss Helen Duncan, Decatur, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers; J. W. Ramsey, Rockford, grand lodge representative of the International Association of Machinists; Walter James, Springfield, secretary-treasurer, Illinois district, United Mine Workers, and Fullerton Fulton, CIO regional director, Chicago. Miss Duncan represents the largest women's labor union in the state.

Every Illinois employer seeking relaxation of the laws for employés [men as well as women] must apply to the board. They may ask such consideration only in the cases of skilled workers. The problems are studied by trained inspectors. When the department of labor first had such requests, it was necessary to install an extra staff member to assist in this angle of defense production. Since Pearl Harbor the task has become a fulltime job for 15 people, and Miss Michael says she could find plenty for 15 more to do. All relaxation grants are made in cooperation with the federal government.

The relaxations depend upon a set of eight rules which include such items as being engaged in direct war production; proof that there is a shortage of workers and proof of need for speed in output.

The employer must agree that all overtime work will be on a voluntary basis; that workers not wishing to stay overtime will not be penalized or discharged.

The employer must show that a shortage of labor exists; that it has not been artificially created by discrimination because of age, sex, color, religion, union affiliation or activity, or by an abnormally low wage scale. The board is particularly interested in demanding equal wages for women for equal work.

Generally, women on the job are women in war work now. In a report of employment of women in Illinois industry, the labor director says, "All the Illinois women now backing up the nation's fighting men in the battle for victory aren't in the WAAC, the WAVES, or passing sandwiches and coffee over USO counters."

Proof of the part women are already taking in industry lies in the figures for the first seven months of 1942. The United States employment service alone placed more than [illegible],000 women a month in war jobs. Mr. Murphy says "This is an increase of nearly 1,000 a month over last year and does not include women hired thru private agencies and hired direct by the employer." These figures are for Illinois alone.

It is anticipated that half a million women will be employed in Illinois shops and factories next year. The labor director describes the jobs they'll do as including winding coils and assembling delicate electrical instruments, welding, running drill and punch presses and other jobs formerly done by men.

He says that two serious problems have come from the increased employment of women—pay scales and health. His announcement states: "Equal pay for equal work, regardless of sex, age, or color, is the only practical solution for maintaining Illinois labor standards after victory has been won. If employers can hire women for 50 cents an hour on jobs that would pay men 85 cents, there will be an inevitable tendency to discriminate against men after the emergency has passed.

"Paying women workers fair wages for the work they perform means more than observing traditional American standards of fair play. It means that husbands, fathers, sons, and sweethearts can return to the jobs they left to fight for freedom in the far corners of the earth."

Of the second problem, health and safety, Mr. Murphy says that the health and safety of the mothers of tomorrow's citizens must be maintained thru the emergency. He insists that sanitary regulations be observed, as well as the careful and constant observance of all safety regulations.

Circus Benefit Poses Question of Formal Wear

By Judith Cass.

The question of what to wear to the circus is not particularly disturbing as a rule. But when the opening night of the circus is taken over for one of the largest most fashionable benefits of the season, many with box or reserved seat holders might well ponder the choice of costume for the evening.

The occasion under discussion is the opening of the Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey circus tomorrow night at Soldiers' Field. Sponsored by the Woman's Aid society of the Passavant hospital, it is the successor to such distinctly white-tie occasions as a concert conducted by Arturo Toscanini, a performance of the much discussed opera "Salome," or other formal entertainment which the society has chosen in the past to raise funds for the hospital. The question of wearing formal gowns to the benefit tomorrow night was settled definitely by one member of the committee who exclaimed: "I wouldn't think of dressing to go to the circus," and by "dressing" she meant wearing evening clothes. Mrs. Walter R. Kirk, president of the society, and a dinner hostess preceding the circus, plans to wear a street length print dress, if the night is not too chilly. Many who have taken tickets for the circus will go to a circus dinner at the Casino club, where dinner will be served at special wartime prices. That party is to be informal.

Mrs. Henry Isham is entertaining at the Blackstone tomorrow night for Miss Anne Porter, who is chairman of the young women who will be selling programs at the circus. There will be between 80 and 100 of these program girls, including all the debutantes of the season and several others as well. Their ranks will be augmented by seven young easterners, Farmington classmates of Debutante Jane Leonard, who made her debut at a supper-dance last night at the Saddle and Cycle club. They are Miss Polly Bragg and Miss Marjorie Richmond of New York; Miss Peggy Christian of Scranton, Pa.; Miss Edith Howe of Waterford, Conn.; Miss Nancy Landon of Hartford, Conn.; Miss Beatrice Seabury of Beverly Farms, Mass., and Miss Emily Dorrance of Philadelphia.

John Charles Thomas and Marion Claire are to sing during the grand parade that will open the circus tomorrow night. Some of those who have taken boxes for the event are the Joseph T. Ryersons, the Fowler McCormicks, the William H. Mitchells, Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks, the Howard W. Fentons, the John F. Jelkes, the Charles H. Swifts, Russell Tyson, Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood, the Lester Armours, the Frederick D. Corleys, and Mrs. Emmons Blaine.

The garden department of the Winnetka Woman's club is holding its annual flower show from 2 until 9 o'clock on Tuesday at the club. The public is invited to the show, of which Mrs. Walter Sethness is chairman. Mrs. Lyle Harper is chairman of the department.

Simplicity and economy are being stressed in this year's show. How to make dinner tables attractive looking thru use of colors rather than with expensive accessorie, will be illustrated in one part of the exhibit. Another section will be turned over to flower arrangements made with a tapestry background and inspired by textiles. The children have been asked to make patriotic flower arrangements, and there will be a class for women.

Mrs. Harry Smyth and Mrs. George Martin are in charge of entries and Mrs. Montague Ferry is chairman of judges. The children's entries will be supervised by Mrs. John Belcher and Mrs. Roy Piehl. Others on the committee are Mrs. David Kennicott, Mrs. Clement Springer, Mrs. J. Willard Jackson and Mrs. Dean Hole.

Younger Set Honored at Lake Geneva

By Rose Cour.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.

The Lake Geneva Yacht club trophy ball—always the biggest social event at the Big Foot Country club—was held yesterday, and the season is drawing to a close. Among the yachtsmen who were laden with silver cups were Jack Vilas Jr., A. Frederick Gartz Jr., Henry N. Gifford, Bruce P. Adams, George Kiefer, William C. Grunow Jr., Betty Lou Schultz, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Louis W. Schultz, and Barbara Wakeley, who carried off both the Martin A. Ryerson and the John J. Mitchell memorial trophies.

This is the one dinner-dance of the season at which youngsters are honored guests. One great long table is devoted to members of the cub fleet and the graduating class of the sailing school. Among the proud diploma winners this year are Barbara Whiting, daughter of Col. Lawrence H. Whiting; Josephine Harris, daughter of the Norman W. Harrises; Suzanne Spencer and her older brother, William M. Spencer Jr.; Charles Wegener II., Joan Ferris, the Rettig sisters, June, Corinne, and Patricia, daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Rettig; Bruce and Jane Ann Johnson, Jody Pollock, Tom Bartle, Patricia Wade, Ronald Adams, Billy Grunow, Bertie Whitaker, daughter of the Robert B. Whitakers; Peggy Ann Little, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Bird Little, Tenney Wright of Van Nuys, Cal., and his cousin, Catherine Havey of Chicago; Jack Galagher, Kay Culhane, Tommy and Don Kincaid, Donald Jensen, and Stephen Arnold.

The yacht club has a still younger group in what might be termed its prep school, as all youngsters must be expert swimmers before they are permitted to attend the sailing school. And while the saying that children at Lake Geneva can swim before they can walk is a slight exaggeration, Herbert Taylor, the yacht club's instructor, admits he takes them almost from the cradle.

Among his prize winning swimming pupils this year in both the younger and older junior groups were Mrs. Elsa B. Chapin's daughters, Claire, Marietta, and Elsa; their cousins, the Reese children, Sybil, Ernst, Alma, and Mansfield Templeton; Mrs. William H. Emery's granddaughters, Marjorie and Marianne Hanson; William O. Hunt Jr. and his brother, Peterkin, and the two small sons of the consul general of the Netherlands, Jan I. Noest and Mrs. Noest, Jan Jr. and William. The Noests leased Mrs. George Ball's cottage, near Ceylon Court, for the season.

Most members of the Chicago colony at the lake have been unaware that one of the earlier residents at the lake came back this year to spend a quiet summer in their midst. He is Henry C. Lytton, the "dean of State street," as he is affectionately termed, now in his 96th year. He and Mrs. Lytton rented Maple Lawn, summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Porter Isham.

MARRIED AUG. 28.

Mrs. Watson Ellis is the former Miss Jean Catherine Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley C. Burns of Vernon avenue. She and the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Ellis of Calumet avenue were married on Aug. 28 in the home of the bride's parents, with a reception following.

G.O.P. Women of Illinois to Meet Sept. 28

Enclosed within an attractive red and silver cover, the official call for the first biennial convention of the Federation of Illinois Women's Republican Clubs has gone out to presidents of the 101 member clubs in the federation. The large independent organization lists more than 25,000 paid members, many of whom are planning to attend the two day session on Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 28 and 29 at the Abraham Lincoln hotel, Springfield, Ill. Each of the affiliate clubs will send its quota of delegates, and all interested Republican women are invited to attend as visitors.

The convention represents the federation's first united contribution toward the Nov. 3 election. During the two day session officers and chairmen of standing committees will make their reports; proposed changes in the constitution and by-laws will be considered, and officers will be elected for the coming two years.

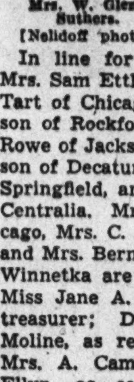
The nominating committee elected by the federation's advisory board already has completed the slate to be submitted at the convention, altho nominations will be accepted from the floor. Mrs. W. Glenn Suthers, who has presided over the federation for the past term, heads the proposed slate.



Mrs. W. Glenn Suthers.
[Nelidoff photo.]

In line for vice presidencies are Mrs. Sam Ettleson and Mrs. Beatrice Tart of Chicago, Mrs. Beatrice Davison of Rockford, Mrs. Richard Yates Rowe of Jacksonville, Mrs. Leon Monson of Decatur, Mrs. Oscar Becker of Springfield, and Mrs. F. C. Baker of Centralia. Mrs. Bertha Baur of Chicago, Mrs. C. L. Silvis of Springfield, and Mrs. Bernice T. Van der Vries of Winnetka are proposed as directors; Miss Jane A. Magan of Chicago, as treasurer; Dr. Hada Carlson of Moline, as recording secretary, and Mrs. A. Cameron Duncan of Glen Ellyn, as corresponding secretary. Mrs. Eleanor C. Bainum serves as chairman of the nominating committee.

Touching off the congress will be a preconvention session of the executive board at 10:30 o'clock on the 28th and a 2 o'clock meeting of the advisory board, composed of officers, chairmen, and presidents of clubs.

Delegates and guests at the dinner at 6:30 o'clock that night will hear speeches by C. Wayland Brooks, United States senator from Illinois, and by Mrs. Charles W. Weis Jr., president of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs. A second highlight of the convention will be Tuesday's luncheon, with Gov. Dwight H. Green and Miss Marion E. Martin, executive director of the national federation, as guest speakers. Candidates for congress will be the especial guests at the former gathering, and candidates for state offices and for the general assembly, at the latter.

The actual convention business, including reports and elections, will be transacted at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. That afternoon the advisory board will hold a postconvention session at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. Becker and Mrs. Harry Rahn are in charge of convention arrangements, and Mrs. Everett Dirksen, of the program.

Mrs. Suthers has a second important event on her calendar, for she hopes to represent the Illinois federation at an advisory board meeting of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs on Sept. 21 and 22 in Denver, Colo. The board meeting takes the place of the national federation's biennial convention, which has been postponed as a wartime measure to curtail travel. Expected at the Denver meeting are 31 national leaders, headed by Mrs. Weis.

In speaking of the Illinois election, Mrs. Suthers states: "The women of Illinois will go to the polls on Nov. 3, and an overwhelming number will vote for C. Wayland Brooks for United States senator because they believe in him. They know him to be a man of his word, an American whose patriotism could never be successfully challenged, a man who will fight to the last breath for the American people and their right to a free government."

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Sept. 4, 1894.

Dear Julia: As Will and I drove thru Lincoln park yesterday we saw an arresting sight. It was Labor day and the working men of Chicago were out in full force, 5,000 marching to the music of more or less tuneful bands. Crowds greeted them in the downtown section of the city, and at the Lincoln statue in the park, where the reviewing stand had been set up, there were more crowds. We stopped to watch a few minutes, particularly enjoying their evolutions as they circled the monument, and applauding the blacksmith's union, which we later found was voted a prize for being the best uniformed in the line of march. They had chosen a bright red shirt, on which was sewed a horseshoe, with points turned up; a blacksmith's apron, and a neat cap. They carried banners, which I always like to see. One of these read: "The anvil's ring to us is sweetest music." Another vowed: "Our country shall be first, our union next."

Elijah P. Lovejoy.

A float followed this division, on which stood a blacksmith's shop with men shoeing a real horse, drawing the iron from a real fire and bending it into the right shape. It was very realistic.

The blacksmith who shoes our team was walking in the parade and waved his hand at our coachman. By the way, we have a new man, as our old one left us to take a more lucrative post in a Prairie avenue household. I felt rather glad when he went, for he was always so gloomy. The new coachman is Scotch, conscientious and faithful, according to the recommendations he brings. His name is Thomas, or 'Tammas," as the uncle who accompanied him, to apply for the position, calls him. I hope he will stay with us as long as we live, for I don't like changes.

One of the sturdy marchers left the parade and, walking over to the reviewing stand, presented Mayor Hopkins with a horseshow and wishes for his good luck.

The shoemakers' union carried sticks, each surmounted by a shoe, so their was no mistaking their calling. The barbers held a small striped pole to signify their trade. And there were carriages containing women from women's unions. Did you know they had organized?

It seemed good to see them, taking pride in their calling and working for their own betterment and that of their fellows. Will says I'm too optimistic about the movement. "They will be the prey of men, who, for their own profit, will direct it into wrong channels," he says. But he admits that it is a growing movement and that the employers have themselves to thank for it. "Low wages and lack of understanding of the workers' problems," he says, have swept the laboring classes into the unions. It must be grievous to them to see their employers living in luxury, but unwilling to give proper wages.

We hear sad news from Minnesota where forest fires have taken many lives. Hinckley, Minn., is the center of the disaster, with 354 reported dead there. A story is told of a heroic little 12 year old girl named Frieda Johnson, who, at the risk of her own life, saved her baby brother, aged 2. The little boy had been left behind when the family ran to a neighboring pond to escape the flames. In the confusion no one noticed he was not with them, but when it was discovered little Frieda turned back, found Baby Joe and hastened after the others.

Stumbling and falling several times, she got him into the water just before the flames reached them. She is the heroine of Minnesota today.

And now, I must close. Ever lovingly,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

The Drums of Morning.

If, like the editor of this column, you grew up in a town that still cherished memories of the Underground Railway, you will not rest till you read "The Drums of Morning" by Philip Van Doren Stern, a tale that begins wit hthe death of Elijah P. Lovejoy at Alton and ends with the close of the Civil war. Those who wept over the sorrows of the south in "Gone with the Wind" should read this novel.

This Is Our Birthday.

The "When Chicago Was Young" column celebrates its 13th birthday this week, having begun its career Sept. 15, 1929. Has any reader kept the entire story?

Elizabeth J. Blocki Weds Edward Albert Lord Ide

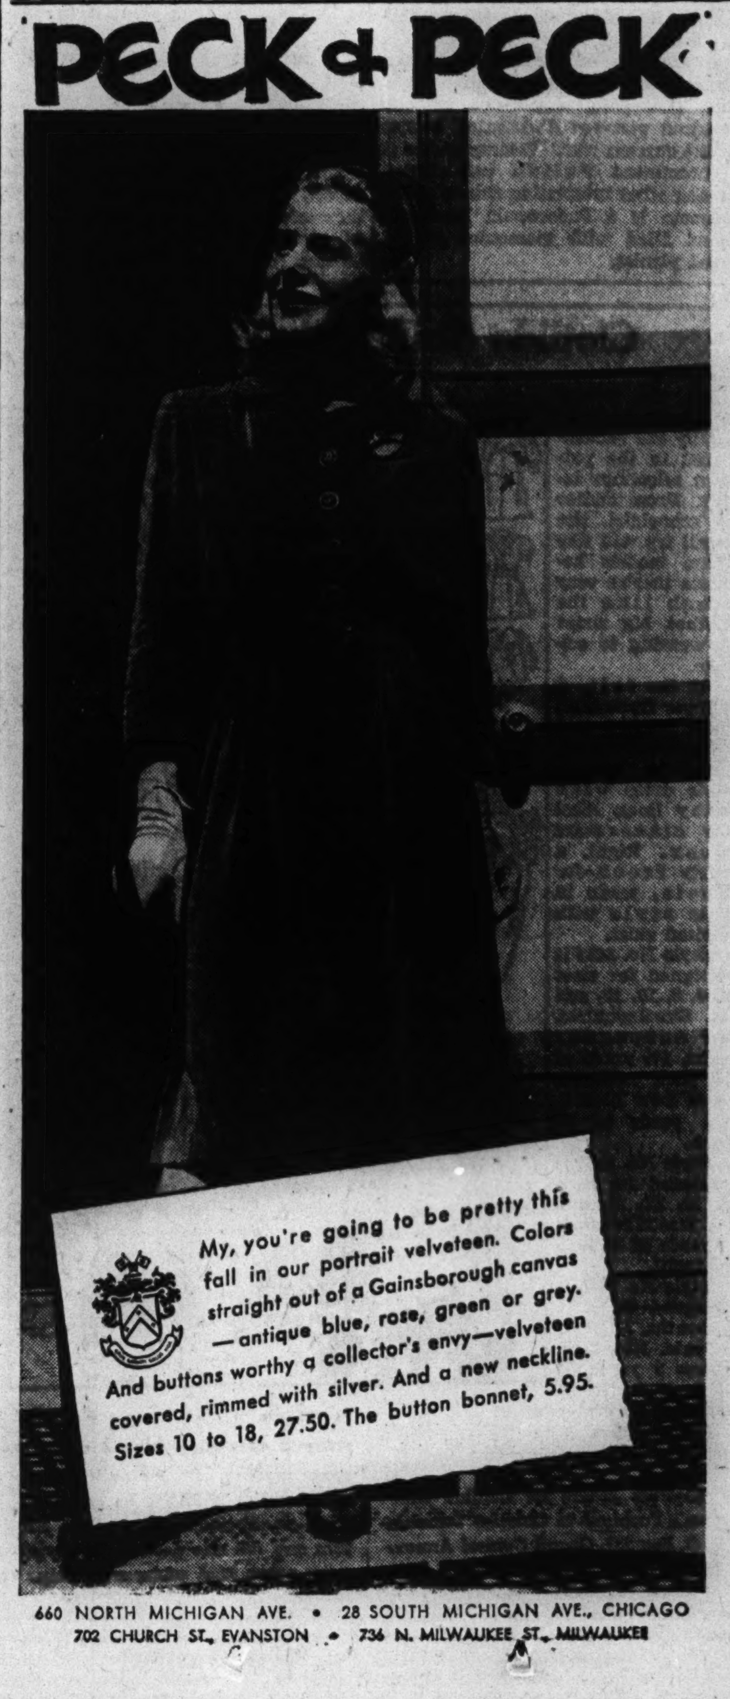
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Blocki of 8135 Stewart avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Jane, to Edward Albert Lord Ide of Washington, D. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lord Ide of Hermitage avenue. The wedding took place on Sept. 5 in the Thorndike Hilton Memorial chapel of the University of Chicago. The bride is a graduate of the University of Chicago college. Mr. Ide, who received his degree from the University of Chicago, will take his bride to Washington to live.

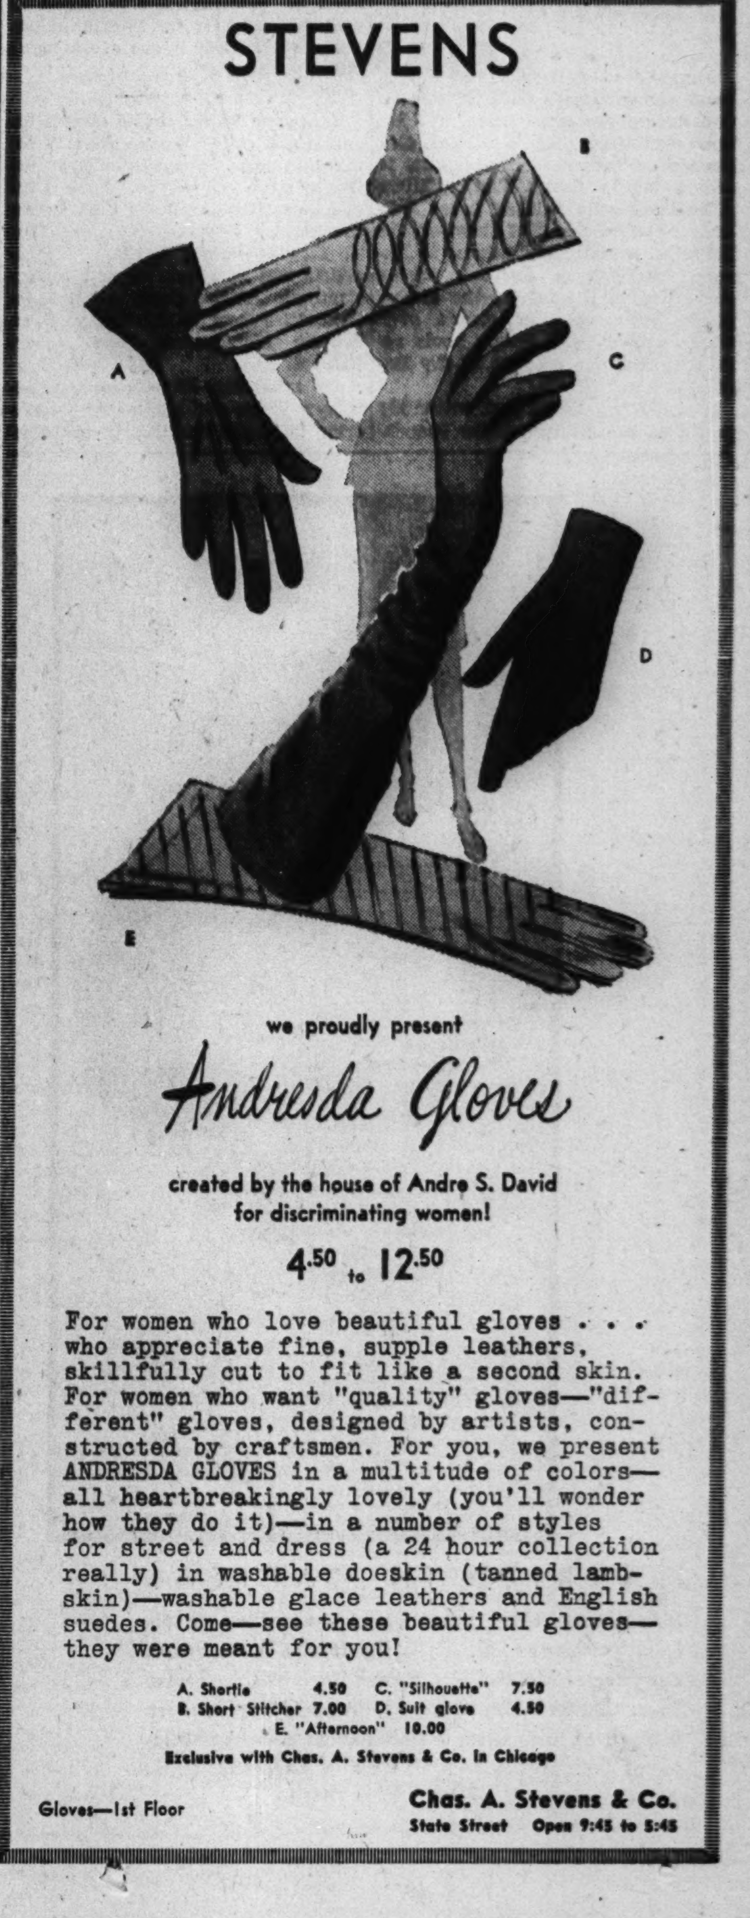
Announce Engagement of Norma Jordan at Party

At a party recently in their home in Oak Park, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Jordan announced the engagement of their daughter, Norma, to Winslow Homer Benson, son of Mrs. Winslow H. Benson, also of Oak Park. Miss Jordan was graduated last June from Northwestern university. Her fiancé recently returned from Trinidad, British West Indies, where he was affiliated with the war department.

Attic Cleanliness

Attic cleanliness is now one of the homemaker's important duties. Fire spreads more rapidly when rubbish is there to feed it.





Noted Artist Remembered in New Book

By Eleanor Jewett.

Illustrated with reproductions of several of his portraits and a glimpse of his studio, Ralph Clarkson is remembered this fall with a Tribute, a booklet privately printed in Hinsdale. Mr. Clarkson was one of the three great artists Chicago had in the beginning of this century; Lorado Taft, sculptor, and Oliver Dennett Grover, landscape painter, being the other two. Among them they did great things both here and at the attractive artists' colony, Eagle's Nest camp, which they founded at Oregon, Ill.

The little booklet is an honest summing up of Mr. Clarkson's career, but it does not dwell sufficiently upon his chief characteristics as a person, his charm, his humor, his wit, and his keen intelligence. Those of us who have heard him speak know the laughter that lay behind the words he used. His tongue had a double edge and he could administer a sounding rebuke with the cooing lilt of a turtle dove. He had little use for the more juvenile practices of the modernists and he collected a choice series of stories which, when run off by his facile tongue, turned any day into a Fourth of July; the crackers he exploded all being at the expense of those buffoons of art whose reputations, blown to huge proportions, sank at the prick of his tongue to sizes more fitted to the significance of their work.

Ralph Clarkson had a keen sense of humor and was one of the best story tellers Chicago has ever had. He was kind, generous, and appreciative. His painting was academic in essence, straightforward, honest, and fine. His portraits are the kind whose charm age will not dim. The people whom he painted live. He was particularly successful with the eyes, expression, and the personality of the sitter. Hands with him were invariably successful. Louis Betts, another famous American portrait painter, was the man who said one could judge the skill of a portrait painter by the hands of the portrait. On that score Mr. Clarkson has nothing to fear.

Those who knew Mr. Clarkson will perhaps remember best the warmth of his character, his immediate interest in those about him, his wide and kindly outlook on life. He knew a great deal about birds and trees and flowers. He traveled extensively and was a welcome visitor in many parts of the world. He and Mrs. Clarkson were two of the finest people to whom the word "friend" could be given. A few words at the end of the Tribute are so richly true we cannot forgo quoting them:

"A hush lies over the studio on broad Michigan avenue—the palette and brush shall no more feel the skilled hands of the master—but without, in the hearts and minds of friends and associates, there shall live the memory of a friend departed whose noble character and generous soul have left an unforgettable imprint."

Mrs. Alfred Juergens, whose husband was as famous as Mr. Clarkson, and during the same years, but for flower paintings, figure studies, and landscapes rather than portraits, is now living in Grand Rapids, Mich. Alfred Juergens painted many brilliant pictures, many of them of the Michigan countryside, others in Europe, particularly Holland, where something in the feel of the atmosphere, the sweep of clouds over water veined land, sleepy pools reflecting the blue or gray of sky fascinated him.

Alfred Juergens painted water lily ponds as beautifully as the Frenchman, Monet. His work holds its charm and beauty, altho Mr. Juergens [as Mr. Clarkson, Mr. Taft, and Mr. Grover] is one of that great company which has gone ahead. Mrs. Juergens has established herself at the Grayling kennels, Walker road, Grand Rapids, and between raising and showing dogs and finding time to exhibit Mr. Juergens' paintings has her hands more than full.

A word from Florence White Williams, Chicago landscape painter, says that an exhibit of her recent work is hanging at the Dune Acres club house, Dune Acres, Ind. A number of the paintings are of the dunes, pictures made while the artist was on the usual busman's holiday that most painters take. They swear never to touch a brush while on vacation and the seiond day away from home are as busy with paints and palette as the indefatigable and much quoted ant.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kilbert are at Treasure Hill, Bridgeman, Mich., again this summer. Mr. Kilbert paints notable landscapes, sometimes introducing figures or an animal, such as the well remembered little donkey in an intriguing canvas of his a year or so back.

• • •

An exhibition of paintings by Lorene Riedy is on view at the Little gallery, Esquire theater. It is Miss Riedy's second exhibit in this gallery. Delightful as her paintings are, the artist's talents are not confined to painting; she is noted as well for her flair for interior decorating. Miss Riedy is one of Chicago's gifted younger artists.

• • •

Katharine Lord's studio classes for adults and children open Sept. 21 for the 13th year. The studio is at 614 Davis street, Evanston. Mrs. Lord will be assisted by Betty Hall, Calvin Albert, Mrs. Robert Rainey, and Mrs. T. Dow Sanders. Various visiting artists will give lectures and demonstrations. Among them are Malcolm Hackett, Peggy Beck, Briggs Dyer, Eugene Montgomery, and Robert Rainey.

An exhibition of paintings, sculpture, designs, and ceramics by Katharine Lord and her faculty and demonstrating artists opened last Sunday at the studio. It will remain on view thru Sept. 30.

• • •

The Tea Room gallery, Mandel Brothers, is showing 11 oil studies by James Eccles. Mr. Eccles is a bank teller who gives all of his free time to art and in consequence comes close to professional standing. One remembers from earlier shows his fine studies of buildings at the University of Chicago, the old Field museum, and other architectural compositions of interest. He has a nice hand with trees and altogether turns out likable and worth while work. His exhibit will be on view to Oct. 1.

The third exhibition in the Room of Chicago Art, Art institute, opened Sept. 10 to continue three weeks. Paintings by Joseph Vavac and Raymond Breinin make up the show.

Baroness Rose d'Ternova is exhibiting 33 water colors in the galleries of the Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers. The paintings are largely still life studies of flowers and fruits, altho several interesting animal studies have been included. The artist studied under a number of French painters. Baron d'Ternova is a Hungarian nobleman who fled to Paris. When Paris fell to the Nazis he joined the Free French forces and his wife came to this country to be with her mother. Baron d'Ternova has not been heard from since he left Paris.

This exhibit is the first exhibition of Baroness d'Ternova in the middle west. She has had a one man show in New York, which was extremely successful. Her painting is marked by a warmth and softness of color that is pleasing and the freshness of her brushwork is engaging. The exhibit will be on view thru Sept. 15.

An exhibit of war drawings by Lieut. M. Walentynowicz of the Polish army is on view at the Archives and Museum of the Polish Roman Catholic Union, 984 Milwaukee avenue. The exhibit numbers about one hundred pictures illustrating scenes in the current war. Walentynowicz is a prominent Polish caricaturist. Among other interesting things at the museum is a Paderewski Memorial room, filled with momentos of the great pianist.

Winnifred Pleimling is one of Chicago's best known woman painters. She is noted for her portraits and still life. This stunning portrait of Sister Beata, superintendent of the St. Francis Training School for Nurses at La Crosse, Wis. (where the painting now hangs), was first exhibited at the Morrison hotel during the recent nurses' convention in Chicago.

MARRIED IN CAPITAL

Mrs. William Alden Prescott, who was married recently in Washington, D. C., is the former Betty Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Davis Ward of Glen Ellyn. At their opening meeting at 8 o'clock on Tuesday, the American Daughters of Sweden will hear a talk by Judge William J. Campbell, judge of the District court of the United States, northern district of Illinois, and former state administrator for the National Youth administration. Because September is the Constitution month, the timely subject chosen is "The Price of Freedom." Mrs. George E. Q. Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1942: By Ely Culbertson.]

Most bridge players seem to hold the notion that penalty doubles are unilateral actions—that when one partner doubles, the other should close his eyes, ears, mind, and mouth and meekly "follow orders." Nothing could be farther from the truth. Penalty doubles require more, not less, "coöperation" than other calls. A. Moyse, Jr., writing in the Bridge World magazine, stresses this point in the following fashion:

"For every opportunity we get to double the opponents with five or six of their trumps, we have 30 or 40 opportunities to double with three of their trumps. Concomitantly, when we have only three, our partner will also have two or three in a large proportion of cases, and it is then that we can really go to town. Consider this case:

East dealer.
North-South vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♠	2♥	Double [!!]	Pass
Pass	Pass

"West's double was just as vociferous as the two exclamations points indicate, which perhaps influenced East [unethically] to cease bidding. Presumably, West expected to win the duplicate on this one deal. He didn't!

"The spade nine was opened; East won and unhappily searched his hand for a favorable return. Patently, it would be a good idea to remove dummy's trumps, thereby to prevent spade-ruffing, but East was not in the best circumstance to perform that feat. Well, West would be better equipped for the job; all East had to do was put him on lead. An excellent idea, but very, very difficult of execution! East chose a low diamond. Declarer won and cagily returned the spade ten, insuring that East, not West, would win the trick. East now shifted to a low club, but with no better luck. Declarer ruffed and led a spade. Now West was in a pretty pickle. If he threw off a club or a diamond, dummy would ruff, declarer would return to his own hand with the diamond king, and another spade lead would put the contract on ice. West's actual defense, however, was no more effective. He ruffed the third spade with the jack and returned a low trump. [Dummy had discarded a diamond]. Now declarer cashed the diamond king and ruffed his last diamond with the heart eight. After that a spade trick had to be conceded to East and the trump king to West, but the final reckoning showed that eight tricks were neatly pointing in South's direction.

"The 740 points accruing to North-South were not the only flies in the East-West ointment. There was also the little matter of a laydown game, East-West, in spades or no trump. Nothing was said about the fact that an opening trump lead on West's part would have derailed the two heart contract, and, for that matter, nothing should have been said. Only one player in a million would open a trump from West's holding; the others would confidently wait for a trump lead from partner, thru the declarer.

"In my view, any discussion of the proper lead from West's holding is irrelevant in view of the larger point involved. That point is East's leave-in of the double. As indicated previously, I think that even at duplicate this was indefensible. Surely, West had a magnificent double of two hearts, yet the defense was unmanageable because East could never lead a trump."

An article by Mr. Culbertson appears in the feature section of The Tribune each weekday.

Hearts are trump and South leads. North-South are to win six tricks against any defense.

Solution: South leads the spade ace, then the spade four. North ruffs and returns the diamond seven. East covers and South ruffs. South then leads a small club. This lets North put West in with a diamond, and gives South a discard of the spade jack.

Season at Cape Cod Closing on Note of Gayety

CAPE COD, MASS.

Dominated by programs in the interest of members of the armed forces and to aid worthy war causes, the 1942 season practically came to a close Labor day after a holiday week-end which saw the vacationists forgetting for the moment the seriousness of the times. Every one joined together in an effort to make the occasion one of gayety.

The influx of visitors over the three days was unsurpassed at any other time of the summer. Trains and buses were taxed to capacity and many eastern residents, restricted in their use of gasoline saved their coupons to drive to the peninsula, resulting in heavy automobile traffic, too.

Highlighting activities were end-of-the-season yacht races and tournaments, special dances at both the Oyster Harbors and Wianno clubs and added attractions at all the dine and dance establishments.

The Wianno club on the Saturday of Labor day week-end was the scene of a gala "Cape Cod party" to which guests wore all sorts of attire typical of old or modern Cape Cod. Walter R. Fuller came over from Osterville and sparked the dancing with old fashioned square dance calling.

Young folk and the adults alike tried the routine, many of them for the first time. It all proved good fun, making up in a large measure for the elaborateness of the costume ball which it has been the custom of the club management to hold in previous years, but canceled this summer in deference to the war.

Chicagoans at the gala dance included the James H. Tatman family, Mr. Tatman trying the square dance routine with his daughter, Ariel, who earlier in the day was presented with three yachting trophies. The pretty, vivacious Chicagoan was the winner of the Tuesday and Thursday series of races and also received the coveted commodore's cup, which is presented to the owner of the boat which wins the greatest number of points in the summer-long competition. Prizes were presented by John W. Hornor, acting commodore of the Wianno Yacht club, after a special long distance race.

Ariel danced in a becoming broomstick skirt and sheer blouse, typical of modern Cape Cod, and Mr. Tatman showed up in the garb of a sailor. Mrs. Tatman who has been chairman of the club's house committee and who was instrumental in planning the Cape Cod party this year, will remain at Wianno with her daughter thru the month. Mr. Tatman and his son returned to Chicago after the holiday festivities.

At one of the larger parties given recently in the club dining room, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Langenberg of St. Louis were hosts to a group which included the Edward C. Crossetts and Mrs. Warren C. Fairbank of Chicago.

The annual meeting of the Wianno club's board of governors was held yesterday afternoon with Mr. Crossett presiding. The management has announced that it will remain open for reservations thru Sept. 17.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Doherty of Chicago at their summer place in West Dennis have been Mrs. William Low and two children from Braintree, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brooks and son of Chicago. Down in Chatham, late season vacationists have included Dr. Howard Margerison, former dean of the University of Chicago dental school, and Mrs. Margerison, who were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. George Temple.

Yearly meeting of the parish of St. Andrew's-by-the-Sea, Episcopal church open at Hyannisport during the summer, was highlighted by the report of Secor Cunningham of Chicago on a proposed memorial to the Rev. Zebarney T. Philips, director for many years, who died a few months ago. Tribute suggested for the former rector, who also served as rector of the Church of the Epiphany in Washington and as chaplain of the senate, is the transformation of the church's south door, which faces the sea, into a memorial window.

Walter Fuller of Osterville made a second appearance as a square dance caller during Labor day week-end by lending his assistance to a gay party held in the main ballroom of the Oyster Harbors club Labor day night. Novelty dances were the order of the evening and refreshments served were in keeping with the affair.

The Labor day week-end marked the beginning of the fall season at Oyster Harbors where the Oyster Harbors club will remain open until October 1, and the many reservations testify to the benefits of the September sun while the resident colony plans to stay until late into autumn.

Holiday entertaining included a party given by David Dangler Jr. of Lake Forest in honor of Miss Frances Letchford of Worcester, Mass., and Philip Carney of Boston, Mass., whose engagement was announced a short time ago. Both Miss Letchford and Mr. Carney are members of the Oyster Harbors colony.

Mrs. Claude Hanway Jr. [Barbara Fulton] has left her family's home at Oyster Harbors to join her husband in Chicago. Former residents of Evanston, the Hanways had been living in Washington recently, where Mr. Hanway was serving. He now has been assigned to Chicago.

Illinois Garden Club to Meet in Wilmette

Hall, vice president of the American Iris society, will illustrate his talk on iris and lilies with colored slides. The board of directors will meet at 10:30 o'clock preceding luncheon.

Wield Paint Brush 'n Save on Furniture

By Edith Weigle.

Your own time and energy are worth money to you and will help you to be thrifty in furnishing your home.

One of the best ways we know to cut corners in expenditures on furniture is to take advantage of the interesting low prices on items that you finish, yourself. Many of these nicely styled pieces come in birch, an exceptionally sturdy wood, and are excellently made. All they need to make them look like much more expensive furniture is a finish.

They can either be painted or stained. That's where your skill and time count. You can easily do the work yourself, planning an attractive color scheme for your room first, then carrying it out in the color or colors you apply to the wood.

For a bedroom, for example, there are good looking twin beds in modern style with square, plain headboards. They'd be fun to paint, and if you're in doubt about colors remember that pure white or white with a touch of cream is always good and goes with any hues in the palette.

Or buy inexpensive maple beds already finished and then choose a tall chest and a dressing table in unfinished birch, and paint them to match one of the tones in your bedroom wallpaper. One handsome tall chest we saw recently had seven drawers, the first one being divided. It measured 36 by 16 by 49 inches, was of birch ready to be stained or painted and cost under $30. Even less in price was a smaller chest, 24 by 16 by 49.

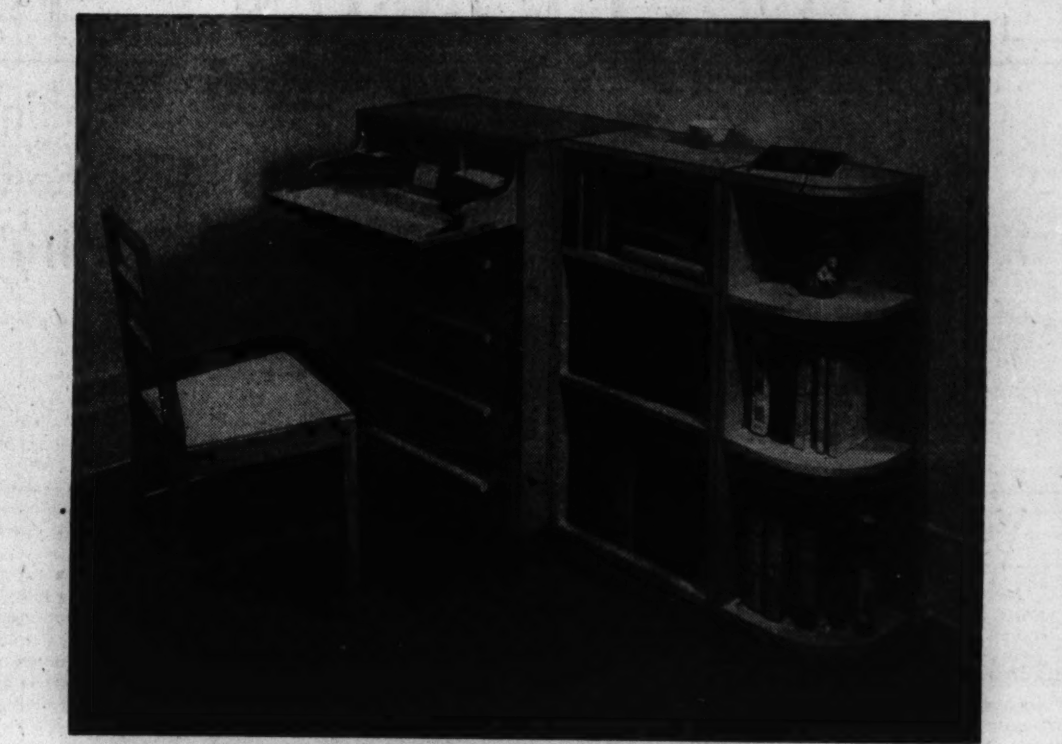
A large drop leaf table, ideal for the living room that is also a dining room, and big enough to seat 8 to 10 people is most reasonably priced. There are round coffee tables and end tables, too, as well as sectional cabinets, chests, and book shelves. And there is a handsome tea wagon of unfinished birch with a mahogany top—all thrifty buys.

How about a couch for the living room furnished in pieces that you paint, yourself? There is a Lawson type of sofa that answers this question perfectly. It's upholstered in a charming floral cretonne with a pinky beige ground [or choose it in soft blue, if you prefer], the pillows being welted in the material, and a pleated ruffle to the floor finishing it. The cushions are filled with moss and cotton.

A pair of armless, upholstered chairs to match, also with pleated ruffles, are available, as is an alternate choice in a couch, a sectional piece made up of three cushioned chairs covered in a turquoise blue textured cotton, the frames being birch. The end chairs have broad arms of the wood.

There also is a separate armchair to match this blue couch. Its seat and back cushions are spring filled, and the birch frame is of double dowel construction. If you remove the back cushion a ladder back chair, form fitting, is revealed.

In agreement with the economy of the furniture described are the new cotton rugs which look much like broadloom and come in a variety of beautiful colors, and the well styled but inexpensive pottery lamps to be found in any of our large stores.



This desk-bookcase arrangement is made up of three units of unpainted furniture. Items such as these are excellent investments for the small budget.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

STEAMERS-PLANES

A Journey on Rio Parana to Iguassu Falls

[This is the 52d article in a series on South America. The next will appear in an early issue.]

By Mason Warner.

ON THE RIO PARANA, BRAZIL.

We were warned that train, boat, and hotel accommodations on the journey from Sao Paulo to Iguassu Falls were far from comfortable, but after our travels in Bolivia and down the Madeira and Amazon rivers Mason Robert and I were prepared for any difficulties that might present themselves, so we went to Wagons-Lits-Cook's Sao Paulo office and arranged for our complicated, 12 day itinerary to Buenos Aires via Iguassu—after we had obtained the necessary police permit to leave Brazil.

We left Sao Paulo at 6 p. m. Monday in a comfortable combined sleeper and observation car for the 560 mile ride to Presidente Epitacio. We had to change trains at Assis, where we were scheduled to arrive at 9 a. m. Tuesday, but we were five hours late, so we did not transfer ourselves and six pieces of luggage to a crowded day coach until 2 p. m.

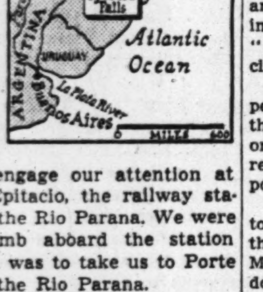
The scenery along the way was monotonous, for there were millions of coffee trees to be seen. The low price of coffee had discouraged growing and on many plantations the trees were being taken off and supplanted by banana trees.

The dining car had been detached from the train at 6 p. m. without notice. We arrived at Presidente Epitacio at 11 p. m. instead of 6, quite hungry, but with no recourse because every local eating place was closed. There was nothing to engage our attention at Presidente Epitacio, the railway station nearest the Rio Parana. We were glad to climb aboard the station wagon which was to take us to Porte Tibirica, on the Rio Parana.



The river boat Tibirica had delayed her departure to await the train. We went aboard with no dinner and were assigned to a tiny cabin.

The Tibirica is a typical upper river boat, about 65 feet long, 30 foot beam, and drawing about 18 inches—a saucer for draft if ever there was a boat of that description.

The boat is propelled by a stern paddle wheel and down stream is capable of eight miles an hour. The meals were satisfactory.

We viewed a quiet and serene panorama while steaming down the headwaters of the Parana, which is quite a river, 2,450 miles long—one of the world's greatest.

There are two decks on the Tibirica with eight staterooms on the upper deck for first class passengers. Only half of these were occupied. The lower deck is given over to the woodburning engines and crew's quarters. Thus we had a restricted but good vantage point from which to view the passing scene.

I saw the same low lying banks, the same wide and curving sweeps, the same sky, and the same moon that we saw on the Amazon, but this was only for distances of 20 to 30 miles at a time. Soon after leaving Porte Tibirica we were passing thru mountain gorge channels, 300 feet and more deep, edged with high rocks thrust up and dotting the river banks sometimes 400 feet high.

Most of these South American rivers—including the Amazon, the Madeira, and the Parana—flowing thru low lying countries, resemble chains of lakes rather than rivers. The amount of fresh waters in South America is amazing; its rivers seem to have more than is in the Great Lakes of North America.

The distance from Presidente Epitacio to Guayra, the port for Sete Quedas, is 272 miles and it lies thru an almost uninhabited country. The Parana separates the well settled state of Sao Paulo from the jungles of the state of Matto Grosso, the district sought by big game hunters looking for the skins of jaguars, huge pythons, and other animals for den ornaments.

We saw only five houses on the bank the first day out. The river was two to three miles wide and dotted with many islands when not confined to a deep gorge. The jungle on one side was dense but clean and not cluttered up with twisting, climbing, creeping parasites growing up out of swamp muck, characteristic of river jungle the world over. Three of the five houses we passed were the habitations of wood cutters, whose occupation was the supplying of fuel for river steamers. The few white male inhabitants wore six-shooters at their belts and carried shotguns in their canoes when they came out to get mail, salt, liquor, and other supplies.

The Tibirica stopped every three or four hours for wood. Only three or four cords were taken on at each stop. It was taken on in slow, leisurely fashion, the sticks being tossed one at a time by a line of six or seven deck hands from shore to ship.

On the third morning of our river trip we awoke to discover our boat enclosed in a dense fog. One could not see 10 feet ahead. The sun tried to break thru, but with little success. As the rays pierced the gloom we could discern sand banks and rocks in midstream a few feet ahead, but the fog would quickly settle down again and hide them from view. We had only a five hour run ahead of us to reach Guayra and Sete Quedas, but we could not get under way until 11 o'clock in the morning and that indicated we would not get to view the Great Seven Cataracts until the following day.

Perhaps this is an inadequatè description of our two days' and three nights' voyage down the upper Parana. All I can add is that we were seasoned travelers and enjoyed the trip.

Only a bowl and pitcher served as bathing facilities in our 6x6 staterooms, but the food was clean, wholesome, and satisfying. I trust I shall never have a less comfortable experience.

BOUQUET FROM BAYFIELD.

Bayfield, Wis., Sept. 4.—To the Travel Editor: We want to tell you how much we enjoyed reading Chester Holway's article about the Apostle Islands in the Travel section of THE TRIBUNE on Aug. 2.

Just a few days after the story appeared, we began to get inquiries about the islands, and had numerous letters from people who have been here, calling attention to the article, and each one seemed to think that it was about the finest they had read about this locality—or any other, in fact. They all agreed that there was no attempt at exaggeration.

It happened that the writer was with Mr. Holway on this trip, and, while I have lived among these islands for 58 years, and thought that no scene had escaped my attention, I realized, after reading what Mr. Holway had to say about them, that my vision was somewhat lacking in its ability to see things as they really are.

In case he has another article in your paper about this, or any other locality, we will not want to miss it.

MIAMI PROTESTS.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 2.—To the Travel Editor: Our correspondents in the north have been forwarding us clippings from papers which indicate that the annual anti-Miami propaganda campaign is again in full swing. This year the theme is: "Miami is boiling with soldiers, and civilians are warned to stay away."

We can't remember a year—in war or peace, prosperity of depression — when the knockers did not declare open season on Miami, and yet year after year this resort has enjoyed a steady increase in popularity.

The current crop of rumors proclaims to the world: "The bayonet has replaced the bathing suit at America's Riviera. Miami business men have had their hopes doused by Uncle Sam. The city is now a military area, and vacationists fit into the picture only with difficulty."

Two weeks ago we forwarded you a picture story of Miami this summer. To prove that we were not kidding, here's what the United States department of commerce has to say in a bulletin just released: "Miami showed the largest gain in retail sales for the month of July of any city in Florida. Thirty retailers reported a 22 per cent gain over the previous month."

Inquiries received by the Miami Chamber of Commerce and the various transportation agencies that serve this area indicate that there will be plenty of people here this winter. Of course, this city has geared itself to war conditions, as have the other resorts thruout the nation. It is likely that the visitor will have to content himself with an upper berth for his trip to Miami instead of occupying a drawing room, as has been his custom in the past. While it is still too early to predict how much train service to this city will be available during the coming season, there has been no indication from the Office of Defense Transportation that there will be fewer schedules than in the past.

Only one hotel in Miami has been taken over by the military and all apartments in the city are available for civilian occupancy. Miami Beach is in a position to offer more than half of its 329 hotels, and all except 10 of its many apartment buildings to vacationists.

We realize that we are at war. We think it is a distinct compliment that the military authorities selected this area for the training of so many young men. We are doing all in our power to show those boys that we appreciate the sacrifices they are making.

There will be no heating problem here this winter. Sunshine is not on the list of commodities to be rationed. The children will not be cold in school—and, incidentally, there is no school tuition for children of out of state residents. The horses will run, the dogs will chase the mechanical rabbit, and the Latins will again be tossing the pelota around with their cestas—Jai Alai to the uninitiated. Golf, swimming, and tennis will still be major daylight pastimes and for those who like to stay up late the night clubs will offer the best in entertainment.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Travelers and other TRIBUNE readers are invited to send cards and letters to those unable to share in the wonders of travel. These requests have been received since the last previous list was published:

Robert Leach, 911 North Martin street, Danville, Ill. [Robert is about 10 years old. Our correspondent writes: "Bobby has a bad heart condition, and daily watches for the mailman to come by. We of the family send cards as often as we can, but for a boy who has to be quiet they don't take up enough time. He would not be able to answer cards or letters, but would surely enjoy them."]

Conscientious Objectors Work on Blue Ridge Road

BLOWING ROCK, N. C.—Three camps of conscientious objectors are working on the Blue Ridge parkway, maintaining and beautifying this skyline drive against the day when unrationed traffic will again flow over it. Each of the three camps has a quota of 150 men. There is no toll on this highway, now open with the exception of one link by-passed by a well maintained detour, from the Virginia line to the base of Mount Mitchell, highest peak east of the Mississippi.

Wide and Deep.

Its channel carved out eons ago by rocks and ice of the glacial period, the Saguenay river in the province of Quebec is approximately a mile wide, has depths that have never been sounded, and in many places is flanked by granite cliffs towering 1,500 feet over the water's surface.

Are You Looking for 'a Place in the Country'?

By Chester Holway.

WAUCOMA, WIS.

Hundreds—or maybe thousands—of Chicagoland citizens own summering places in Wisconsin and Michigan, all the way from typical lakeside cottages to gardened estates such as J. L. Kraft's west of Elcho. [Incidentally, the beautiful Kraft gardens are open to the public.]

But it always has been a mystery to me why more Chicagoans have not discovered or realized the opportunities that exist for a place in the country—modest or manorial—in the tier of southern Wisconsin counties that lies south of Oconomowoc, Madison, and the lower Wisconsin river.

While Green Bay is the oldest community in Wisconsin, the southern tier was actually the first to be really "built up," and it is here where you find the delightful old stone cottages and red brick houses. You can even find—if you like—Victorian bric-a-brac places.

If these old houses, in villages and on farms, were in New York state or Connecticut, I am sure they would have long ago been acquired as country places for metropolitan residents. The reason they have not, it seems to me, is simply because this portion of Wisconsin has only lately begun blowing its horn, having long ago been left behind in vigorous advertising by the newer lakeland regions to the north. It is still largely undiscovered.

Compared to the northern, this southern sector is not fabulously rich in lakes. Yet, compared with other places outside of Wisconsin, it is unusually well watered, with lakes, rivers, and running streams. There are fish in them, too.

In the main this country rolls gently, fields alternating with hardwood groves of oak and maple. But there are portions of Dane, Green, Waukesha, and Lafayette counties where the land lifts into ample hills and slips into blue shadowed valleys, providing a scenery as colorful and picturesque as anything in Wisconsin. The by-roads are good—many of smooth blacktop, others of well dragged gravel.

One of the fascinations of northern Wisconsin is its "frontier" appearance and its wildness. It is rugged, and often bold. Southern Wisconsin wears a patina of age, a settled down appearance suggestive of the older American east and, sometimes, still older England. It is not anomalous that it should suggest that country, for it was widely settled by English people. Such names as Porter, Atwood, Newman, Savage, and Gordon appear often on the rural mail boxes.

It is by no means all English, however. Swiss names are thick in Green county, and there are many Norwegian ones.

Simply as land, this region has portions as rich as any in the nation, particularly in the tobacco growing areas. In country gardens I have seen phlox and goatsbeard blooming on 6 foot stems, peonies as fat as big cabbages, and lilacs as tall as chimneys.

• • •

The old houses, many of them touching the century mark, are often of red brick, made on the spot, and have the simplicity and cleanness of style to which modern builders are returning after their Victorian and "American ugly" jags. Purchasers have found them easily adaptable to modernization for present day country living and good for another century or two.

Stone is plentiful in the hills, and there are many fine stone houses, notably in the western counties.

History of empire runs all thru this area, slipping thru the valleys and the fields of corn and tobacco and rich pasture as serenely as do the waters of the Rock, the Yahara, the Sugar, the Pecatonica, and many others that flow to the Mississippi, the Wisconsin, and the Rock of the South. Blackhawk knew this country well. On clear nights deep in the country, when neither speeding automobile nor juke-box mars the stillness, and the stars are diamonds just beyond reach, you can imagine the Indians slipping silently thru the groves and moonlit openings.

For those who want more than a beautiful old country house, a lush flower garden, quiet country, and perhaps a stable, there are fishing, golf courses not too far away, and fall-time hunting. This is fine pheasant and coon country, and there are ducks as well.

Not very many old houses wait tenantless. But they can be had, and land with them—half acre lots or whole sections—on farms or in tiny, half forgotten villages. The railways serve the region well, as do the highways. It is not a long ride from almost any location to a rail stop. Few places are more than 100 to 150 miles from Chicago.

The strip of Grant county along the Mississippi, from Potosi and British Hollow north to the Wisconsin river, is served by fast streamliners. Rock, Dane, southwestern Walworth, northeastern Green, and southwestern Jefferson counties are served by two mainline railways with high speed schedules from Chicago.

If you have a yen to own "a place in the country" where you'll be more than just a stone's throw from a trailer camp and a highway hot spot, or if you are keeping a scrapbook, as many Tribune readers do, of fine places to go to when we achieve our own special Der Tag—remember southern Wisconsin, where the hills are blue at twilight and gardens grow 6 foot phlox.

San Geronimo Fete Set for Sept. 29-30

TAOS, N. M.—Old "Tio Vivo," which lays claim to being the patriarch of merry-go-rounds in New Mexico, will once more make its endless rounds during the San Geronimo fiesta here Sept. 29 and 30.

The Taos Lions club, which now owns and runs "Tio Vivo," claims its ancestry dates back at least 114 years and that its lineage includes a long spell of having been in hock for nonpayment of a board bill by its original owners.

The fiesta is highlighted by the ceremonial dances presented by the Indians at nearby Taos pueblo. On the evening of Sept. 29 the Sunset dance is to be seen, and on the following day the antics of the Chiffonetti clan will be punctuated by a pole climbing contest.

Please give me a description of Henry Ford's Greenfield village at Dearborn, Mich.—D. J.

The 200 acres are devoted to the nation's past and its march of progress in science and industry. Greenfield is a typical village of a bygone day.

At one end of the village green is a brick colonial chapel from which tower a bell cast by Paul Revere Jr. tolls the morning hour for study time at the village school. The demand for things early American is seen in the coopery. In the apothecary shop the old time druggist theoretically sits for his portrait. Here are collections of tinctures, roots, herbs, and medicines of general use in the past.

The old Clinton inn has reproductions of the furnishings of Michigan taverns of 100 years ago. The courthouse, with many original pieces of furniture, was built in Logan county, Illinois, in 1840, and within it young Abraham Lincoln practiced law. The general store bridges the decades. The home of the Wright brothers depicts aviation's start. Built on the green are parts of the unit of Menlo Park laboratories used by Thomas A. Edison.

Isles Have Two Castes: the Old and the Young

By Quentin Pope.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND.

Among the Japanese conquests in the south Pacific are the Louisiada Islands, regarded by many who have roamed widely to be the loveliest spot on this ocean.

The Louisiades made the news when the Japanese began to establish shore bases for reconnaissance craft, extending their hold eastward from Papua preparatory to a move in a direction which remained unknown because the Coral sea battle foiled it. They are what are called "low" islands, of coral formation, many of them atolls and consisting of small palm covered isles with a friendly soil and excellent climate, and with brilliantly blue lagoons. The rover seeking a true Pacific paradise could have found nothing to better this island string.

Scattered out from the Papuan mainland like a heap of stones tossed by a casual hand, the Louisiades present possibilities to the maker of modern war. They have good harbors and safe anchorages, and their many wide and reef protected lagoons are fine for seaplanes.

Only two of the islands are notably high—Sudest and Misima—both of which yield gold. Sudest is hilly, 40 miles long, and the first place in which the rich Papuan gold deposits were detected. It was from there that Australian prospectors went to the Papuan mainland to make much larger finds. On Joannet, Sudest, Misima, and the isles of the Calvados chain good airfields could be made without much effort.

Like other places around this region the Louisiades were early aware of Japanese interest in them. It is now more than 30 years since Nipponese luggers began moving in and out of the islands, seeking [they said] wood and water. The Papuan government frowned on these expeditions and the government yacht Merrie England hunted the Japanese incessantly but the visits went on.

• • •

In the Louisiades is one of the most extraordinary social setups in the world. You may find it in the twin islets of Sim-Sim. In the land of Sim-Sim the natives are divided into the two castes—the old and the young. The old folks are shipped to run their own community on the less fertile of the two islands; the young natives stay on the better land and conduct their affairs without interference from their elders. It is said round about the group that the old folks accept their sentence with philosophic calm when the time comes for them to be banished.

One of the things which solaces them is the possession of pet cockatoos. The islets are inhabited by uncounted numbers of these girds.

Once Typical AmericanHome Now a 'Tudor'

By Rose Cour.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.

Holly Bush House, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. John Eliot Warner at Lake Geneva, has long been famed as a "Tudor" house. Many visitors seeing it during the garden tour sponsored by the Lake Geneva Garden club exclaimed over its "Tudor" aspects, some even declaring that part of the house might have been lifted entire from sixteenth century England by some geni evolved from Aladdin's lamp and transported to twentieth century Wisconsin.

All this is rather amazing in view of the fact that Holly Bush House originally was a fairly typical American country home of the 1880s, blessed with the usual expanses of open verandas peculiar to the period. If there were any pronounced English characteristics about the house at that time, definitely they were not called Tudor, as Queen Victoria, seated upon the throne of England, still wielded a mighty influence upon styles of architecture, as well as many other styles, thruout the English speaking world.

That the house was a lovely one even then is attested by the fact that its architect was Henry Lord Gay, an American artist of ability, taste, and restraint. Many of the finest old homes around the lake are his creations.

The James Van Inwagen family, Chicagoans, for whom the house was built, called the place "Negawni." Inasmuch as the location had once been the site of a Pottawattomi camping ground, it was assumed by many that Negawni was an Indian name. To this day a few natives still "opine" that Negawni was an Indian chief, cousin of Chief Big Foot, who ruled all the Pottawattomi tribes around Big Foot's lake, as Lake Geneva originally was called. Unfortunately, cold, harsh research reveals the rather unromantic fact that Negawni was neither chieftain nor picturesque Indian princess but simply the owner's name, Inwagen, spelled backward.

After the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Byllesby purchased the estate in 1908 they renamed it Arrowglade, because of the vast quantity of arrow heads and other Indian relics they found while landscaping the grounds. Photographs made at that time of the handsome brick gateway terminating the high black wrought iron fence show the name Arrowglade cut in the stone topping.

It was not until 1916 that Arrowglade was rebuilt and named Holly Bush House as a result of a visit the Byllesbys made to the original Holly Bush House, ancestral home of the Byllesby clan in Lincolnshire, England. The Lake Geneva house lent itself kindly to the metamorphosis and today it would take an expert to discover where the old house leaves off and the charming new ivy covered dark red brick house begins.

Inside, the house actually has more Elizabethan and Jacobean characteristics than the earlier English, generally termed Tudor style, which was characterized by quadrangle halls, Gothic windows, elaborate carvings, and long galleries. The great hall, which is the heart of Holly Bush House, is almost square, probably 30 by 40 feet, and its mullioned windows, made up of myriads of small square panes, are in horizontal rectangular groups, while the railing and spindles of the big open staircase, rising from the hall, altho beautifully turned, are almost austere in their plain, uncarved simplicity.

Instead of the dark oak with which undoubtedly the Lincolnshire house was paneled, birch, finished a delightfully satiny mellow light brown, was used for paneling, beamed ceiling, and staircase in the great hall of the Lake Geneva house. To add to its warmth and cheerfulness, the room is flooded with soft, glowing light from another long group of small-paned casement windows of embossed and mosaic glass on the unusually wide stair landing.

A handsome Oriental rug, in which deep rose predominates, almost covers the entire floor. This rose color is reflected in the chintz of the bay window cushions and the seat pads of an eighteenth century triple-back settee. Another triple back has seat pads of heavy rose damask and the same damask covers an old English barrel-back wing chair. It is customary in English houses to find damask and fine chintz used in the same room. For contrast with the strong English atmosphere of the room, Mrs. Warner has placed beside the wide stone fireplace a painted antique Swedish dower chest, one of the quaintest wood boxes to be found around the lake.

One group of French doors in the hall leads to the driveway, another group opens to the glazed porch, another to the music room, while still others lead to the dining room and to the library. The latter is probably the most attractive room in the house to many guests. It is down three steps from the hall, a long, cool room, lined with head-high well filled book shelves, over which are more groups of leaded small-paned windows similar to those in the hall. One whole section of the library still contains volumes devoted to the genealogy and history of both the American and English branches of the Byllesby family.

Among the improvements inaugurated by the Warners since their purchase of the house two years ago was painting the once gloomy dark red bricks of the delightful inglenook fireplace a pale beige to match the walls. The woodwork and beamed ceiling are the same gleaming bronzy birch as the hall. Another unusually large oriental covers the library floor. The soft old blue found in the rug harmonizes well with the blue, gray, and white chintz covering the big cushioned chairs and sofas. At one end of the room there are charming portraits of the Warner children—Barbara, a debutante of last year, and Silas, one of the ambitious 18 year olds spending the summer at Princeton, taking the two and three quarter years' accelerated course.

Like the library, the large screened porch, which is actually another living room, looks out upon the lake. Its bamboo furniture is cushioned with cool green leaf-patterned chintz which contrasts pleasantly with the red terra cotta tiled floor.

A stately old grandfather's clock in mahogany with marquetry panels guards the entrance from great hall to dining room. The creamy paneled walls and molded plaster ceiling are noteworthy, but undoubtedly the feature of the room and one of the most interesting in the house is the large group of windows that forms one entire side of the room and extends from floor to high ceiling. Like many of the windows in Elizabethan and Jacobean manor houses, placed in the center of one row of these leaded panes are old motives in mosaic glass—coats of arms, huntsmen, wood cutters, fox, etc., in delicate tones of green, blue, and rose.

The room contains several fine old pieces from the Chicago home of Mrs. Warner's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Silas J. Llewellyn. These include an antique mahogany highboy, a handsome still life in dark, rich tones by the famous American artist, William Merritt Chase, and a hand-tooled leather screen, the panels of which are decorated with the fascinating series of illustrations, the "Cries of London." Another item in the room that catches the eye, especially of the collector, is the collection of early American glass in one of the twin cabinets flanking the fireplace. Collecting glass and miniature tea sets is Mrs. Warner's hobby.

Holly Bush House is a year round house so the dining room is much in use altho the glazed dining porch opening from it is popular with family and guests during the summer. Looking out upon garden, woods, brook, and lake, its glass topped tables, yellow bamboo furniture, and red brick floor make a delightful room for any meal.

Mrs. Warner's own quarters are above the library and like the library have many groups of casement windows, looking toward the lake on one side and over lawn and garden on two other sides.

Blue, the most delicate of azure blues, is the predominating color in both dressing room and bedroom. The walls are covered with a paper in which white and palest pink carnations run rampant over a blue background and the same tint of blue has been used to paint woodwork and even mantelpiece. This blue is also reflected in the rug. Several of the chairs and the chaise longue are upholstered in blue while other chairs and sofas are cushioned in a pink and white candy-stripe glazed chintz. Among the old family pieces in the room are mahogany four poster beds and a handsome 18th century secretary desk. The lake view from this room is breath taking, particularly at sunset as the house is located at the extreme southeast end of the lake and the flaming western sky is reflected in the full nine mile sweep of water.

Barbara, who, like her mother, is act've in Red Cross work, was further imbued with patriotic fervor in decorating her room, which is most charming, with red, white, and blue hangings and bed covering. In striking contrast with all the young things visible in the bedroom and study alcove is an ancient worm-holed fruitwood highboy, truly a collector's piece.

One of the most attractive guest rooms has French enameled furniture in jade green with pale peach bed covers and draperies. The old ivory and soft rose Aubusson carpet in this room ' lovely.

While the Warners have owned Holly Bush House only since 1940, they have long been members of the Chicago colony at Lake Geneva, having spent many summers at the summer home of the Llewellyns, Mrs. Warner's parents, on the north shore of the lake. The Llewellyn house was the beautiful Italian style residence built originally by Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift and now owned by John J. Lynch. During the Swift régime the place was called Villa Hortensia for Mrs. Swift, who was formerly Hortense Newcomer. After the Llewellyns purchased the estate they named it Pen-Y-Bryn, which is Welsh for "crest of the hill." Mr. Llewellyn was born in Wales. Pen-Y-Bryn is also the name of the Virginia estate of Mrs. Warner's brother, Paul Llewellyn.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey.

One way to be patriotic, altho fashionable, is to use cotton for some of your autumn wardrobe items. We don't mean gingham, of course! It's corduroy, either fine or wide waled, we have in mind, and it's perfect for all winter long under your heavy coats. The design we've concocted is a two piece effect which uses the wale of the corduroy for distinction. Notice how it is used horizontally in the shoulder yoke and panel down the jacket front, and vertically elsewhere in the jacket. The fabric is used on the bias in the slim skirt.

Of course, if you want woolen or a mixture, this pattern will make up handsomely in those materials, too. Bright colors are the rule this season, so have your fill of them. Corduroy is lovely in high shades.

Style No. T-8788 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 4¼ yards of 35 inch material.

Mr. W. R. Blend
Classified Manager
Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Blend:

Our policy in advertising has always been to seek the proper type of men for training in Tool & Die Making and Machinist trades rather than great numbers. Quality first instead of quantity. The Tribune gives us both.

We have used Tribune classified consistently over many years to produce inquiries from prospective students. We have also used some advertising in other Chicago newspapers as well as a number of magazines. We employ no outside salesmen and therefore have to place greater dependence on our advertising.

Allied School is generally recognized as outstanding in its particular field of Machine Shop training, and we attribute this fact in large measure to Tribune classified advertising.

Dollar for Dollar, the Tribune produces more enrollments for our School than all other newspapers combined. The following table will give you an idea of our relative costs per enrollment over the 19 months period since the beginning of 1941, during which time approximately 44% of our total Chicago classified lineage appeared in the Chicago Tribune.

Cost per Enrollment

Tribune	100%	Paper C	121%
Paper B	175%	Paper D	304%

Our percentage of "closes" on Tribune leads is much higher than that of any other publication. In other words, we get better leads from the Tribune, and we get far more of them. In the 19 months period, we received from the Tribune approximately three times as many enrollments as from the other three newspapers combined.

Yours very truly,

Harry Lebeson
President

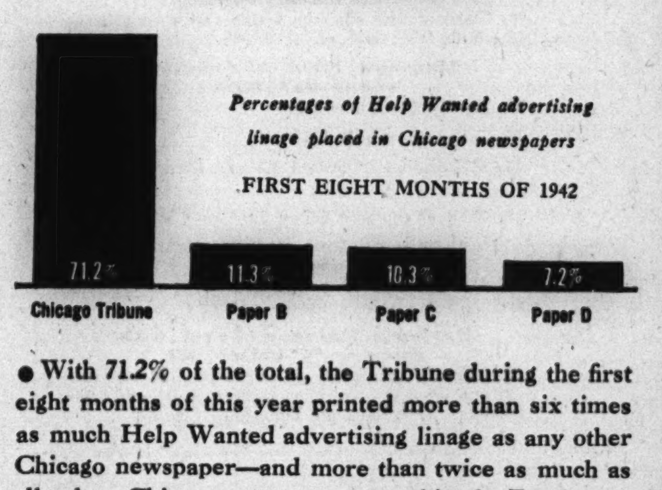
MORE THAN TWICE AS MUCH HELP WANTED ADVERTISING AS ALL OTHER CHICAGO NEWSPAPERS COMBINED!



● With 71.2% of the total, the Tribune during the first eight months of this year printed more than six times as much Help Wanted advertising linage as any other Chicago newspaper—and more than twice as much as all other Chicago newspapers combined. Employers and employment agencies increased the Tribune's lead over the next Chicago newspaper from 349% in the first eight months of 1941 to a lead of 530% during the similar period this year.

RESULTS such as described above by one of Chicago's largest trade schools explain why the Tribune carries far more Educational want advertising than any two other Chicago newspapers combined!

Make your own checks and tests! You will conclude that Tribune want ads are the most effective and the most economical want ads you can buy.

One reason for their punch is the Tribune's huge circulation which during August averaged over 1,000,000 on weekdays and in excess of 1,200,000 on Sundays. This was from 545,000 to 735,000 more total daily circulation than was delivered by other Chicago daily newspapers—and more than any two other Chicago daily newspapers combined. On Sundays the Tribune delivered from 330,000 to 850,000 more than other Chicago Sunday newspapers.

Because Tribune want ads command the largest audience and the highest reader-confidence, they are the most effective for every purpose and can be a real help to you, no matter what your problem.

Cut down delays, dissatisfaction and lost work hours by calling SUPerior 0100—Want Ad-Viser. A want ad specialist will be glad to take your want ad or to help you write it, if you wish.
